SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JULY 6, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't be surprised if, in spite of your well-made plans, something goes awry. But don't worry. Your knowledge of the facts plus your Arian charm will help you work it out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A personal relationship seems to be demanding more than you feel you're able to give. Best advice: Confront the issue. You could find the situation surprisingly easy to work through.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Resist being pressured into meeting your self-imposed deadline. This is important if you really feel that taking more time to finish a project could save time in the long run.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A vacation choice seems less interesting than when you first made it. Could it be a matter of the place or the people going with you? Find out before you consider a change of plans.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Someone might be overriding your Leonine logic to get you to agree to "favors" you would normally avoid. Take a new look at what you've been asked to do and see if you've been misled.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Try to keep that emerging "judgmental" aspect in check this week. Too many critiques on relatively unimportant issues could create a lot of negative bounce-back reactions.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Facing unpleasant facts about an associate isn't easy. But ignoring them isn't wise. Ask a trusted (and neutral) friend to help guide you on what to do and how you might do it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A shift in opinion regarding a workplace situation could go a long way in vindicating the stand you've taken. But be aware that a satisfactory resolution could still be a long way off.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It's not like you to choose the easy way rather than the right way to do things. So, follow your instincts and feel assured they will lead you to the right decision. Good luck.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Hold off on making a personal commitment until you find out what it really entails and whose interests are actually involved. There could be hidden facts you need to know.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new friend offers an unexpected opportunity that could lead to a career change. Check it out carefully and consider getting an assessment from someone familiar with this field.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A surprising discovery leads to mixed reactions from those involved in the "revelation." But as you come to appreciate the truth, you'll be able to also come to terms with your feelings.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your love of travel helps you appreciate the wonders of the world. You would find a satisfying career in any travel-related industry.

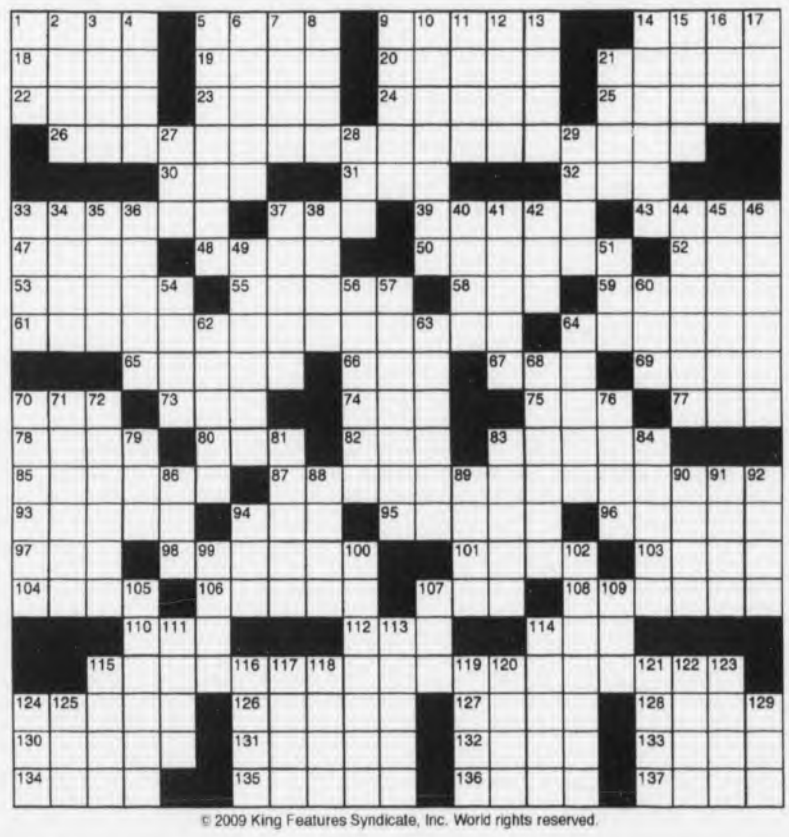
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Bell of the ball

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Drake Bell was a teenager when he landed a starring role on the sitcom "Drake & Josh" on kid-friendly Nickelodeon. While that show marked his break-through, it wasn't his first experience in show business, so the now 23-year-old performer is not unrealistic about his ongoing transition from child actor to recording artist.

"I loved the series, but music is my real passion," explained Bell — whose tour in support of his Universal Motown Records debut "It's Only Time" brings him to the Cape Cod Melody Tent and South Shore Music Circus this week – by telephone recently." This is a huge tour of the United States and Mexico and we've been getting a lot of younger kids at our shows, of course, but lately we've also been seeing their older brothers and sisters, plus the parents, too. That says that the music is reaching a wider audience which is exactly what I had hoped would happen."

Some of those parents may not realize how much they have in common with Bell, a native of Newport Beach, Calif., whose musical style was inspired by some vintage era pop and rock.

"I'm a huge fan of the Beatles, the Beach Boys, Buddy Holly, Elvis Presley, and Queen. I like everything about them including not just their songs, but who they were as people and their style."

A child actor who began appearing in movies and television when he was just five-years old, Bell has clear memories of the performers who influenced him, even if only in reruns.

"When I was little, I watched all the old TV shows with Dick Van Dyke, Mary Tyler Moore, Bob Newhart, and Donny and Marie Osmond. And I wanted so much to be like Elvis Presley, starring in movies and still getting to play music."

While Bell was too young to ever work with the King, he did learn something about rock and roll from one of its other icons. While appearing in the 1998 film "Changing Destiny," Bell took some memorable guitar lessons from his co-star Roger Daltrey of The Who.

"I think Roger Daltrey was just shocked, because I was only 12 years old and yet I knew all about his band playing the Isle of Wight Festival in 1970," recalls Bell. "He was just so real, definitely not your quintessential rock star."

"When I started playing guitar and writing songs, I fell in love immediately. I started putting little bands together and just kept going."

Before his concerts in Hyannis and Cohasset next week, Drake Bell will be at the Cape Cod Mall in Hyannis on Wednesday, July 15 at 2 pm, and the South Shore Plaza in Braintree on Thursday, July 16, also at 2 p.m., to meet fans, sign autographs, and take photos. Both the Melody Tent and Music Circus shows begin at 6 p.m. There will be a drop-off/pick-up area at both venues.

Drake Bell will be at the Cape Cod Melody Tent, 21 West Main St., Hyannis, on July 15. For tickets and information, visit the Melody Tent box office, call 800-745-3000, or go online at melodytent.org. Drake Bell will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on July 16. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-745-3000, or go online at themusiccircus.org.

Being banned means big things for local Barroom Heroes

Being banned in Weymouth may turn out to be the best thing that ever happened to The Barroom Heroes, the local pre-teen quartet that made news last month when the plug was pulled on their planned gig at Basta Bar in Weymouth, by a Weymouth Licensing Officer who said it was inappropriate for underage musicians to play in a bar. First they were invited backstage to meet their idols, "The Dropkick Murphys," after a recent Comcast Center concert in Mansfield, and now the boy band is set to open for Nickelodeon TV star Drake Bell at the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis next Wednesday and, the following night, at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset.

The Barroom Heroes are made up of brothers Jake and Nick Bell, ages 11 and 10, and Sam Wells, 9, all of Weymouth, and 12-year-old Sam Attridge of Hingham. A June 17 show at Kilroy's Cafe in Quincy was also canceled by that city's licensing board. The boys ultimately played Basta Bar in Weymouth on June 24, after the establishment agreed not to serve drinks during their set.

Melody Tent and Music Circus General Manager Vince Longo decided to book The Barroom Heroes after seeing them perform recently at Hajjar's in Weymouth

A LIVING 'LEGACY'

Engelbert Humperdinck performs July 12 in Cohasset

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Engelbert Humperdinck wanted to get more than just his voice in shape for his "Legacy of Love" summer tour that will bring him to the South Shore Music Circus on Sunday.

"I've lost 33 pounds. I'm back to a 34-inch waist and now I have a personal trainer," explained Humperdinck by telephone recently from his home in Los Angeles. "I'm starting out in the U.S. and Canada, but I'm also planning a major UK tour soon, plus stops in France, Holland, Belgium, Ukraine, and Russia. I wanted to be certain that I was ready before I went out on the road again."

The veteran singer, who became an international star in 1967 when his first hit record, "Release Me," went to number one in 11 countries, has not one, but three new CDs ready for release

"I kept this first part of this year kind of free, because I've been doing a lot of recording. I just finished an album called 'Legacy of Love,' which is all my greatest hits. I challenged myself by going back into the studio to record all the hits I've recorded over my 42 years in this business. I went to Prague and, with a big symphony orchestra, recorded all my hits and classic songs again. It's just turned out amazing. People with professional ears say it's even better than it was 40 years ago. I'm thrilled about that and also very happy that I now own the songs. The album is available on my web site and I'll also be going on Home Shopping Network (HSN) with it. Those are just about the only ways to sell records these days."

Selling records is something the man born George Arnold Dorsey in Madras, India, 73 years ago to British Army Officer Mervyn Dorsey and his wife, Olive, knows a bit about. Humperdinck's 80 albums, to date, have sold 150 million units worldwide, including 64 Gold and 24 Platinum. The recording industry has changed over the past 40 years and "The King of Romance" has always been willing to move with the times.

"Change is fine with me. Whatever works, I go along with. I recorded quite recently with a guy who produced 'After the Lovin'" for me in 1976 and many other hits, too, for other people. His name is Charlie Calello, but everyone just calls him 'Platinum Charlie.' I hope his name is going to work with my next album, 'Endlessly,' which will come out this fall. The day before I play Cohasset, I'm releasing a single from the album which is also called 'Endlessly.' It was written by Paul Anka and David Foster. And I have also finished a third album, 'A Taste of Country,' for release next year. I've always believed that if you don't remain creative, you will simply fade away."

With 250 active fan club chapters worldwide, there is little chance that will ever happen to Humperdinck. Just to make doubly sure, however, he recently put his career in the hands of music industry legend Eliot Weisman, who once managed Frank Sinatra.

"I really don't analyze what has led to my longevity," says Humperdinck, who has been married to wife Patricia for 44 years. Together, the pair have four children, and four grandchildren. "As some people know, I lived for many years in Beverly Hills in a beautiful house on Sunset Boulevard that was built by Rudy Vallee. Jayne Mansfield owned it before I did. When I sold it a few years back, the new owners promised to keep it intact. A few months later, they tore the house down. That's one of the reasons that Paris and the rest of Europe appeal so much to me. Those countries maintain their landmarks. They don't tear them down."

Engelbert Humperdinck will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, on July 12. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-745-3000, or go online at themusiccircus.org.

— FUN ON BIKES—

While most of the South Shore is still sleeping or getting ready for work, these cyclists, shown here at Hingham High School, have 20, 30, or even 70 miles of riding under their belts.

'Old guys in spandex'

Informal cycling group pedals out of Hingham

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

They don't have uniforms, or even a name.

But, come 5:45a.m., they are there in front of Dependable Cleaners in Hingham with their bikes.

They are contractors, lawyers, doctors, consultants, and financial specialists — men who might never have crossed paths except they share a love of riding a bicycle.

For almost three decades a group of men have met in Hingham during the early morning hours and set off on a bike ride. It's not a leisurely ride by any standard — for the most part they ride fast and hard. While most of the South Shore is still sleeping or getting ready for work, the cyclists already have 20, 30, or even 70 miles of riding under their belt.

They watch the sun come up over Jerusalem Road while speeding down the deserted road at 20 miles an hour. They've had not so pretty run-ins with small animals darting into the road. All of them have endured the pain of road rash after a crash and even more serious injuries.

Yet, they keep coming back morning after morning.

Barry Lamkin, 60, of Norwell, has been joining the morning rides for over two decades.

He sums up the group in this way: "We party hard, we play hard and we have fun with our bikes."

On loosely organized group, by their own description, meets weekdays at Hingham's Dependable Cleaners and leaves promptly at 5:45a.m. Many of the riders start earlier and ride to Dependable Cleaners and others join (or leave) the group as it passes near their home. On weekends, the group gathers at the Hingham High parking lot around 6a.m. to set off on a longer ride.

JJ's in the village

Owners open second location on Pleasant Street

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

To many in Cohasset and the South Shore, the opening of JJ's Dairy Hut on Route 3A is the harbinger of summer. Soft serve ice cream, hot dogs on buttery rolls and hamburgers fresh off the grill are just a few of the favorite items on the JJ's menu.

As of July 3, fans of JJ's have a second location to frequent — JJ's Junction. The red building at 2 Pleasant St., once the long-time home of Strawberry Parfait then the short-lived ventures of Henry's Root Beer and Boys of Summer, is back in business this season.

And if the phrase, "The Clucker," make your mouth water, JJ's Junction owner Lilly Sestito wants you to know the favorite Strawberry Parfait sandwich is coming back.

JJ's Junction, owned by Cohasset residents Lilly and Joe Sestito, opened in time for Fourth of July weekend. In two short weeks from conception to opening, Lilly Sestito, who has owned and managed JJ's Dairy Hut for 22 years (and worked there for 30 years), called on friends, family and local businesses to get the place in shape for opening.

While initially not sold on the idea of a second ice cream business — "it was crazy," she says — the more she tossed it around, the more it made sense it made.

"It's just a great spot," she says. Growing up in Cohasset, the place has a bit of nostalgia for her as well.

When she was a teenager she put in applications to work at both JJ's and Strawberry Parfait in the early summer. She didn't hear back from either place. Then, JJ's called and offered her a position in early August. The very next day, The Strawberry Parfait called to see if she was still interested. She had to turn it down.

"Who would have thought 30 years later I'd own both places," Sestito says with a smile.

Many years later, in her other job as a real estate broker for Coldwell Banker, she sold The Strawberry

Stormwater Committee needs members

In February, Selectmen voted to create a five-member Stormwater Advisory Committee. They are still seeking members with specific expertise or knowledge to volunteer. A couple of residents have expressed interest, but not enough to form the board. The Town Manager is currently accepting applications from interested residents.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee will take on myriad tasks including conducting public education activities in support of stormwater remediation, providing opportunities for public participation in stormwater and watershed remediation discussions, conducting an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset, seeking funding sources for stormwater remediation and advising the Board of Selectmen on stormwater-related capital expenditures.

Liaisons from the Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Water Commission, Sewer Commission, Planning Board, School Committee, and Department of Emergency Management will be participating as well.

Appointments to the Stormwater Advisory Committee will first be made from interested members of the liaison boards and committees listed above, then from volunteers from the community, with preference given to people with relevant professional qualifications, including licensed professional engineers in hydrological or environmental specialties, architects and attorneys specializing in environmental law, and public relations professionals.

Interested candidates are requested to submit a letter of interest and resume to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or by e-mail to: wgriffin@townofcohasset.org

Straits Pond Watershed Association will host its annual meeting from 7 to 9 p.m., on Wednesday, July 22, at McTighe Hall, 6 Atlantic House Court, Hull, in the Commons Room at the Hull Senior Housing complex directly across from Hull Town Hall.

One of the items on the agenda will be a discussion about the scheduled construction of the West Corner Culvert. Representatives for this discussion will include Hull Town Manager Phil Lemnios, representatives from Mass Highway and a representative from P.A. Landers, the company doing the work. Two other items on the agenda will be the Aquarion Water Main Project on Atlantic Avenue and the Richards Road Rain Garden.

The meeting is free and open to the public.

Beaches good to go

Water quality nearly perfect

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

This week, the Cohasset beaches had near perfect water quality. All six sampling locations and recreational swimming areas are open for the weekend.

The Board of Heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming. If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water beaches are closed or a geometric mean over 35 colonies of enterococci spread over a five week period.

Last week Black Rock beach registered a spike of 5,800 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters. When it was re-sampled two days later on Thursday the results were back to a more normal level – 10 cfu/100 milliliters. The beach was open over the weekend.

Most of the time Cohasset beaches are well under the bacterial limit for closing because they are on open water and benefit from regular flushing; the two exceptions being Bassing Beach and the Yacht Club because of their location in the inner harbor.

Bassing Beach, the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach and Black Rock beach are tested weekly during the summer. The results are posted on the Department of Public Health's website. Testing results for all sampling stations are available on the Department of Public Health website dating back to the summer of 2002.

Health Inspector Tara Tradd works each summer with a group of students at the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR). At each sampling location one sample is taken in a glass bottle then split the water between two sterile cups — one goes to the state lab, G&L Laboratories in Quincy, and the other to the CSCR lab. Six locations are sampled: off the docks of the Sailing Club and the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Little Harbor, Sandy Beach and Black Rock Beach.

This week's results

Results indicate the number of colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters (cfu/100mL).

Bassing's Beach/Sailing Club	10
Yacht Club	10
Sandy Cove	<10
Little Harbor	10
Sandy Beach	<10
Black Rock Beach	<10

At each site the temperature of the water is taken as well as the sample. Anything out of the ordinary like birds, jellyfish, boats, swimmers, seaweed is noted that may or may not impact the results.

A heavy rainfall — and the first flush of stormwater that comes with it — impacts water quality especially in the inner harbor. As a precaution, after a half-inch of rain the harbor/Bassing Beach is automatically closed for swimming.

In an effort to improve communication about beach closures the Board of Health will be using a flag system as well as updating the office's voicemail with the results of the water testing each Wednesday afternoon.

A yellow flag flown in the harbor and a red flag with a crossed out swimmer will be posted at Sandy Beach will indicate no swimming.

The most common health effects related to swimming in polluted waters could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastro-intestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers swallowing water.

For more information on beach closures, please contact the board of health at (781) 383-4116.

Briefly

Adopt-a-street program

The Board of Health's Adopt-a-street program is looking for more participants. Families, organizations and businesses are welcome to join.

Health Inspector and program coordinator Tara Tradd has targeted additional areas of town that need a little help with litter: Sohier Street, Beechwood Street, S. Main Street, Ripley Road, Depot Court, Elm Street, Forest Avenue, upper King Street and Pond Street.

Police Beat

Teens charged after missing bikes found

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

An 18-year-old Cohasset teen is facing several charges after police believe he broke into a garage and stole bicycles. Two other teens, ages 17 and 18, one of Cohasset and the other formerly of Cohasset, have been summonsed to court to face the charge of receiving stolen property, police said. A fourth teen, who may have been involved, has not been positively identified.

Chief James Hussey said at about 1 a.m. on Friday (July 10), an officer observed four males walking on North Main Street. The officer identified the teens and had a brief conversation with them.

Police found three abandoned bicycles in the area of Stanton Road and a further search found one of the teens, who had been identified earlier.

At about 2:20 a.m., the same officer saw the same teens on bicycles. They did not have bicycles earlier, Hussey said. When the officer went up to the teens to ask where they had obtained the bikes, they took off, police said.

Police found three abandoned bicycles in the area of Stanton Road and a further search found one of the teens, who had been identified earlier. Arrested was James N. Reichardt, 18, of 3 Grace Drive. Reichardt was charged with larceny of property valued at over $250, possession of burglary tools (hacksaw blade), and breaking & entering a building in the nighttime.

Hussey said investigation revealed a garage on West Gate Lane had been broken into.

Two other teens, Samuel Bilbo, 18, of South Main St., and Dylan Handley, 17, of Berlin Street in Quincy, were summoned on the charge of receiving stolen property valued at more than $250.

Stolen checkbook

Police advised a concerned caller to cancel the remaining checks in her checkbook after she reported it either lost or stolen last week. No other valuables had been taken from her unlocked car over the Fourth of July weekend when the checkbook went missing, police said. There were three checks remaining in the checkbook.

Speeding

A 43-year-old Hanson man is being summonsed to court after police stopped him for traveling 50 mph in a 30 mph zone on Forest Avenue at about 12:34 p.m. on Monday (July 6). Further investigation revealed the man had attached plates from a 2000 Chevrolet pickup onto the Dodge he was driving. The man told police he had sold the pickup about a month ago. He had not registered the Dodge. He is facing charges of driving an unregistered, uninsured motor vehicle, number plate violation and speeding.

Erratic operation

Police have summonsed a 45-year-old Hingham woman to court after a caller reported that she had been driving erratically and speeding on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) at about 8:44 a.m. on Tuesday (July 7). Police identified the woman after she turned right into a dead-end driveway that leads to a utility box off the state highway. The woman started screaming and said she had to use the bathroom, police said. She also said she had been in the hospital the night before after her husband had beat her up.

Police had paramedics evaluate her at the scene. Based on witness and police observations, police did not think she was able to safely drive. Her car was towed and she was transported home. She was summonsed on the charges of negligent operation, speeding and marked lanes violation.

Wallet, keys

A citizen who had found a wallet and car keys approached an officer on patrol in the Shaw's Plaza parking lot last Wednesday (July 8). Police contacted the owner who picked the items up at the station. Nothing was missing from the wallet.

Car break-ins

Police responded to two reports last Thursday (July 9) about break-ins to motor vehicles. A Deep Run resident reported that his unlocked green 2004 Nissan had been rummaged through. Those responsible apparently left a bag of candy on the driver's seat. The evidence is being processed. The glove compartment in the car had been opened. The incident was reported at 5:38 a.m.

That same day a Jerusalem Road resident reported that her unlocked 2008 Audi had been broken into and her iPhone stolen.

Both incidents are under investigation.

Erratic operation

Police responded to a call about a tan Volvo being operated erratically along North Main Street at about 5:30 p.m. on Saturday (July 11). The car pulled into the gas station in the Village, the caller said. Further investigation revealed the woman, who was crying and unsteady on her feet and said she was lost, had a medical issue and may have not taken her medication that day. She told police she was having trouble with the GPS system in her car. Police convinced her to go to the hospital, passed on the medical information they had to the hospital, and took custody of her car. The woman, who lives in S. Hampton, returned later and picked up her keys.

Toy, note

Police investigated a mysterious toy and note that were left on a doorstep at a Jerusalem Road home after the homeowner called Sunday (July 12) and was concerned. As it turned out the items, which were left for the homeowner's daughter, were from a 7-year-old neighbor, who wanted to strike up a friendship, police said.

CSCR thanks its community supporters

CSCR is now flying Veolia Water's colors below Old Glory at the new flagpole at Mariners' Park. On Tuesday, a small group of students and teachers ran the Veolia Water banner up the flagpole that now graces the grassy knoll on the edge of the harbor at Mariners' Park. Veolia Water, the company that operates Cohasset's wastewater treatment plant, has partnered with CSCR this summer to support students conducting water quality analyses in the harbor and in the surrounding wetlands.

Through Veolia's community outreach and support program, and with professional and personal commitment from plant operator Dick Nye and from regional manager John Oatley, CSCR has been given a YSI 85 meter, a variety of valuable lab supplies, and sponsorship of Summer Institute T-shirts.

"Veolia has been more than gracious this summer with its support and is a true community partner," says CSCR president Jack Buckley. "John Oatley and Dick Nye reached out to us last year for support in conducting sampling field work and the partnership took off from there. It's great to know that our community can call on Dick or John for support and that they are there to help as they can. We look forward to building a relationship that works for everyone, especially for the students."

Echoing Buckley's sentiments, John Oatley emphasized that "Veolia is committed to working to improve the quality of life for community residents. Supporting CSCR student research is one way for us to demonstrate our commitment."

"Veolia Water's support is incredibly valuable to us," says harbor water quality leader and chief CSCR scientist, Dr. Ann Thomae. "But we're equally grateful of community support from the Cohasset Education Foundation. They've been supportive of our program since we began collecting samples nine years ago."

Another CSCR veteran and founding board member, Paul Adams, the Atlantic Avenue resident who is solely responsible for gifting and raising the flagpole on the point, tried to deflect recognition away from himself.

"The Gulf Association and the school administration are vital partners to CSCR's successes, and they deserve kudos, too. Plus, Coastal Zone Managment and the Mass Bays Monitoring Program extend grant support, technical advice, and field training," Adams said. "We'd be remiss to not offer our thanks to the likes of Jason Burtner, Sara Grady, and Christian Krohforst. It's a whole team of support that makes CSCR the quality program it is."

Cable studio on its way

Planned for Town Hall

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Residents looking for last week's Board of Selectmen meeting on local cable were not able to find it. However, faithful meeting watchers can take heart knowing within months Selectmen meetings — and other local cable access programming — will be able to be viewed through Comcast's "on demand" system.

The town is entering a new era in local cable television. Comcast and other cable providers are no longer providing a studio facility; instead all local access programming is being placed back into the hands of the town.

Under a new contract, which took effect in April, Comcast and its subscribers are providing funding to get a studio up and running and quarterly payments to support local cable operations.

The Cable Advisory Committee provided an estimated budget for the first year of operation to the Selectmen Monday night (July 6).

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson, a member of the Cable Advisory Committee, presented the preliminary budget for the upcoming year.

Comcast is providing $100,000 of up front money to fund the initial equipment and studio set-up cost. It is expected the town will received about $100,000 annually through the Comcast contract.

The proposed location for the studio is in the town hall auditorium. A currently open space on the right side of the auditorium (if entering from the main door) is targeted for the studio and control booth. The cost to enclose the space and install a control booth is $18,000.

The proposed location for the studio is in the town hall auditorium.

Cable Advisory Committee chair Pat Martin said the location adjacent to the auditorium could be helpful when holding training sessions for future television producers and stars.

"They are going to bring the content to us and up it goes," said Martin.

The major piece of equipment needed is a "tightrope system," an all inclusive program broadcaster and digital storage solution with remote access scheduling software. The estimated cost is $23,000. The system enables the town to broadcast 24/7 informational bulletins and other programming on both community channels. Local programming is viewed on channels 10 and 22.

Another major purchase in the first few months is to purchase and install new camera equipment for the Selectmen's Office at a cost of $20,000 and another $30,000 to equip the studio.

An annual $3000 insurance policy will cover insurance for the equipment and liability, including content liability. A s the Cohasset Community Television gets up and running there will be ongoing maintenance and staff costs. According to the Comcast contract, the franchise fee can be used for very specific items — salaries, operating and other expenses related to public educational and governmental access programming operations, equipment and/or facilities.

The town is in the process of setting up a non-profit corporation to oversee the local cable access and television studio for the town. On Monday (July 6), the Selectmen appointed the current Cable Advisory Committee to the corporation's board of directors.

Right now, the town only has a cable contract with Comcast, but the town is in final contract negotiations with Verizon. This is the first time Verizon has requested a contract with the town. If the Selectmen adopt the contract, Cohasset will at long last have cable competition. Verizon will be subject to the same franchise fee that will support local cable access.

In negotiation

Treat's Pond easement is work in progress

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Since a discussion in late April, the issue of establishing an easement from Treat's Pond to Sandy Cove has not been back before the Board of Selectmen.

Selectmen said recently they are expecting to hear an update on the draft agreement and hopefully sign a final agreement before the summer is out.

Signing this easement agreement is important because without a legally and physically clear way to access the beach, the town cannot clear out the drainage outfall on Sandy Cove. Residents who routinely get flooded during heavy rain have said in previous meetings on the issue that the clearing of the outfall is presently the only way to alleviate the flooding.

"...we have spent a lot of time to make this an uncomplicated document."
— Selectman Ted Carr

"We're pretty close on language...we have spent a lot of time to make this an uncomplicated document," said Selectman Ted Carr in a recent phone interview. Carr served as the lead selectman on this agreement while he was selectmen chairman.

The draft agreement, as it was presented in April, would be in effect for five years from its acceptance by Land Court for filing. The new path to the beach that applies to this new easement crosses seven properties, involving six families.

Carr said some progress has been made since the issue was last discussed: a majority of residents holding beach rights at Sandy Cove has signed a petition indicating they are in favor of the agreement.

"We are open to language suggestions (but were are not open to putting) the town in less than a favorable position," Carr said.

Current Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said the agreement is currently being worked on.

"There are efforts on all sides to come to a reasonable conclusion," Carlson said in a phone interview. "Everybody wants to see this come to a conclusion."

Describing the negotiations as cordial and respectful, Carlson said the delays were partly due to some disagreements on language as well as the people involved on both sides having other things going on in their lives.

"It just takes time to do these things," Carlson said. "I suspect it will be done by the end of the summer."

Selectman Vice Chair Karen Quigley expressed frustration with the issue at the first airing of the easement in April. In a recent phone interview, her frustration has not faded.

"This has been going on since before I was a selectman, it doesn't seem like the right way to deal with the issue," Quigley said, adding she felt a sit-down meeting to decide the issue once and for all was needed. Quigley said the town should look into what its rights are according the original easement that dates back to 1964.

Despite the rainy weather in June, according to Carr there has not been a significant flooding incident this season.

"The DPW has been cleaning it out regularly," said Carr.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the issue would not be discussed at Monday's scheduled Selectmen's meeting.

The Army Corps of Engineers' proposed saltmarsh restoration project never got support from the town and, according to Carlson, is currently on the back burner.

Brief history of the easement

In 1964, the former property owner Elizabeth Bigelow granted the town an easement to Treat's Pond and its drainage pipe. In its simplest terms, the town was given the right and responsibility to maintain Treat's Pond as a marsh pond. The easement granted to the town is vague, but it does include the pond itself and the associated drainage pipe that runs from Treat's Pond to Sandy Cove.

For many years, the Department of Public Works with a backhoe has accessed Sandy Cove to clear the pipe on an occasional basis (usually during or after a significant rainfall) via Lothrop Lane, a paved private road. The clearing of the pipe allows the pond to drain and, according to residents, is effective in alleviating flooding.

Given the pipe is located on the opposite end of the beach and the lack of easement, the residents of Lothrop Lane requested the town to enforce its legal easement at the opposite end of the beach.

However, the town does not have an easement to traverse Lothrop Lane to gain access to the Sandy Cove and the pipe's outfall. Given the pipe is located on the opposite end of the beach and the lack of easement, the residents of Lothrop Lane requested the town to enforce its legal easement at the opposite end of the beach.

Because the easement path hasn't been used in many years, it had become overgrown with vegetation and is home to wildlife. In addition, the property owners and the town disagree with what the original Bigelow easement allows. As a result, the town is seeking to establish an agreement for a new easement on an already established path and clarify what the easement can be used for.

Negotiation has been ongoing since the winter. Annual Town Meeting in March authorized the selectmen to sign a Sandy Cove easement agreement once one is reached.

— Darilynn Evans, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

While the group has its origins in Hingham, it has morphed geographically over the years and men from Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate are regular attendees. The group has changed over the years, but its existence has never waivered.

When the topic of a name comes up there is initially a laugh on the other end of the phone. Then, the answer is definitive.

"There's no name, there's no shirts, and there's no newsletter. We've resisted being formalized," said Lamkin with a touch of pride. "I think we get along better if we show up and just do it."

According to Gary Count, 56, of Hingham, the closest they ever got to a name was at a coffee shop in Scituate where for a time they were regulars on the weekends. The waitress dubbed them "The Old Guys in Spandex."

"It's really a bunch of anarchists who can't admit they live and die for this group," said Stephen Oronte, 54, of Cohasset. Oronte has been biking with the group since 1997, but cycling since 1977. He's been involved in other cycling groups over the years in New York City and Washington, D.C., but he said nothing beats the South Shore scenery in the early morning.

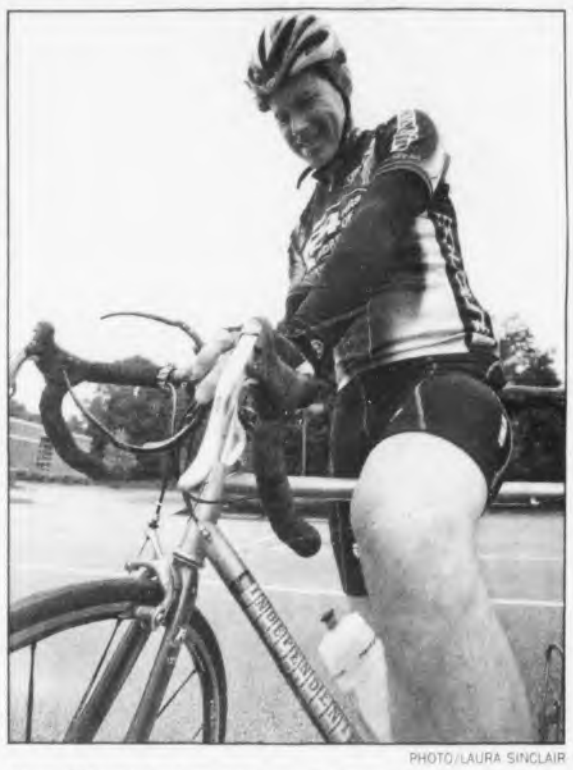
The same "anarchist" attitude that keeps them from getting matching T-shirts shines through when choosing the route, too. While the group typically sticks to a well-worn 30-mile route through Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate on weekdays, when they do discuss a change in route or longer routes on the weekend, they can rarely come to a clear consensus, members said.

"We argue like a bunch of old people about where to go, then usually someone just starts riding," Oronte said.

Weekend rides are typically more relaxed and longer, running between 40 and 80 miles.

"It's more of a connection than just riding around and sweating – it's one of the most enjoyable things I do."

— Stephen Oronte, 54, of Cohasset



Much of the time they'll make their way down to Duxbury where they drink coffee and share stories at French Memories.

But, even on the relaxed days, the group isn't stopping to smell the roses. The group is competitive — friendly competition, but with generous spoonfuls of testosterone — and they'll bike 20 miles an hour down the back roads of the South Shore. Newer and younger members constantly refresh the group and keep them all on their toes, members said.

"These guys are among the most fit guys you'll ever meet," said Oronte, explaining that the sustained level of cardio activity required leaves many in the dust.

"It took me almost two years to get to the point that I could keep up consistently," said Rick Lyons, 52, of Cohasset.

Most of the time they group will stop at various points for all the riders to catch up and they help each other out in the event of a flat tire or other mechanical failure.

Barry Lamkin of Norwell does a few stretches while Mike Ranieri of Norwell contemplates the ride ahead as they wait for the other members of the group to arrive.

More than bikes

Beyond tooling around on bikes in the early morning hours, the men have forged bonds that extend beyond their bicycle frames. Off the road they keep in touch through an e-mail chain where there is a constant exchange of messages full of editorial comments and locker-room humor. This week, e-mails were exchanged concerning the grooming habits or, more specifically, the shaved legs of certain riders.

"It's more of a connection than just riding around and sweating — it's one of the most enjoyable things I do," said Oronte.

They get together after 9a.m., too, for pool parties, Tour de France parties, Fourth of July parties. They know each other's families and some members have formed strong bonds with other fellow cyclists.

"Most of the group is pretty close," said Lamkin.

The ages run the gamut from about 35 to about 60 and many have been regular attendees for many years. They welcome new cyclists and encourage them to just show up at the appointed time and place. Women are welcome to join as well, but they said there is none regularly involved now.

The adjective "obsessive" comes up in several of the interviews. As possibly an extreme example, Lamkin, who at 60 is one of the elder statesmen of the group, bought a Merlin Titanium bicycle when he turned 50 and rode it cross-country — in 32 days.

He continued his long-distance challenges by participating in 200, 300, 400 and 600-kilometer events culminating in a ride from Boston to Montreal and back to Boston. In his first attempt at the race, he developed a crack in his titanium bike frame and had to abandon the ride. He came back the next year with a new titanium frame to complete the ride in 81 hours.

"I developed another crack in my new frame a year later, which amuses a number of people that I may be the only person on the planet to have cracked two titanium frames," Lamkin said. Following the to Montreal and back trek, Lamkin said he has cut down on his mileage, but still rides 4000 to 5000 miles a year.

While they primarily ride for the love of the sport, to stay in shape and for the social interaction, most of the cyclists participate in a ride for charity once a year whether it is the Pan-Mass Challenge or the MS Getaway.

Count said it's a little comforting to know that there is always someone worse off than you are.

"When there isn't someone worse off than you, you might be in trouble," Count said with a laugh.

Anyone who has been cycling for any length of time has crashed, and some of them have had some pretty serious injuries – broken bones, road burns, pulled muscles. Most of the time, they are back on their bike as soon as possible.

"We're just a motley crew that has this in common. And as long as our wives tolerate it, we'll continue to do it," Count said.

Josh Hassan drills the sign into place while Ted Kiley, right, makes sure it is lined up correctly. Hassan Sign used to operate out the current JJ's Junction building in the mid-1970s.

Parfait for its then owner.

JJ's Junction will serve grill items like grilled cheese, hot dogs and hamburgers and, of course, the sweet stuff, hard ice cream and frappes. In August, more items will be available once a fryalator is installed. Sestito says for now she's going to leave the soft serve ice cream to JJ's Dairy Hut.

Sestito is calling on her own history, the building's history and the wisdom of her many mentors in her new endeavor.

She credits her employees at JJ's on 3A for holding down the fort allowing her to focus on setting up shop on Pleasant Street. Local contractors squeezed her in to get the place up to snuff. Her husband's landscaping business, Sestito Landscaping, groomed the outside portion of the property. Hassan Sign, which used to operate out the current JJ's Junction building in the mid-1970s, created their sign.

"It's all come full circle," Sestito says.

Named JJ's Junction for its location right next to the Greenbush train tracks, Sestito has ordered a 28-foot train playground to go in the spacious seating area adjacent to the building (it will arrive in a few weeks). A gazebo and four picnic tables with umbrellas are also in the yard.

Sestito knows many in Cohasset — and beyond — fondly recall The Strawberry Parfait. In fact, there are 111 members in a Facebook group "The Strawberry Parfait – Cohasset, Mass." Many have left comments reminiscing about the menu items they loved.

In a nod to Carmine Carlucci, the owner of the Strawberry Parfait, Sestito is bringing back many of that restaurant's favorite items. Among them is the famed fried chicken sandwich – "the Clucker."

"We are bringing back the clucker," Sestito says excitedly and definitively. It will be on the menu beginning in August.

To ensure JJ's Junction pays proper respect to the building's heritage, Sestito is getting daily tips and input from Carmine Carlucci, who is now the head chef at the Mill Wharf in Scituate.

Sestito has also hired a familiar face of another much missed Cohasset restaurant, Bergson's Paula Jones.

Sestito doesn't plan to make the JJ's Junction a summer-only treat. She is going to keep up the business through the winter where more soups and comfort food will be on the menu alongside the ice cream.

She says having three kids in the school system, playing multiple sports made her think a quick eat place might be able to survive.

"Sometimes because of practices or other activities, we're not getting home until late and homework still needs to be done. I know there are a lot of parents like me who would grab a quick dinner of burgers before heading home," Sestito says.

Although Sestito has been a Route 3A business owner for over two decades (she bought JJ's at age 22) she's looking forward to being a part of the village community.

"For us to have a place downtown, it's great. There's such a great energy," Sestito says, who already started in on getting to know the neighborhood kids and families. "I really want this place to be a community."

While JJ's on 3A draws people from all over, she envisions JJ's Junction being more of a local, neighborhood place.

"I want families to walk down after dinner," she says. "It's just a totally different atmosphere, it's fun."

We'll make you smile.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Creative thinking

The most important quality that keeps downtown Cohasset rolling is creativity.

When so many "Main Streets" across America have been abandoned in favor of shopping malls off major thoroughfares – Cohasset Village seems to continue to beat the odds.

However, there is no question that the village has – and continues to face – many challenges. With the deep recession upon us, our small shops, restaurants and businesses could struggle to remain economically viable.

There are still vacancies that are of concern. Cohasset Hardware remains unoccupied and there is plenty of commercial space along Ripley Road next to Pat's.

But, with that being said, there is still much vibrancy in our downtown.

When some shops close – others move right in to take their place. And our local Chamber of Commerce is always thinking of ways to encourage downtown shopping. Also "Cohasset Day," which was inaugurated last year, showcases our village area to local residents and "outsiders."

We are happy to report that one of the latest additions to the "neighborhood" is JJ's Junction on Pleasant Street.

We have always found the former Strawberry Parfait building to be among the cutest in town. When the current editor came on board 17 years ago – the Strawberry Parfait was a "destination" spot.

We were very sad to see it go. Subsequent endeavors operating from that location were not as long lasting.

But, now there is really good news. If anyone can make a go at that location it's Lilly Sestito.

JJ's has been around "forever!" Whenever we drive by JJ's during the "season" – the parking lot is usually full of happy customers. JJ's is not only a great place to stop for lunch, a snack or treat — but it is also a landmark. (In our view, it should be on the National Register of Historic Places!).

While the challenges for JJ's Junction will be different, we think the creativity going into the "new spot" will help it succeed. Lilly is also going to keep the business open through the winter when more soups and comfort food will be on the menu alongside the ice cream.

There is nothing else to say except: Welcome to the neighborhood!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Can't we have a little humor?

TO THE EDITOR:

What happened to the very happy Toyland that use to adorn the glass recycling shed at our Transfer Station?

I was told that someone forced them to take them down.

Charlie, Chuck and Brian, who do a super job, took a little time to recycle a display using stuffed toy fish and various other colorful, fun objects.

It reminded me of the colorful boardwalk at Paragon Park and Funland. Those bright, bouncy creatures sure got a lot of smiles from the youngsters.

Have we got so stringent that we can't have a little humor?

Party launched sailing season

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear CSC Launch Party Attendees and Party Committee:

Our 49th season is off to a wonderful beginning. This past Saturday, July 11, the adult members of the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) celebrated the official start of the 2009 sailing season with the club's annual lobster feast and silent auction. 143 attendees made for a merry crowd — and some could not help but note the coincidence of this number with the signal of the famous lighthouse near our coast. But we adored hearing member Donna Sanderson's sentiment: "I love you"— that is how we feel about the CSC!"

We in turn love all our members, but some require a special shout-out. First and foremost, Joyce Driscoll and her (committed) committee of five — Suzanne Jackisch, Maria Kennedy, Claudia McKeon, Jim Porter, and Sarah Porter — once again handled the party logistics with their usual aplomb, grace, and good cheer. Brian Driscoll again headed up the clean-up committee. Never have so many owed so much to so few . . . .

Over 50 items were donated to the silent auction, which raised $7,000 for the CSC's activities. Our thanks to those who donated, and those who bid — you know who you are, and we know who you are. Next year is our golden anniversary year, and we plan to celebrate the start of our next half-century in style.

COMMENTARY

SUSAN BELL

Critics who counter this plan need to understand that the economics of the current system will jeopardize everyone's health care, as well as other priorities.

For the past 15 years, I worked to advance health care reform serving as a senior manager in the Massachusetts Executive Office of Health and Human Services, Office of Medicaid, the agency responsible for implementing the MassHealth 1115 Research and Demonstration Waiver. The Waiver authorized the programmatic framework and federal funding for low-income individuals and the uninsured previously funded by a safety net pool. Now, over one million children, families, and individuals are covered. Key goals included increasing access to coverage, improving quality of care, while controlling the rate of spending and budget neutrality. This was achieved by expanding coverage to the uninsured, requiring the uninsured to enroll in managed care plans, and simplifying administrative processes and policy that resulted in substantial savings.

Last week I participated virtually in the White House Town Meeting on Health Care Reform, which presented key principles of the administration's plan. They include reduced costs, guaranteed choice, including the choice of a "robust" public insurance option, and quality care for all Americans. Central to this plan is the Health Care Exchange, which will offer public and private options. Cost-containment will be achieved through benchmarking of the public plan with two-thirds of projected costs coming from reallocation of current funding and one-third from revenues from a cap on itemized deductions of the top wealthiest Americans ($95B). Additional savings will be gained from health care prevention and health information technology, which is currently scorable, but is not yet quantifiable.

Critics who counter this plan need to understand that the economics of the current system will jeopardize everyone's health care, as well as other priorities. By 2025, health care spending will comprise 25 percent of gross domestic product. Thomas Freidman said it perfectly in his column 'Can I Clean Your Clock?' in Sunday's New York Times, as follows: "Health care and the energy/climate bill go together. We need both now. Imagine how poor we would be today if U.S. firms did not dominate the top 10 Internet companies. Well, if we don't dominate the top 10 E.T. rankings, there is no way we are going to be able to afford decent health care for every American. No way."

Outfall project requires a lot of permitting

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jacob's Meadow Outfall Update — It's been a while since we have discussed what's happening on this important project. You may remember that Town Meeting approved the funds to rebuild the walls of the channel alongside the Legion building and for the total reconstruction of the harbor-side tide gates to improve the flow of water in either direction through the channel.

The dual goal of this project was to assist in restoration of the Jacob's Meadow salt marsh and at the same time reduce the possibility of flooding in Jacobs Meadow.

The preliminary engineering work was completed last year, which allowed us to enter into the permitting phase. Since this project involves construction in the harbor as well as in a salt marsh, numerous permits are necessary. The first permit required is from the Cohasset Conservation Commission, which also requires, as a part of its process, approval from the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection. A Notice of Intent (NOI) was filed with the Cohasset Conservation Commission in November of 2008 and approval with an Order of Conditions was issued on Dec. 12, 2008.

The next two required approvals are from of the Army Corps of Engineers and the issuance of a Chapter 91 Waterways License. There are two ways these approvals could have been requested; in parallel or serially. We were advised by our engineers that serially, would probably result in a smoother application and a lower total cost. The reason is that each of these organizations has their own way of doing things and can (and usually will) require us to make changes to our design or other submittals. Trying to handle two independent organizations, each requesting changes to the same set of documents could be very difficult to manage. Each change by one organization could potentially force us to resubmit to the other organization. It would be like a game of ping-pong, just bouncing back and forth, all the while racking up engineering costs and lengthening time. We think you get the picture!

Channel with Collapsed Wall.

Now, what's the current prognosis? Best case, might be construction this fall. We'll keep you updated.

So, we chose the serial approach. The Town applied to The Army Corps of Engineers (ACOE) on Jan. 2nd, 2009 and, after a lot of back and forth exchanges with numerous changes to our data, approval was obtained on May 19, 2009. Based on the final approval from the ACOE, a data package was prepared for the Chapter 91 Waterways License. This was submitted to the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection in May of 2009. The Chapter 91 License can take as long as 200 days for approval, but the Town is hopeful that with the work we have done with state environmental agencies and their knowledge of the Legion channel situation as well as with the walls' partial collapse, this time will be shortened.

Now, what's the current prognosis? Best case, might be construction this fall. We'll keep you updated.

Joy Place Island — As a part of the Little Harbor Water, Sewer and Drainage Project the island at the top of Joy Place at North Main Street will be improved. The first step will be the addition of granite curbing around the island. This will set the area off and make it stand out as one of Cohasset's Memorial Islands. Depending on the weather, the curbing will be installed the week of July 27th. Later, a new tree and other plantings will be added to the island.

Rocky Lane Sidewalk - Big News! — Ever since the new Rocky Lane Bridge was constructed, the residents have been asking for a sidewalk so their children could have a safe passage to North Main Street. Even though the MBTA would not provide the sidewalk, the Town has agreed to construct one in space that the MBTA was to provide. However, the MBTA placed their guardrail such that there was not adequate room for the sidewalk to be constructed. That was changed about a month ago when the MBTA finally moved the guardrail where it should have been placed in the first place. Now, it's up to the Town to do its sidewalk thing. After the contractor finishes installation of the Joy Place island curb, mentioned above, he will move to Rocky Lane and begin preparing the base for a sidewalk. Paving the sidewalk will follow shortly thereafter. We should have sidewalk ready for use before school resumes.

Other Street Paving — You may have noticed that some of the paving recently laid on S. Main and Beechwood streets has not held up very well. This past week we met with the contractor who did the paving and he has agreed to repave the faulty areas. During the Week of July 20th the will be cold planing the top of the affected roads and repave them. The roads involved are:

- S. Main, southbound lane, from Sestito Lane to crosswalk near 197 South Main St.
- Beechwood St., eastbound lane, from Norman Todd Rd. to the railroad tracks.
- Beechwood St., eastbound lane, for 150 feet starting at the Beechwood St. at King St. island
- Keep your eyes open when traveling in these areas next week. The repaving operation will slow traffic a bit.

An Important Reminder — Please keep in mind that the entire Common area and North Main Street from the Community Center to Jerusalem Road will be undergoing major reconstruction starting next week and extending through August 5th. Local traffic will generally be permitted. Ripley Road is a suggested detour for through traffic.

Calvin Coolidge: a thrifty man with words

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Calvin Coolidge: July 4, 1872-Jan. 5, 1933.

Born on the 4th of July in a small Vermont hill town, he was a shy and quiet boy, rather frail in health. Both his mother and sister died while he was young. His father, a hard-working farmer, also taught school, owned a general store and was a justice of the peace.

At Amherst College in Massachusetts he excelled in debate and public speaking, graduated with honors, and soon after apprenticed himself to a law firm (a practical choice at the time for would-be lawyers short of funds). After opening his own law office in Northampton in 1898, he practiced transactional law, believing that he could best serve his clients by staying out of court.

In person he was reticent, a thrifty man with words. His proposal to his future wife Grace: "I'm going to marry you." Before an audience, however, he was persuasive, often eloquent. Like Abraham Lincoln, his reputation as a diligent and honest country lawyer helped him win local elections.

As Governor of Massachusetts, he gained local praise and criticism, but, even more important, national media coverage, by calling out the National Guard in 1919 to end the policemen's strike in Boston. Chided later by Labor leader Samuel Gompers, he declared, "There is no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, any time." His popularity soared as newspapers across the nation applauded his defense of the public's safety and security.

August 3, 1923. Vice-President John Calvin Coolidge was in Vermont when news of President Harding's sudden death reached the family home. His father administered the oath of office at 2:47 a.m. by the light of an oil lamp in the parlor.

President Coolidge supported woman's suffrage, maternity aid, protection of child and woman workers, legislation to prohibit undercutting competition by charging less than cost, and legislation against profiteering.

As President Coolidge, he supported woman's suffrage, maternity aid, protection of child and woman workers, legislation to prohibit undercutting competition by charging less than cost, and legislation against profiteering. In 1924 he signed into law the Revenue Act, which decreased personal income tax rates while increasing the estate tax. He favored reducing government expenditures and promoted tax cuts to stimulate investment. He said, "The chief business of the American people is business." Like Ronald Reagan, he believed that government should stay out of business.

The Great Mississippi Flood of 1927 was the worst natural disaster to hit the Gulf Coast until Hurricane Katrina in 2005. Coolidge remained in Washington, saying that his visit would not accomplish anything, but would be seen as political grandstanding. Congress wanted the federal government completely in charge of flood mitigation, while Coolidge believed property owners should bear much of the costs. When Congress passed a compromise measure, however, he signed it into law.

Calvin Coolidge was a popular president, a non-interventionist at a time of economic boom. His cryptic comments made the daily news. Popular author and wit Dorothy Parker, once said to him at dinner, "Mr. Coolidge, I've made a bet against a fellow who said it was impossible to get more than two words out of you." Silent Cal's response, "You lose."

With the presidential party are: Mrs. Coolidge (wearing a white hat and standing next to the president) and Clarence W. Barron (with white beard) and Miss Jessie Bancroft (dark hat).

Although he never spent an unnecessary penny, Americans themselves were buying stocks with abandon during the "Roaring Twenties." Some people warned that if something wasn't done to slow down the boom, a depression would surely follow. Coolidge did nothing.

In his usual laconic manner he announced in 1927, "I do not choose to run for president in 1928." His comment on the choice of Herbert Hoover as his successor: "For six years that man has given me unsolicited advice – all of it bad."

Today Calvin Coolidge earns praise from those who approve of the reduction of the size of government and bears criticism from those who believe the federal government should be more involved in regulating and controlling the economy.

As far as we know, he was the only president to spend a few minutes on Cohasset Common listening to a carillon recital, before announcing to Clarence Barron, "I should certainly like to see your cows."

Launch party inaugurates season

The Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) held its 2009 launch party on July 11. The weather cooperated — Joyce Driscoll would not have brooked any dissent from Mother Nature — and the good times rolled.

A highlight this year included the debut performance of the CSC Jazz Combo. The band included John DeWaal, David Hernon, August Oddleifson, Conor Ofsthun, Ian Porter, and Mark Seraikas. Though this was their first engagement, we trust it won't be the last time we see them in action.

A mix of old and new members and friends made for a merry crew. The auction raised $7,000 for the CSC, and items on offer ranged from original oil paintings to fishing trips.

By Bob Katzen THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on one roll call from the week of July 6-10. There were no roll call votes in the Senate last week.

ALLOW BAY STATE ACCOUNTANTS TO PRACTICE OUT OF STATE (H 4159)

House 154-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would allow qualified Massachusetts certified public accountants (CPAs) to practice in other states without obtaining a license there. The measure would also make it easier for CPAs from other states to practice in the Bay State without a license.

This reciprocity legislation, already adopted by 42 states, sets up a system under which the Uniform Accountancy Act (UAA) establishes criteria that a CPA with a license from a state must meet in order to be allowed to practice in another state that is not his or her principal place of business.

Supporters said that Massachusetts is living in the past and must leap into the 21st century of national and international business and allow its accountants to work in other states. They argued that the Bay State is far too parochial in this area and is denying its accountants the right to expand and profit by serving clients in other states. They noted that technology now gives accountants the ability to do business with anyone in the United States and the world from one location without ever actually crossing state or country borders. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

2010 GOVERNOR'S RACE IS ALREADY UNDERWAY - The former Secretary of Administration and Finance under Gov. William Weld has entered the race for the 2010 Republican nomination for governor. Harvard Pilgrim Health Care CEO Charles Baker announced last week that he would join convenience store magnate Christy Mihos in seeking the GOP nod to run for the state's top slot. On the other side of the aisle, Gov. Deval Patrick's top aide, Doug Rubin, has left the governor's office to manage Patrick's 2010 re-election campaign. And just to make things even more interesting, Rubin's former boss, current State Treasurer Timothy Cahill, left the Democratic Party and fueled speculation that he might seek the governor's office as an independent.

COAKLEY CHALLENGES DEFENSE OF MARRIAGE ACT - Attorney General Martha Coakley filed a lawsuit against the Obama administration challenging the constitutionality of the federal Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) that defines marriage as a legal union between one man and one woman. Coakley's suit contends that DOMA unfairly excludes more than 16,000 Massachusetts married same-sex couples and their families from important rights and protections that opposite-sex couples have under more than 1,100 federal provisions. She argued that it also violates the U.S. Constitution by interfering with Massachusetts' sovereign authority to define and regulate marriage.

NONPROFITS' ENDOWMENT (S 2078) - Gov. Patrick signed into law a bill removing some of the restrictions that prohibit nonprofit organizations from spending their endowment funds. Current law bars nonprofits from spending endowments that are worth less than their original dollar value when first received by the group - a situation that is occurring regularly because much of this money is invested in stocks that have taken a beating during this recession. The new law also imposes additional duties on the managers of these charitable funds.

DIMASI'S SEAT FILLED BY FORMER AIDE - The North End's Aaron Michlewitz was sworn in as state representative to fill the seat that was held by former Speaker Salvatore DiMasi until his resignation. DiMasi has been indicted on federal charges that he received $57,000 in payments from Cognos, a Canadian software company that he helped land nearly $20 million in state contracts.

BRAND MASSACHUSETTS SEAFOOD (H 706) - The Committee on Environment, Natural Resources and Agriculture heard testimony on legislation that would create a commission to look into establishing and promoting a "buy local seafood" campaign. The plan would brand seafood caught in Massachusetts waters the way that Maine currently brands "Maine Lobsters" and Louisiana promotes "Louisiana Shrimp." The goal would be to help the state's fishing industry by encouraging consumers to buy local seafood.

CONSUMER BILLS - The Committee on Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure's agenda includes a measure requiring all packaged goods to be packaged in a manner so that they can be manually opened by the use of perforations, tabs or other means (H 270). Translation: Stores would not be allowed to sell DVDs, DVD players, headphones and hundreds of other products if they are packaged in those plastic containers that are welded shut and do not open easily like a clamshell. Supporters say that these packages are annoying, difficult and dangerous to open. Opponents say that the packaging is designed to make it difficult for thieves to remove it in the store and steal the item.

Other proposals being considered by the committee include making it a crime to price gouge during a declared state emergency and imposing up to a $5,000 fine on anyone who charges excessive prices for necessities including food, fuel and shelter (S 342); requiring local building inspectors to perform inspections and safety tests on all power-operated doors (S 143) and mandating that any antifreeze which contains ethylene glycol also include denatonium benzoate - a substance that makes the antifreeze taste bitter (H 398). Supporters say that the sweet taste of antifreeze is a major reason for its fatal ingestion of antifreeze by young children, pets and wildlife.

HEALTH NOTES

Setting record straight on Tylenol

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

If a person happens to drink as well, their liver is now compromised and not detoxifying the Tylenol normally.

Last week, Health Notes appeared before receiving a complete review and contained several errors in fact. We were trying, unsuccessfully, to sort out the various pain relievers now taken so abundantly and provide appropriate warnings for their use, and we inadvertently referred to Tylenol as a non-steroidal anti-inflammatory or nsaid. Tylenol is not an nsaid, but contains acetaminophen, the target of recent controversy. Acetaminophen found in Tylenol, as well as other medications such as Nyquil, Excedrin, apparently need improved dosage labeling or perhaps a lowering of the maximum daily dosage. Also in the mix are prescription medications, Percocet and Vicodin, both of which contain Tylenol.

An example of the controversy: "Cases of acute liver failure and deaths related to acetaminophen have been increasing," said internist and pharmacist Judith Kramer – also an associate professor of medicine at Duke University Medical Center.

Asked if there's any truth to the claim that "hundreds of people die and tens of thousands more visit the hospital each year because of acetaminophen poisoning" experts indicate these numbers are about right. An FDA memo reports 'an estimated 110,000 emergency room visits a year are related to acetaminophen, and several hundred cases of acute liver failure are also reported. Also "acetaminophen is the number one reason people need liver transplants for acute liver failure" said Ronald Busuttil – chairman of surgery and chief of liver transplantation at UCLA Medical Center. The conclusion is, at this point, that no more than 4,000 mg a day should be ingested. Also, do not combine drugs that all contain even small amounts of acetaminophen, also called paracetamol.

The problem with Tylenol and other medications containing acetaminophen is that the substance, by itself, is a prescription drug and sometimes only a small amount more will be enough to damage the liver. Making the calculation about how much acetaminophen to ingest should be left to a professional having sufficient knowledge and experience with drug behavior to make a judgment about the specific drug and its effect on you.

Both children and adults are at risk from Tylenol. For example, a head cold gives one a bad headache. Tylenol is taken for pain. Later, coughing occurs so a Nyquil is taken before bed resulting in a double dose of Tylenol. If a person happens to drink as well, their liver is now compromised and not detoxifying the Tylenol normally. In children the different mixtures for cold and flu meds have continually been adding more and more of the drug as an ingredient.

While the FDA mulls over what actions to take, experts recommend some simple measures: Common sense comes in handy again. Basically, don't abuse the drug. Use only as directed. Do not take more than the recommended total within a 24-hour period and ask your doctor specifically about taking Tylenol or other painkillers in addition to your other prescribed medication. And keep your prescription current. Discontinuing products containing acetaminophen may require successive gradually decreased dosages with time, a practice called tapering, usually controlled by successive changes in prescription amounts.

The more fundamental problem is that one gets into the habit of doing things one way. Something changes and suddenly you have to get in the habit of doing it another way. Now, when drugs are so widely available, the government has defined their use more rigorously, in part to assist law enforcement to deal with those who use "recreational drugs," but mainly to alleviate specific disorders without harm to the patient. In these days when our phones require intense scrutiny and good eyesight, our televisions require a few additional boxes to work right, and our cars need more electricians than mechanics, we have to expect to have to change the way we think about pills.

So, we have to do our homework and consider the many new developments in medicine as well as those with which we believe we're familiar. When you talk to a doctor, tell him about all the drugs you're taking including supplements (vitamins and herbs). Be sure to and tell your doctor about medications prescribed by doctors other than the one you're seeing.

'Golden' legacy for Cohasset Sailing Club

SAILING CLUB

ELIZABETH MURRY

When the idea of the club first took hold, Irwin went door-to-door with a coffee can soliciting funds to help start the club...

On Monday, July 13, the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) learned that Irwin M. Golden, one of its founders, died on July 9 at his summer home in Falmouth. Bill Golden, his only son, says that his father's two strongest traits were his affinity for the sea and his egalitarian spirit, and that these are reflected in the CSC's mission of making sailing accessible for all the town's residents.

When the idea of the club first took hold, Irwin went door-to-door with a coffee can soliciting funds to help start the club, and almost 50 years later the CSC stands as one of his proudest achievements. His youngest daughter Meredith Golden adds that: "He wanted to share his love of the sea and thrill of sailing with all the children in Cohasset. Last week, Dad passed away peacefully in his sleep at the age of 96. Following his wishes, we have requested that in lieu of flowers that friends and family send donations to the Cohasset Sailing Club."

We extend our condolences to the family, and are most touched and gratified that Irwin remembered the club in this fashion. It seems fitting that next year marks the CSC's golden anniversary. We will do our best to continue the legacy he helped to begin and to pass on an even stronger CSC to the next generations. We encourage you to read Irwin's obituary in this week's Cohasset Mariner (page 29) or in the Boston Globe — he really lived a wonderful life, and our town is the richer for his having contributed so permanently to its betterment.

The high cost of lawn watering

In summer, water usage in most towns almost doubles primarily due to lawn watering. Towns work feverishly, bringing water to stringent drinking water standards to meet the summer demand.

"I wonder if people ever really stop to think that they are putting drinking-quality water on their lawns," said Jared Hill, Cohasset's water superintendent.

Not only are people putting drinking water on their lawns, the cost of producing and delivering drinking quality water comes at a quickly escalating cost. For example, one chemical that Norwell and many other towns use to adjust pH levels is potash. Norwell normally uses approximately 40,000 gallons of potash per year, which in 2007, cost $1.75 per gallon, and today, just two years later, costs $5.25 per gallon.

Towns have to add many other chemicals to bring water to drinkable standards, such as chlorine for disinfection, aluminum sulfate for removing color, potassium permanganate for oxidizing manganese and iron, and fluoride to prevent tooth decay.

Ken Morse, water quality technician for Aquarion Water Co. that serves Hingham, Hull and parts of Cohasset, notes, "Many chemicals that we use are petroleum based so when the price of oil goes up, so does the chemical's cost. Added to that is the increasing cost of diesel fuel to transport the chemicals to our plant in big 18-wheelers."

To deliver drinkable quality water to each household is an incredibly energy intensive process. In most towns, the water department is the largest energy user.

Cohasset has to spend tremendous amounts of money trying to deal with the organic material that so often comes with a surface water system. Lily Pond, the town's reservoir, is chock full of organic material, which interacts with chlorine, leaving unhealthy byproducts. Hill said, "Cohasset has been contemplating the purchase of an innovative new system, called the Miex System, which removes organic material, and consequently reduces the undesirable byproducts. This system can cost around $5 million, because we have to retrofit our plant." He noted that fewer chemicals would be needed to treat the water with the Miex System, but that the payback would be a long time out.

Many other costs go into creating drinkable quality water. Constant lab tests and tracking the results require plenty of staff time, as does the daily adjusting of the chemical inputs. Add to that the cost of building and maintaining the water distribution system, and as David Tower of Weymouth said, "Hopefully people will begin to realize the tremendous amount of human effort, chemicals and energy required to bring them the water they are putting on their grass."

Debbie Cook, manager of the Greenscapes program at the North and South Rivers Watershed Association said, "Rather than irrigate our lawns with precious drinking water, there are many, many alternatives that are very simple, cost-effective and environmentally friendly that can conserve our water." A few ideas include reducing lawn area by replacing it with native plants, using rain barrels and cisterns to capture free roof runoff water, and altering watering habits. "The best time to water grass is at dawn. Watering in the middle of the day is actually harmful for the grass, and most of the water (our drinking water) evaporates away." Two plays brought to life

Kids star in 'Annie' and 'The Wedding Singer'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There is the old adage that two heads are better than one.

Does the same hold true that two summer plays are better than one?

The folks of the Cohasset Dramatic Club and the nearly 75 kids involved in their summer production programs are "betting their bottom dollar" it is.

Three times this weekend the musicals "Annie" and "The Wedding Singer" will come to life at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

For the first time in its six-year existence, the CDC summer program decided to do two separate productions — one for the younger set and one for teenagers.

"It's totally crazy!" exclaimed Lisa Pratt, who is directing both shows, during a few free moments between rehearsals last week. "But, it is the right thing to do for all the kids."

Pratt said the two plays allow the younger kids the opportunity to play the lead roles.

"The younger kids get to be the big cheese," Pratt said. Over 60 children, ages 8 to 13, are involved in the "Annie Jr." production. Pratt said they had tons of interest, but decided to limit the cast to a more manageable 60 kids.

"Annie Jr." is a shortened version of the original show, approximately 80 minutes in length and performed without an intermission. It has all the music that made the original play memorable: "Tomorrow," "It's a Hard Knock Life" and "Maybe."

For 10-year-old Cohasset resident Sophie Stone who plays one of the orphans in "Annie" the production is a step back in history.

"I really like it — it's like bringing you back in time for another person's story," Sophie said of the play. The costumes, the props, the dialogue take the actors and the audiences back to the period of the Great Depression, she said.

"The (musical) numbers are extravagant. There are a lot of good voices and energy, it's really fun to do on stage," Sophie gushed. Her two favorite songs to perform are "It's the Hard Knock Life" and "You're Never Fully Dressed Without a Smile."

While many are familiar with the musical "Annie," — its catchy music and optimistic red-headed orphan heroine — "The Wedding Singer" is a relatively new musical comedy recently made available to amateur groups.

"The Wedding Singer" roughly follows the plot of the 1998 movie of the same name starring Adam Sandler and Drew Barrymore, but has more music and dancing. The CDC's performance is the first time the show will appear on a South Shore stage – and is one of the first productions in the greater Boston area.

"The benefit (of splitting the shows) is the older kids have made 'The Wedding Singer' all their own," Pratt said.

The production is somewhat of a celebration of all things 1980s. The plot takes place in the mid-1980s when big hair, parachute pants and silk shirts were the height of fashion. The choreography draws from 80s, too — cast members have mastered various "Thriller" moves and the once ubiquitous "running man."

"The music is really silly and fun," said Pratt — and the cast has loved every minute of it.

The cast has had the benefit of drawing from the experiences — and photos — of a once member of an 80s band. Cohasset resident and music director (for both "Annie" and "The Wedding Singer") Mark Bono was a part of an 80s band.

"(The play) is very 80s, I love it! It's great," said Jake Plummer, 17, of Hanover. Jake plays Glenn, who he describes as a "jerk." "It is a very different role for me — never played the 'bad guy' before and I feel bad saying some of the lines."

The cast can best be described as energetic, close-knit and fun-loving. With only 14 cast members, all about the same age, the cast quickly developed a bond and took to the challenge of making the show fantastic.

"It's a music heavy show, more so than 'Grease' and 'High School Musical' so we had to take it a notch up. It's been a really good challenge and we have great choreography," said Cohasset resident Andrew Devitre, 19. "It is so much fun to do."

Devitre plays the lead role of Robbie Hart, the lead singer of a wedding band who is left at the altar.

"The Wedding Singer" packs 20 musical numbers in to its 90-minute running length.

"The opening number is really fun, and the choreography is really great," Jake said.

With that advice, make sure you're in your seat before the lights dim.

Not all has changed in Beechwood

Zoning being looked at for former hub of neighborhood

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Tucked away in a far corner of Cohasset, the Beechwood neighborhood is packed with history and marked by change.

Named for the cluster of beechwood trees the first settlers encountered in the area, Beechwood has always had a distinct identity. Acres of farmland and a small commercial center defined the area for more than a century. In the late 1800s and for a good part of the 1900s Beechwood had its own library, school, church and fire station.

Primarily because of its distance from Hingham and even Cohasset village, from its start, Beechwood was largely a separate and self-sufficient community.

Over the years, Beechwood has more and more been incorporated into greater Cohasset. The fire department was centralized in 1981 and the building moved to Scituate. When the Osgood School opened in 1927 the Beechwood elementary school house was shuttered. The Paul Pratt Memorial Library merged with the Beechwood branch in the early 1960s.

Remaining until the late 1970s was Brown's Store, a general store where customers could get everything from penny candy to bicycle parts. Until the mid-1950s, Brown's also served as the Beechwood satellite post office.

Brown's Store was located on Beechwood St. between Doane and Church Streets and the building remains there. Other small stores operated along Beechwood and Doane streets over the years included a gas station, a blacksmith shop, and a clothing factory.

When Brown's Store closed with it went the primary commercial draw of the neighborhood. While a repair shop operated out of the space for some years after, the retail component of Beechwood has long faded.

Now that the neighborhood is predominately single-family residences, the Planning Board is concerned with what could happen somewhere in the future because a portion of Beechwood near the Beechwood Ballpark remains zoned "downtown business."

Last week, lifelong Beechwood resident, Merle Brown, prompted the Planning Board to begin a discussion on the current zoning of the Beechwood section. A portion of Beechwood, near the intersections of the Church and Doane streets is zoned for commercial and retail uses.

"We are going through a very contentious hearing for a project at 8 James Lane," said Moore. A portion of the village business district is located in the James Lane neighborhood where a current single family home is today. Like the property in Beechwood, the zoning has been that way since Cohasset instituted zoning regulations in the early 1950s.

"If there ever were any intention of changing the zoning, it would probably be better to do it when we don't have an application before us," Moore said.

West Corner, a portion of the harbor area and the several lots in Beechwood all share the distinction of being downtown business zoned. The village area was zoned downtown business until two years when specific zoning bylaws were drafted for the area.

Reading from the zoning bylaw regulations, Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey listed over a dozen as-of-right uses currently possible for those lots zoned downtown business. Flower shops, farm animals, restaurants (other than fast food), repair shops, beauty salons, printing establishments and banks with a drive-thru were all allowed uses. Other uses could be allowed with a special permit from the Planning Board.

Merle Brown said his brother, Herbert, who lives at the former Brown's Store property, would like to keep that property zoned for downtown business, if any zoning changes were made. Anecdotally, Merle said his brother's telephone number is still listed as "Brown's Store."

The Brown Family owned the general store in Beechwood for almost a century. Brothers Aaron Pratt and John Pratt were the first proprietors of the Beechwood general store, they sold it to Ezra Brown, who sold it to William Webster Bates who sold it to Herbert Brown. After Herbert Brown, who was served as a Selectmen for 30 years in the early part of the 1900s, his son E. Harold Brown managed the store.

A diversity of products was sold at Brown's Store – everything from shoes to hardware to bicycle parts to gas to penny candy to cold cuts.

Merle Brown said the former owner of Cohasset Hardware used to direct customers to Brown's Store if he didn't have something in stock, then he would always say, "if Brown doesn't have it, then you don't need it."

While some members of the Planning Board indicated residents might not have a big issue with a similar general store opening in the former Brown's Store space, the fear was a large chain store like CVS could set up shop somewhere down the line.

The consensus was to begin gathering input for a possible change or tweaking of the zoning districts and/or regulations in regards to Beechwood.

"We don't have any pre-conceived ideas," Moore said. The Planning Board will be sending out letters to those in the Beechwood downtown business districts and abutters in the coming weeks.

The building that once housed Brown's Store for almost a century still stands on Beechwood and is still in the Brown family. In its heyday, the general store carried shoes, hardware, bicycle parts, gas, oil, penny candy, and cold cuts sliced to order.

A glimpse at Beechwood history

Depending on whom you ask the Beechwood area is defined in one of two ways — as ending at the Beechwood River (Bound Brook) or at the intersection of Beechwood and King streets (Reed's Corner). It includes Beechwood Street, Doane Street, Church Street, and the neighborhood developments off these streets.

- The current Mill Lane was once home to gristmill, originally built by Mordecai Lincoln, an ancestor of Abraham Lincoln.
- In the original section of the Beechwood cemetery, Beechwood resident Jared Joy is buried. At age 24, Joy traveled with two other Cohasset boys to take part in the Boston Tea Party.
- Once a centralized high school was built in the mid-1800s the older children went to the new school by "barge," an open wagon fitted with wooden benches and stools.
- The Beechwood Congregational Church was started on the second floor of the Brown's General Store in 1863. According to Merle Brown, dances and other events were held on the second floor of the store in the late 1800s.
- Brown's Store carried shoes, hardware, bicycle parts, gas, oil, penny candy, and cold cuts sliced to order.
- There was also a small convenience store on Doane Street – Tom Cumming's Variety Store. The building, about 50 yards from the intersection of Doane and Beechwood streets, had basics such as milk, bread, ice cream and candy.
- Before WWII when the now Wompatuck State Park was used as an ammunition depot, one could use the road to cut through to Hingham.
- The Beechwood Improvement Association Hall was built in 1912-1913 to "cultivate fraternal relations among the members, to encourage every social, morel and intellectual influence for the improvement of our community." The hall was used for dances, whist, minstrel shows and other meetings. For a time it served as a library as well. In 1978 the hall was sold and converted to a private residence. With the proceeds from the sale, the remaining B.I.A. members created a trust fund under the auspices of the Recreation Department for the youth of Beechwood.

E. Harold Brown, proprietor of Brown's General Store in Beechwood, holds the final sack of mail delivered to the Beechwood Post Office. Until the mid-1950s Brown's Store served as a satellite post office.

Becky Bates-McArthur, a lifelong Beechwood resident, said the area has seen a lot of change over her lifetime. She recalls being given a small amount of money on Sunday morning, some to go into the collection basket at church and some change to stop for penny candy on the way home — the story always was not all the money made it into the basket in favor of a few more pieces of candy.

As if to illustrate the relative independence of Beechwood for many years, Bates-McArthur said her position as museum director at the Historical Society's Wilson House has brought her down to the village more than ever.

"Once the banks moved up to 3A, there was really no need to come down here," she said, with the exception of paying the tax bill at Town Hall.

While Cohasset is known for its fishing and its picturesque harbor, Bates-McArthur said growing up in Beechwood she had little to do with the water or water activities.

Information in this article was from Rebecca Bates-McArthur's short history "Early Beechwood" published in "Treasury of Cohasset History" and her slideshow on the history of Beechwood presented in the mid-1990s. "Narrative History of Cohasset 1950 to 2000, Volume III" by Jackie Dormitzer.

Tough finish for Post 118

Cohasset second baseman Pat Doonan can't get the handle on the throw from the outfield as a Hobrook batter slides in with a double late in Cohasset's 12-12 tie Friday night in Scituate.

Legion Baseball

CORRESPONDENT

It was a nightmare for the Scituate/ Cohasset American Legion Baseball team.

Post 118 came into the final week of the regular season with a chance to be one of the five playoff teams in Zone 6 East and instead they stumbled to a tough end of the season finish.

"We kind of got the short end of the stick with the weather," said Cohasset coach Greg Taylor. "Everyone was going to get in at least 18 or 19 games, but we got in 16. That is playing a doubleheader this past Saturday. It is tough to miss out on an opportunity for a possible 10 points. Some of the kids have other obligations as well. It's tough to win baseball games when you run out of pitching."

How tough of a week was it for Post 118?

In their first two games they had big leads against both Holbrook and Cohasset and could only get one out of a

Hingham Bay Junior Regatta Starts the racing season

By Emily Pelo
RACING COACH

Over the past three weeks, the Cohasset Sailing Club's Race Team has been out on the water practicing and refining their racing skills. Sailboat racing is a unique sport where boats race around a set course adjusting their sails to finish in the fastest possible time. A five-minute starting sequence, using guns and horns, is used to commence a race. Once the race begins, a skipper and crew must work together using their weight and sails to get the boat around the course.

This past week, the Cohasset Sailing Club Race Team participated in the Hingham Bay Junior Regatta on July 9-10. There were three 420's, 14-foot double-handed boats, and one O'Pen Bic, a small single-handed boat.

Hingham Bay provided the perfect opportunity as a local venue for our beginning racers, Bri, Greg, John, and Derek, who sailed in their first regatta.

On Thursday we had great breeze in the morning, about 15 knots, and it died to about 6 knots in the afternoon. They were able to get off five races.

On Friday, we were delayed for about an hour because there was no wind, but it picked up to about 8 knots in the afternoon and they were able to get two more races off.

The results for the Cohasset kids were as follows: Danielle and Bri placed 39 out of 59 420s.

Their best finish was a 15th.

Major All-Stars ousted by Scituate

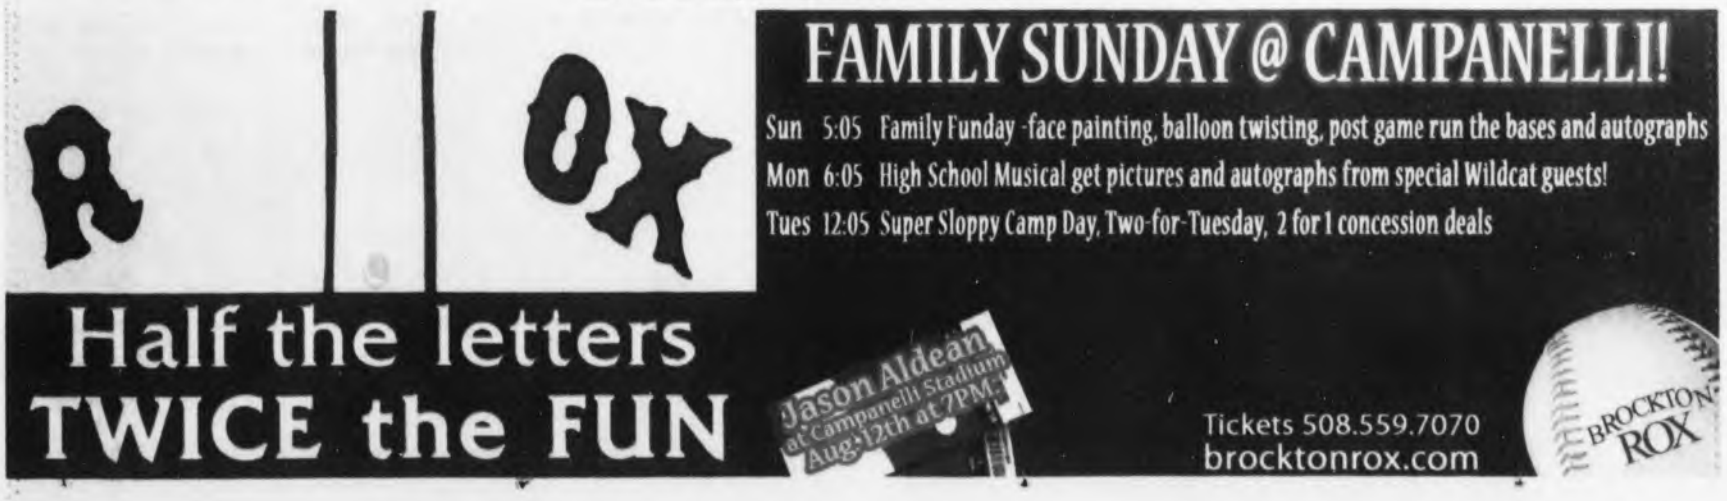
The 12-year old All-Stars ended their season Tuesday night with a tough fought 4-3 loss to neighboring Scituate at Milton High School.

Scituate got on the board first with a lead-off single and after two were out a wild pitch advanced the runner to second base; Pat O'Brien then singled him in for an early 1-0 lead.

Scituate increased their lead to 3-0 in the second on a walk a hit batter and a two run single by Scott Radding. Cohasset got a run of their own in the top of third after a single by Charlie Blackington and a double by Chris Haggerty put runners on second and third with one out.

Charlie Michalowski then grounded to third and Blackington was thrown out at home trying to score leaving runners on first and third with two outs. Cohasset managed to steal a run when Michalowski attempting to steal second, stopped and got in a run down long enough for Haggerty to score from third, 3-1 Scituate.

On the ensuing play Cohasset lost Blackington to a leg injury when he collided with Scituate's catcher sliding into home. Joey Gaziano settled down and stymied the Cohasset offense in the fourth and fifth and Scituate's Danny Sullivan took Chris Haggerty deep in the bottom of the fifth to increase Scitaute's lead to 4-3.



Cohasset didn't quit. As they had battled back through the entire tournament, they again attempted a game saving rally in their last at bat.

Jeff Powers led off with a single to center in which Scituate's Jeffrey Stillman attempted a diving catch but could not come up with the ball, giving Cohasset life.

Chris Haggerty followed with an infield hit when he beat out the throw from the short-stop to give Cohasset runners on first and second and allowing Charlie Michalowski to represent the tying run, come to the plate. Michalowski hit a two strike double scoring pinch runner Michael Lund and Cohasset traied only 4-2 and had runners on second and third with no outs.

Patrick Holway batted with the infielders in on the grass and grounded sharply to short, which threw to first for the first out and the

For Ryan, golf is child's play

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

When Ryan McGarry of Easton tees it up this week in the U.S. Kids golf tournament at Newton Commonwealth, his goal is to win a ribbon.

"You get a ribbon if you win or finish second, third or up high," said his father, Sean McGarry. "But he doesn't care if he wins. He just wants to go home with a ribbon."

He is just a kid who simply likes to play golf.

And he has been playing since he can remember and at one point, he was considered a phenom.

In the beginning Ryan had a single mindedness about golf that his parents could not understand.

It began when he was 2. His grandfather gave him a plastic golf club and he was hooked. He would hit balls for hours in his backyard.

Eventually, he got a used golf club that was cut down so he could swing it. He got pretty good.

Ryan would watch golf tournaments on television and knew who the players were and followed them and had his favorites.

Since his parents did not know much about golf, they took him to the Harmon Club, a golf-learning center in Rockland, where he took lessons from teaching professional Mike Gibson.

Then, he became a media darling.

After a story about his golfing precociousness appeared in a metro daily, the youngster appeared on several national television shows.

He was a guest on the Today Show with Matt Lauer. Ryan gave golfing tips to Today Show reporter Alexis Glick when they played at the Trump National Golf Club in New Jersey. He told Glick that his favorite golfer is Phil Mickelson, "because he smiles a lot like me."

He played in the World Junior Championship at fabled Pinehurst in North Carolina in 2006. All the other kids in the tournament knew who he was.

He shot a 37 for nine holes; good enough for third place after the first day in his age group. But he shot 40 the second day and faded into the middle of the pack. While he could hit the ball with most of the youngsters, the short game and putts, those scoring strokes, needed work.

While celebrity was a dizzying experience for both his mother and father, Ryan went with the flow and took it all in stride. He was surprised that everyone knew who he was.

"One night, before bed, he asked me, 'Dad, am I famous?' and I told him, no, not really," said the father.

When he played in these national tournaments, it opened the eyes of his parents.

His father couldn't believe how dedicated some parents and youngsters were about golf. It was a 24-hours-a-day-seven-days-a-week commitment.

"There were some amazing young players," said Sean McGarry. "They could hit the ball and had a great touch around the green."

It was almost embarrassing because Ryan had all the publicity and there were so many other youngsters just as talented.

These days it is all about fun. It isn't a 24/7 lifestyle.

"Ryan enjoys playing," said his father. "But he is not as obsessed with golf as he once was. He has other interests."

He has become a member of Red Sox Nation. "He's a huge fan and that's fine with me," said his father.

He no longer takes lessons or plays at the Harmon Club. "It's difficult taking him all the way to Rockland and back every day," said his father.

Instead, Ryan is a member at the youth-oriented MGA Links at Mamantapett in nearby Norton.

"It's a great place for him. They have a great membership deal for youngsters and he likes it over there," said Sean McGarry. Two years ago Ryan scored a hole-in-one on the 110-yard fourth hole there.

When he tees it up on Wednesday at Newton Commonwealth, he will be just one of many youngsters. Much of his media attention has dimmed, which isn't a bad thing.

Some might look at Ryan McGarry and remember when he was in the national spotlight and think he's had his 15 minutes of fame. Some might think he peaked when he was 6, which is crazy.

"He's having fun and that's all that matters," says his father. "Will he become a PGA star? Who knows? The worst case scenario is that he'll be a good golfer and there is nothing wrong with that."

Open initiation policy

Tee to Green

This is British Open week and Granite Links Golf Club is offering an interesting deal in search of new members. The club, located on the Quincy/Milton line, is giving away complimentary trips for two to London for any new individual or corporate member enrolling during the British Open.

Anyone interested in this bargain needs to contact the club by Sunday.

"The reality is, Granite Links has – thankfully – not been affected by the downturn in the economy," said club general manager, Walther Hannon III. "But as a new club, we are still actively growing our membership base, so occasionally we run limited-time promotions to generate excitement and to reward folks for acting now rather than later. It's something we like to have fun with."

It isn't the first time the club had a "major" promotion. During the US Open last month, the club added up the total score of the top 100 finishes and that amount could be deducted from the normal initiation fee. The "100" was an homage to Granite Links having recently been named to Golf Digest's list of the top 100 "Greatest Courses in America" in the publicly accessible category that also included Bethpage where the US Open was then being played.

"We've enjoyed success with the club, really since opening," said partner Thomas O'Connell of Hingham. "And success, especially in these times, is something we think should be celebrated and shared."

The London trip includes round trip airfare for two and four nights' double occupancy lodging in a five star luxury London hotel plus ground transportation to and from Heathrow and the hotel. If those who take advantage of this bargain decide to go to London in October, Granite Links will also include a pair of complimentary tickets to see the New England Patriots play the Tampa Bay Buccaneers at Wembley Stadium.

Meanwhile, LeBaron Hills members Carolyn Fucile, Rene Frye, Elizabeth Nguyen and club professional, Tom Rooney, won the Cape Cod Chapter of the NEPGA Pro-Lady at White Cliffs Country Club in Plymouth, beating a field of 22 teams.

At the club's Member-Member Championship, Dave Diamond and Darrell Daniels won the overall gross title and Jack McDonald and George Kahler were the champions of the overall net division. Ace maker O'Brien teamed up with Rick Gatto to win the B Flight Division. Carolyn Fucile and Rene Frye were victorious in the ladies division.

One of the top courses

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Geoffrey Cornish built more courses in New England than any other architect.

POQUOY BROOK

One reason for his popularity was because money was no object. If you wanted to spend X amount of dollars, he would build the course for X amount of dollars.

If you were putting up the money and wanted to be involved in the project, his ego was self-confident enough to let that happen.

That's not the way it is done today.

Even if you paid a Jack Nicklaus or Rees Jones a zillion dollars to design a course for you, you ain't tellin' him where to put a bunker. It's their project, their name is on it and they will build it the way they want to build it.

But with Cornish, he would happily invite your input.

In 1963, when the late Ray Marcos hired Geoffrey Cornish to design Poquoy Brook Country Club in Lakeville, Marcos asked Cornish to build the best public course in Massachusetts.

The two collaborated on every nuance and when the project was completed, Marcos got what he wanted.

Poquoy Brook is a jewel.

It is a course that will test the highly skilled player and it will give the less talented of us margin for error and an opportunity to make a few pars without being overwhelmed.

And Marcos loved his course.

He was a hands-on guy and if he saw golfers acting stupid, tearing up his fairways without replacing divots, he would ride up to them in his golf cart, open his wallet, give them back their green fees and tell them to leave the property at once.

Coming up the 18th green at Poquoy Brook Golf Course in Lakeville, golfers have a chance to go for the green in two if they hit a good tee shot.

He was a stickler for decorum. He initiated a two-drink maximum at the 19th hole.

He had good reason for his compassion. He and Cornish got the most out of the property and from the time it opened, it has received rave reviews and plenty of plaudits.

It received a four-star rating from Golf Digest.

For seven straight years, beginning in 1995, it was named as one of the top 10 public courses in the state.

There are so many great holes.

But let's begin at the finish. It has three fine finishing holes.

The 16th is a killer par-4, over 450 yards and the green is as testing as you will find.

The 17th is the toughest hole on the back nine. It's over 450 from the back tees and plays radically downhill with your tee shot and then uphill with your approach shot.

But the finishing holes are not the only thing that makes this course special.

The fourth hole is a short par-4 that doglegs to the left over a stream. Be careful with your tee show, you can hit it through the fairway.

You have to think your way around all 18 holes.

firstbaseman then fired home to nail Haggerty on a questionable call for the second out.

Still, Cohasset did not give up, Sam Rice hit a two out single to score Michalowski and the lead was only 4-3. Pat Federle hit a two strike single to right but Scituate's Gaziano, now playing right field, threw a bullet to third nailing Sam Rice for the final out ending Cohasset's comeback hope.

Scituate got a solid 5-2/3 innings from Gaziano on the mound, striking out seven Cohasset batters. Patrick Holway (3-1/3 innings) and Chris Haggerty (1-2/3) struck out a combined nine Scituate batters.

They had a 10-1 lead in their first game of two with Holbrook and ended up in a 12-12 tie.

That game got a little crazy when the light started fading and Holbrook appeared to be looking for the game to be stopped due to darkness.

A very long pitcher-catcher conversation riled the umpire and after multiple warnings, he had to come out to break it up. All the while the light was fading and Cohasset had runners on.

Ejections followed for Holbrook and Cohasset ended up scoring the tying runs in the dark in the last of the seventh.

They had a 4-0 lead over Zone 6 East champ Milton, but lost 5-4 in the last inning.

"We put a lot of hits together and led 10-1 over Holbrook in the fourth inning," said Taylor. "There were a lot highlights and low lights in the Holbrook game."

Brendan Doonan had three hits and Kevin Barberi had the game-tying hit for Cohasset in the seventh inning.

Derek Schwantner and Jeff Cavanero both had two hits each and Mike Signorelli had three hits for Cohasset.

"We had a 4-0 lead in the Milton game," said Taylor. "Their pitcher settled in and started getting his off-speed stuff over. It was tough loss, but their pitcher did a good job."

Tom Demers pitched a strong game for Post 118 in the Milton game.

Post 118 scored three runs in the first inning. Signorelli, Demers and Pat Doonan had RBI hits in the first inning.

Everything fell apart for Post 118 in its doubleheader on Saturday. They were minus some bodies and were defeated by both Braintree and Holbrook.

Braintree rolled to a 10-0 win in a game called after five innings.

Holbrook's Colin Gray was a one-man gang as he hit two homers and drove in 11 runs in Post 137's 22-7 smashing of Cohasset in a game called after the fourth inning.

Post 137 jumped to an 8-0 lead, but Cohasset closed the deficit to one, 8-7.

Cohasset residents ride in Pan-MassChallenge

The camaraderie shared by 5,000 cyclists, 2,800 volunteers, and thousands of supporters, is one of the reasons cyclists from 36 states and eight countries return to ride in the PMC each August.

On Aug. 1 and 2, five residents from Cohasset will ride in the 30th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC), the nation's pioneer charity bike-a-thon that raises more money than any other athletic fundraising event in the country. They will be among the more than 5,000 cyclists who will ride with the collective goal of raising millions of dollars for lifesaving cancer research and care for adult and pediatric cancer patients at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund.

PMC riders are between 13 and 85 years of age. Many riders are seasoned cyclists or tri-athletes, while others are PMC weekend warriors, having trained for this event alone. PMC cyclists are unified in the most important ways – they are driven to raise money for cancer research and they love the PMC.

The PMC is all about heart and soul. Doctors ride along side their patients; friends and family members ride in honor of loved ones lost to, or battling, cancer. Nearly 300 cancer survivors will ride to give back and give thanks for being given a second chance.

During PMC weekend, individual cyclists become part of one family. The camaraderie shared by 5,000 cyclists, 2,800 volunteers, and thousands of supporters, is one of the reasons cyclists from 36 states and eight countries return to ride in the PMC each August.

No other athletic event raises or contributes more money to charity than the PMC. Since 1980, the PMC has raised more than $240 million for cancer research and care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund. Last year, the PMC gave 100 percent of every rider-raised dollar directly to the Jimmy Fund, a rate of fundraising that is nearly unequaled within the more than $2 billion athletic fundraising event industry. The PMC generates more than 50 percent of the Jimmy Fund's annual revenue and is Dana-Farber's largest single contributor. PMC funding is considered "seed money;" it allows researchers and doctors to finance innovative experiments and conduct initial trials to qualify for federal funding.

The Pan-Massachusetts Challenge is a fully supported bike-a-thon — with food and water stops, mechanical and medical assistance, luggage transportation, and lodging — that runs through 46 cities and towns across Massachusetts. Cyclists choose from seven routes of varying mileage designed to cater to all levels of cycling strength and time availability. Two-day rides include the original 190-mile Sturbridge to Provincetown route; 180-mile Sturbridge-Bourne-Wellesley route; 163-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Provincetown route; or the 153-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Wellesley route. One-day riders cycle the 110-mile Sturbridge-Bourne route, the 84-mile Wellesley-Bourne route, and the 47-mile Wellesley-Wellesley Sunday loop. Cyclists are required to raise between $1,000 and $4,200 to ride in the PMC, depending on the chosen route, yet the average PMC cyclist raises more than $6,000. This commitment to the fundraising portion of the PMC journey is a testament to riders' dedication to the cause and their belief in the PMC mission.

The PMC is sponsored by the Red Sox Foundation and Overstock.com. To become a virtual rider, or make a financial contribution to a rider from your town, visit www.pmc.org or call (800) WE-CYCLE. Checks can be made payable to PMC, 77 Fourth Ave., Needham, Mass. 02494.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 13, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your Aries leadership qualities can help bring order out of all that confusion, whether it's on the job or in the home. But be careful to guide, not goad, others into following you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Applying a more personal view to a job-linked issue could help provide better insight into those persistent problems. Use your keen Taurean logic to cut through the double-talk.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Taking some time off could be the best way to get through that seemingly endless round of demands. You'll return refreshed and ready to tackle things from a new perspective.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Restoring a sagging professional relationship takes a lot of effort. By all means, state your position. But also make sure you pay close attention to the other person's point of view.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A hot prospect intrigues the Big Cat, who is always on the prowl for a promising investment. But be careful that this "promise" has a chance of being kept. Check it out more carefully.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A friend could use some of your compassion and concern. If he or she doesn't ask for help, be sure you step up and make the first move. Also, check out a new career possibility.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might have difficulty getting your opinions heard because of all the noise being made by the other side. But hang in there. Others should line up with you once they learn the facts.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Offering to help a colleague is commendable. But before you commit your time and effort, check to see if that person's situation is all that he or she has led you to believe it is.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You should soon be seeing positive results from your recent efforts on behalf of a family member. On another matter, check that you have all the facts regarding a job assignment.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your aspects favor closer family relationships this week. Take time for visits, whether in person, by phone, by mail or in cyberspace. Let them know how important they are to you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A missed opportunity isn't always a negative. Maybe your instincts are telling you not to rush into something you "thought" was worthwhile. Make time for family this weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your sense of humor helps you get through a tricky situation. But some stick-in-the-muds might not be so willing to make the changes that you and others agree are necessary.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Irwin Morton Golden

Irwin Morton Golden

Fort Lauderdale, FL – Irwin Morton Golden, 96: Devoted to his Family and His love of the Sea Falmouth-Irwin M. Golden passed away peacefully at "Golden Sands" his Falmouth summer home. Born in Dorchester, MA, Irwin lived much of his life in Cohasset MA and Falmouth MA and has resided in Fort Lauderdale since 2003. Living each day to the fullest, Irwin's life spanned nearly a century of great change in America. The son of Albert and Edith Golden, Irwin grew up in Dorchester in an era where teams of four horses pulled belching fire wagons through the crowded streets and Boston was strictly divided by ethnic neighborhoods and tribal politics. He lived through the Great Influenza, two World Wars and the Great Depression to participate fully in the success and prosperity of his family and his country.

Irwin devoted his life to family, hard work and his love of the sea. Working from the age of 12 when he served as a cashier at the Palm Garden in Hull, Irwin also worked at other family enterprises such as Paragon Park in Hull, the Black Rock House in Cohasset, the Old Venice Restaurant in the New England House in Boston's North End and the Chateau Basque in the South End. Graduating from Boston Latin School at 16, Irwin went on to graduate from Yale College in 1933 and Harvard University Law School in 1936. Although the Great Depression made it difficult to begin the practice of law, Irwin worked as an unpaid associate for a Boston Trial lawyer and had just begun private practice when WWII was declared and he enlisted in the United States Coast Guard. A disabled veteran, Irwin continued to serve his country and to save lives by building ships in Hingham Shipyard and serving in the Home Guard. Later Irwin joined the USCG Auxiliary, providing his boats for patrol first out of Woods Hole on Cape Cod and then out of Fort Lauderdale and fully qualifying as crew, even after age 90, by conducting offshore drills including jumping off and swimming around the patrol boat.

Known as the "Perry Mason" of the South Shore and colorful in his snappy bow ties and jutting cigarette holder, Irwin practiced law as a "country attorney" out of his Hingham office for almost 60 years with cameo appearances in famous murder trials, a kidnapping and several spectacular society divorces. Even the famous attorney F. Lee Bailey was known in the heyday of his career to call Irwin for his advice and counsel.

Irwin was also committed to serving his community as a founder of the Cohasset Sailing Club, as a Commander of the American Legion Satuit Post, an active member of the Cohasset Rotary Club, the Cohasset Planning Board, the Masonic Lodge of Hull, and the Norfolk and Plymouth County Bar Associations.

Irwin (which means "lover of the sea") began his 96-year love affair with the sea early in life winning swimming races at Sandy Beach in Cohasset and captaining his yachts from New England to the Caribbean. Irwin's love of the sea also inspired the preservation of the Nantucket Lightship (WLV612), a project which he enthusiastically and actively supported.

With a keen zeal for the good life, he heartily enjoyed food, drink and fast cars starting when he borrowed his father's Pierce Arrow at age 14 for a night of dancing at Broad Cove. His passion continued from his first model T to Porsches, Mercedes, an Alfa Romeo and a Rolls Royce.

Irwin married his former wife Elizabeth B. Oakman in 1945 and together they raised three children in Cohasset. Irwin will be missed by many, but most specially by his beloved and devoted sisters Dorothy Rubin, Portland ME and Daphne Glassman, Falmouth MA; his three children and their spouses: Jane C. Krone (& Peter), Oak Hill VA, William B. Golden (& Kristen), West Falmouth, MA and Meredith Golden (& Robert Chen), New City NY; his Grandchildren: Brigham (& Lynn), Bethany, and Braden Golden; Elizabeth, Rebecca, and Philip Krone; and Bryce and Kathryn Golden-Chen; his great grandchildren Zella and Lazar Golden; and many cousins, nieces, and nephews. He is predeceased by his parents, Albert and Edith Golden and his brother William Golden.

Services will be held at McNamara's Funeral Home in Cohasset, MA visiting hours to be held Wednesday July 15 from 6-9PM. A memorial at a date to be announced will also be held at his home in Fort Lauderdale, FL. Donations in lieu of Flowers may be sent to the Cohasset Sailing Club, PO Box 111 Cohasset MA 02025.

Maurice E. Hart Jr.

Maurice E. Hart Jr.

COHASSET – Maurice E. Hart Jr., age 77, of Cohasset, formerly of Dorchester, founder of Hart Brothers Catering and Lantana and a devoted husband of 53 years to Joanne Sullivan Hart, peacefully passed away after enduring a long battle with cancer in his home in Cohasset on Sunday, July 12, 2009.

The son of working class Catholic immigrants, Maurice grew up with 3 brothers and 2 sisters in St. Brendan Parish, Dorchester. He graduated from Boston College High School, Boston College and then served as an officer in the 82nd Airborne Division.

His service experience, education, self-confidence and strong work ethic enabled Maurice and Joanne to start Hart Brothers Catering when he was 23 years old. With the success of the catering business, Maurice and Joanne opened the doors of Lantana, a large function facility in Randolph that was capable of serving 1,800 meals at one time.

Maurice worked closely with his best friend, business partner and wife, Joanne. Together they reared 7 children: Charlene Hart of Cohasset, Michael O'Hart and his wife, Aline of Scituate, Mary and her husband, John Spillane of Norwell, Joseph Hart of Quincy, Brenda Hart of Duxbury, Kathleen Hart and her husband, David Shapiro of Falmouth, ME and Paul Hart of Cohasset. Maurice experienced the joy of watching his family blossom. He leaves behind his greatest legacy of 17 grandchildren and his first great-grandchild.

Influenced by his working class roots and values, he hosted large cookouts for The Italian Home for Children, helped in soup kitchens and food distribution centers for the needy. Maurice served as President of the Massachusetts Restaurant Association. Upon retirement, he volunteered his time driving patients to hospitals in Jupiter, Florida, and tutoring middle school Hispanic children. Maurice enjoyed traveling with Joanne and friends as well as bridge and golf and was an avid reader. His family and friends will miss Maurice's genuine kindness, his loving generosity and his quick-witted sense of humor, which was always followed by a hearty laugh. His life's journey was enriched by his soul mate, Joanne, who walked and worked with him over their married years, offering support and love that nourished his joy and success.

A Funeral Mass will be celebrated on Saturday, July 18, 2009 at 10:30 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours Friday, 4-8 p.m. at the Hart residence, 99 Atlantic Avenue, Cohasset. Get ready to 'party with Marty'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Martin Short will perform at the Wilbur Theater in Boston July 17.

Martin Short hopes that the people who come to see him Friday night at Boston's Wilbur Theatre will feel like they're at a house party – albeit one with a special guest.

"I love jumping up on the piano at the opening and just being a jerk. That's when the party starts. I'll do some singing. I'll do some dancing. It will all be loose, filled with absurdity, and done entirely without sentimentality. It's just a party with Marty."

And perhaps a few other familiar faces.

"I'll be doing several of my characters, including Ed Grimley, Jackie Rogers, and Jiminy Glick," said the Canadian-born Short by telephone from his vacation home on Lake Rosseau three hours north of Toronto last week. "I like all my characters, but I probably like Jiminy the best because it's completely improvised and I like how mean he can be and still get away with it. He is a weird one for me. I just talk. I don't know what I'm saying and I get to use expressions that I never use. It's kind of perverse."

The portly talk show host may not be very nice to his guests but he has been very good to Short, who created the character not long after hosting his own eponymous chat-fest a decade ago.

"Jiminy Glick is just one of those guys who you see in life where you say, 'How could they possibly have gotten to where they are?' When I created him, I was doing a talk show so I put him in show business. He isn't really based on anyone from LA, though. Jiminy Glick is more like a guy in our neighborhood in Hamilton, Ontario, who had this high voice that could also go very low. He owned a movie theater and he told all of us kids that if we stayed off his lawn for a year, we'd get free movie tickets."

Short – who now makes his home in Los Angeles with Nancy Dolman, his wife of 29 years, and their three children, Katherine, Oliver, and Henry – had no reason to think then that he would one day be selling movie tickets as the star or films like "Three Amigos" and "Mars Attacks!" Indeed, after he graduated from Canada's McMaster University, Short had his eye on a career in social work. Those plans quickly changed, however, when he was cast in a 1972 Toronto production of "Godspell" that also featured Victor Garber, Gilda Radner, Eugene Levy, Dave Thomas, and Andrea Martin, with Paul Shaffer as music director.

With encouragement from his McMaster classmates Levy and Thomas, Short soon found work in other stage productions and on television. He joined the pair in the Second City improvisational troupe in 1977 and later appeared on the Second City Television or SCTV series which aired in both Canada and the U.S. At SCTV, Short – who won a shared Emmy Award for writing – created many characters which he brought with him to NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live" in the 1984-85 season, including one particular nerd who does his hair with more than just a dab of Brylcreem.

Martin Short

"I first did Ed Grimley at Second City as a contestant in a game show sketch with Catherine O'Hara, then I brought him with me to SNL. The trick of doing Ed Grimley is just being able to live up to his entrance. These days, I think of Ed as living in the home for characters who were popular in the '80s, in the room next to Joe Piscopo."

In between films and television, the 59-year-old Short always returns to the stage. On Broadway his credits include "The Goodbye Girl," the 1999 revival of "Little Me," which earned him a Tony Award, and "Fame Becomes Me."

"Starring on Broadway, with a big Broadway opening and all the other trappings is something right out of Damon Runyon. It's just that cool," according to Short, who acknowledges that, outside New York, he prefers to steer clear of anything involving eight shows a week.

"It is ideal if you can go out about four times a month. That way you never lose your rhythm or the confidence you get from appearing before a live audience. I've never stopped working live. I don't like the idea of touring in a show and having eight shows a week, though, because then I'd have to spend my day off laid out like Stalin."

Martin Short will at the Wilbur Theatre, 246 Tremont St., Boston, on July 17. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-745-3000 or go online at thewilburtheatre.com.

'True' to form

Nate Corddry returns to where it all began

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Weymouth native Nate Corddry will perform in "True West" at the Williamstown Theatre Festival through July 26.

Actor Nate Corddry was still in college the first time he headed to the Berkshires to spend the summer as an apprentice at the Williamstown Theatre Festival, a regional company that, over the years, has attracted everyone from Tennessee Williams to Joanne Woodward, Austin Pendleton, Blythe Danner, and Dianne Wiest to the campus of Williams College. A decade later, Corddry – who acknowledges knowing little about the legendary theater before that first, fateful summer – is a professional actor with film and television credits about to begin his eighth season with Williamstown, this time as one of the stars of Sam Shepherd's "True West" which opens this week.

"Growing up in Weymouth, I'm pretty sure I never even heard of Williamstown. I never saw any professional theater as a kid, except maybe a production of 'Cats' at the Wang when I was 10," recalled Corddry by telephone last week.

That all began to change for Corddry – whose older brother, Rob Corddry, is a comedian and actor best known for his work on Comedy Central's "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" – upon graduation from Weymouth High School in 1995 when he headed to Colby-Sawyer College in New Hampshire to major in communications.

"The summer after my junior year, I had a job all lined up to paint houses with a friend of mine. Then a drama professor told me that, instead of painting houses, I should apply for the Williamstown Theatre Festival apprentice program. I did, I was accepted and the next thing I knew I was driving my 1992 Ford Escort hatchback to the Berkshires. What really drew me to Williamstown in the first place was that it attracts the best of the best in terms of not only actors, but also costume, lighting, and sound designers. The year that Gwyneth Paltrow won her Oscar, in 1998, she went to Williamstown that summer to do a play."

That apprenticeship – which saw Corddry do everything from reading lines with actors to hanging lights for the lighting designers – led him to return to Williamstown in its act one and non-equity acting companies following his 2000 graduation from Colby-Sawyer. It also led him to an important life and career decision.

"I had always planned to go to graduate school for acting and I got a full-ride scholarship to the University of Wisconsin at Madison. I had signed the papers and then I changed my mind. I can still remember calling my father from Williamstown and telling him, 'Dad, I'm skipping graduate school and heading straight to New York.' Luckily, my brother Rob was already there and he let me stay on his couch."

When he wasn't asleep on that sofa, Corddry was going on auditions. Before long, he landed small parts on daytime ("Guiding Light") and primetime ("Law & Order: Criminal Intent") television and as a stand-by Benjamin Braddock in the national tour of "The Graduate," starring Lorraine Bracco, which played Boston's Colonial Theatre in 2004. Corddry took over the male lead in that production when Morgan Fairchild became Mrs. Robinson.

In 2006, Corddry had a featured role in NBC-TV's much-anticipated, ultimately short-lived Aaron Sorkin series, "Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip." The exposure of even a single season on network television led to roles in feature films including "The Nanny Diaries" and "The Ugly Truth," which opens nationwide on July 24. Corddry, who now makes his home in Los Angeles, was seen this past season on Showtime's "The United States of Tara," and recently completed work on a pilot for HBO called "The Wonderful Maladys," with Sarah Michelle Gellar. While he waits for word whether or not that series will get picked up, Corddry is quite content to be back in the Berkshires doing a play that has long been on his agenda.

"My brother Rob and I had talked about doing 'True West' forever, but never seriously. When I came back to Williamstown last summer to do "Not Waving," with some of my own success, I brought the idea of Rob and I doing 'True West' to Williamstown's artistic director Nicholas Martin. We did a reading of the play for him last summer and, in December, I was told the play was a go for this summer. In April, Rob signed to shoot a film called "Hot Tub Time Machine" in Vancouver this summer, so he had to drop out of 'True West.'"

"This is just a ferocious rock and roll show for boys to do," says Corddry of the play which debuted at San Francisco's Magic Theatre 29 years ago this month before moving to The Public Theater in New York and later being filmed for PBS with John Malkovich and Gary Sinise. "It's a totally bad-ass play that Rob and I really wanted to do together. When my brother pulled out, however, for me it became all about forgetting his line readings and losing his voice from my head so that I could prepare to work with another actor."

With Rob Corddry off on a film set in Canada with Chevy Chase, film and television actor Bradley Cooper ("The Hangover") was signed for "True West," but soon he also opted out in favor of a film project. Stage actor Paul Sparks ("Take Me Out") stepped in to replace him in Shepherd's drama about a sibling rivalry between two estranged brothers. The cliché about the third time being a charm seems to be working on the younger Corddry.

"Paul has a kind of cult status in New York. He is a very well-respected actor with an amazing Broadway pedigree. He is so good in the role that I have forgotten all about my brother, although you can't print that," says Corddry with a laugh.

Nate Corddry will appear in "True West" at the Williamstown Theatre Festival, on the Main Stage in the '62 Center for Theatre and Dance of Williams College, 1000 Main St., Route 2, Williamstown, through July 26. For tickets and information, call 413-597-3400 or go online at wtfestival.org.

•••Lacrosse•••

Defense

NAME: Jack Murphy
SCHOOL: Cohasset
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Goalie
STATS: Murphy, a first-year starter in net, stepped up in big games, with his best efforts against Xaverian Brothers, Norwell, Duxbury and Scituate. He finished the season 16 wins, 6 losses, 307 saves only allowing 114 goals against for 74percent save average. He was also a South Shore League All Star.

NAME: Pat Johnston
SCHOOL: Norwell
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Goalie
STATS: This kid is downright filthy, and in sports vocabulary, that means he's phenomenal. Johnston, a two-time South Shore League all-star, made 297 saves this year for the Clippers. He allowed slightly over 6 goals per game, and he even chipped in to help the offense, dishing out more than half dozen assists.

NAME: Kevin Lydon
SCHOOL: Braintree
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Midfield/Attack
STATS: This 5-11, 175-pound dynamo was a team captain and leading scorer for the Wamps. He had 77 goals and 44 assists for 121 points. He was a Braintree Forum Athlete of the Boston. For the second consecutive year, he was a first-team Bay State Conference All-Star ... Also a four-year varsity athlete on the Wamps' golf and hockey teams.

NAME: Kyle Weller
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Defense
STATS: Outstanding defenseman was a Patriot League All-Star and had one of his best games of the year in Hingham's Division 2 quarterfinal when he shut down Reading All-American Jim Queeney to just two points, a goal and assist.

NAME: Ryan Holbrook
SCHOOL: Braintree
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Defense
STATS: This team captain was a first-team Bay State Conference All-Star selection. And one of coach Mike Stoller's most dependable players. His most memorable game was when he scored the winning goal against arch-rival Weymouth. This honor-roll student will play lacrosse at the University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth next year.

NAME: Mickey Zaverucha
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Goalie
STATS: Zaverucha certainly earned his first-ever Patriot League all-star selection in 2009. What separated Zaverucha from several other goalies in the region was his ability to read shots. He didn't just guess where the shot was going, he knew where it was headed, using his quick stickwork to pick off numerous shots on goal.

NAME: Kyle Gavoni
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Defense
STATS: Kids are named captains for their leadership, and one of Duxbury's leaders both on and off the field was Kyle Gavoni. In addition to his solid guidance as a captain, this kid used his strength to overpower attackmen. In the tournament, Gavoni came up big on numerous occasions for the Green Dragons and was one of many keys to the team's championship season.

NAME: Will Shields
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Defense
STATS: Brick wall. The beast on the backline. The last line of defense. Give Will Shields any of those nicknames because this kid was a menace to opposing teams this year. Arguably his best moment of the season came with three seconds left in the Division 1 state title game. Shields leveled a St. John's attacker two steps in front of his own goal, preventing St. John's from tying the game and giving Duxbury it sixth straight state title.

NAME: Paul McInerny
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Defense
STATS: The defensive leader and catalyst for the defense, McInerny was a force in the back all season long, keying a defense that won its second straight state title.

HONORABLE MENTION

Mike Fanning, Jr. Norwell	Marty Neonickx, Sr., Scituate
Pat Collins, Jr., Norwell	Dean Kennedy, Sr., Scituate
Jesse Johnson, Jr., Pembroke	Jake Kearney, Jr., Duxbury
Ryan Kulik, Jr., Pembroke	Max Randall, Fr., Duxbury

NAME: Tim Curran
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Defense
STATS: A four-year starter, Curran was a huge key to Hanover's defense. "Tim is extremely fast. He was the anchor of the long poles," Hanover coach Paul Zaylor said. "He usually covered the other team's best guy and shut then down."

NAME: Austin Waldron
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Defense
STATS: Austin played a tenacious, physical, defensive game, leading the team in ground balls this season. Waldron was a Patriot League All-Star as well.

NAME: Evan Patch
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Defense
STATS: This kid couldn't have a more fitting last name. Evan was the patch that held the Marshfield defense together, covering opposing attackers and shutting down several offensive plays. His play this year earned Patch his first Atlantic Coast League all-star nod.

NAME: Matthew Sanderson
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Goalie
STATS: Sanderson tallied 16 wins and averaged nine saves per game.

NAME: Will Lundberg
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Goalie
STATS: This kid is pretty much unbreakable between the pipes for Marshfield, and in 2009, Lundberg was named to the Atlantic Coast League all-star team for the first time. If opposing teams got past Evan Patch and the core of solid Marshfield defenders, they met up with a stingy Lundberg, who led the league in saves.

NAME: Matt Palubicki
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Goalie
STATS: Played his best games when the stakes were highest. Matt had at least three game-saving goals in the State Championship game, some of the spectacular variety.

Headed to Mars

Eight-year-old gets advice from Buzz Aldrin

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Eight-year-old Marcus Rowland is shooting for the moon — or to be more correct, he's shooting for Mars.

The ambitious soon-to-be Deer Hill third-grader has a desire to travel millions of miles through space to explore Earth's planetary neighbor.

This week, Marcus had the opportunity to ask advice from one of the few humans to walk on the moon — astronaut Buzz Aldrin, the second man to walk on the lunar surface.

In an event to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the Apollo moon landing on Monday (July 20) the Museum of Science took part in a live NASA panel discussion broadcast from the Newseum in Washington D.C. Marcus' question was chosen in a Museum of Science contest where entries were submitted from the young and old. Several museums from around the country participated in the panel discussion via live video feed.

The question Marcus asks reveals his love of science and exploration — and ultimate goal: "I would like to go to Mars one day as an engineer or scientist. What should I study in school? What hobbies are good for an astronaut?"

The first thing Buzz Aldrin said in response, "I know right where you're coming from." Aldrin said when he was pursuing his doctorate of science in Astronautics from MIT he lived in North Scituate.

Instead of listing off science and math courses astronauts need to be proficient in, Aldrin focused on the qualities a person needs to become an astronaut.

"You need patience, you need to communicate with other people, you need to have, I think, something that separates you from others,' Aldrin told Marcus. He said there are many like Marcus who would like to be an astronaut and go to Mars – he needed to find a way to make himself unique.

Aldrin has been a vocal supporter of sending humans to Mars — at the right time. The retired astronaut asked Marcus how much time he plans to spend on Mars when he gets there. Marcus answered "a few days."

Aldrin said that was a normal answer, but said it may not be practical, "it may take you the better part of a year just to get there, why would you want to stay only a couple of days?"

In order to get the science to make the trip worthwhile and get a return on the investment, Aldrin said it might take 50 to 60 people to create a sustaining

Where does the wastewater go?

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's been almost two years since a shovel dug up its first scoop of Little Harbor roadways as part of the Cohasset sewer expansion. Now, thousands of shovel scoops later, the Little Harbor sewer expansion project is in the home-stretch.

The lesser seen, but no less critical, part of the sewer expansion project, is an upgrade of the Elm Street Wastewater Treatment Plant. Within the last year, the plant was upgraded in preparation for the connection of 485 Little Harbor homes and the 150,000 gallons of additional wastewater flow each day that will come with those tie-ins.

Set back on a paved driveway across from the fire station, the wastewater treatment is nearly hidden from those who don't know it's there. Richard Nye, chief operator for the plant, knows the ins and outs of the plant better than anyone else. Currently, in his 16th year of overseeing the operation of the plant, he counts the transition to the Zenon membrane water filtration system in the early 2000s as the biggest change.

With the recent upgrade, Nye said the plant is ready to take on the Little Harbor flow.

"Bring it on," Nye said. The town and Little Harbor homes have until 2012 to tie-in to the sewer plant.

Wastewater enters the plant through two pipes that come down the sewer plant driveway. When it arrives as raw sewage, the bacteria in the water are too numerous to count. When the multi-step process is complete traces of bacteria typically run from zero to single digits.

Head start on budget

Possible $1 million shortfall in fiscal 2011

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Based on Town Manager Bill Griffin's best estimate, the town could be facing more than a $1 million shortfall in fiscal 2011.

That was the sobering news at the recently formed Budget Planning Group meeting Tuesday night. Even with conservative estimates and the possibility of more revenues coming in, it was clear to the committee to make up a $1 million shortfall would be no easy task.

The Budget Planning Group, which is comprised of representatives from key committees involved in the budget process, is getting a head start on planning for the next fiscal year as well as looking at various projection models for the next five years.

Griffin's projections, which are preliminary and draft in nature, predict a 25 percent reduction in new growth from $400,000 to $250,000. He assumes a 10 percent reduction in motor vehicle excise tax, level funding for other town fees (licenses, permits etc.) and no use of free cash to reduce the tax levy.

In total, Griffin's estimates about $400,000 to $500,000 in additional revenue for fiscal 2011, which begins July 1, 2010. However, he is predicting most expense line items, from salaries to pension assessment, to rise.

"Our projected expenditures exceeds our projected revenue," Griffin said, with a level services budget.

In addition to the level services, best estimate budget, the Budget Planning Group also reviewed two other budget

Police encourage use of bike helmets

Cohasset Police Department encourages all bicyclists, skateboarders and scooter riders to use helmets while riding. Helmets are mandated for all children 16 and younger. According to the National Transportation Safety Board, bicycle helmet use can reduce the risk of head injury by 85 percent and brain injury by 88 percent. Children and adolescents between 11-14 are least likely to use a helmet, and are five times more likely to sustain injuries in a bicycle related crash than any other age group – an 11 percent compliance rate. The majority of fatal bike crashes involving children and adolescents (75 percent) could have been prevented by the use of bicycle helmets.

The majority of fatal bike crashes involving children and adolescents (75 percent) could have been prevented by the use of bicycle helmets.

Cohasset Police Department has bike helmets that are available at no charge to residents and their families. For information, ask at the front window of police headquarters.

Information on Massachusetts bike helmet laws can be found at Mass.gov/ghsb. Bicyclists are treated the same as other vehicles, and are obliged to observe all relevant traffic laws or be subject to fines in accordance with MGL Ch. 85 sec. 11B.

No child under 1 year of age may be carried on a bicycle

Children between 1 and 4 years old are required to be in a baby seat that protects the child's feet and hands.

Roadwork around the Common

The Town is preparing to completely replace the road surface on all roads around the Common down to the intersection of N. Main and Jerusalem Road.

The preliminaries for this work have now begun, with the completed grinding of the road surface starting Monday, July 27th. Paving is expected to start Monday August 3rd. All work is expected to be complete by Thursday, August 5th.

While this work is proceeding, access to these areas will be restricted and detouring around the area is recommended. Access to Town Hall and the surroundings buildings and homes will be maintained, but may be restricted from time to time as the construction crews move throughout the area.

If you have any questions, please call Tom Gruber or Mark Brennan at the Greenbush Office at Town Hall. Our Phone number is 781-383-3094

End of year transfer

At total of $8,208 was transferred from the heath insurance budget to the street lighting budget as the sole end-of-fiscal-year 2009 transfer. Town Manager Bill Griffin explained the street lighting shortfall came about because of increase in the supply rate. Under Massachusetts law, end-of-year budget transfers require the approval of the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee. The Advisory Committee voted to approve the transfer at its meeting on July 7. The Selectmen approved the transfer in a 4-0 vote.

DiNero's change in manager

The Board of Selectmen approved a liquor license change in manager for DiNero's restaurant. Frank Plotner, president and owner of DiNero's, will take over the responsibility of manager on the premises. Plotner has been a restaurant owner for the past 40 years, including Hingham Bay Club, the Ocean Club in Hull and Isaac's in Plymouth.

The Selectmen approved the change in manager in 5-0 vote.

New Recreation Comm. member appointed

Andrew Quigley of 38 Jerusalem Road is the newest member of the Recreation Commission. Several months ago, Lisa Lojacono resigned as a member of the Recreation Commission leaving a vacancy. Mid-term vacancies on an elected board or commission are filled by a vote of the Board of Selectmen and the remaining members of the elected board. Five members of the seven-member Recreation Commission were at Monday night's Selectmen meeting.

Two candidates had sent letters of interest to the Town Manager for the position — Quigley and Andrew Manning of 18 Pleasant St. However, Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said it was his understanding Manning had removed his name from consideration in an e-mail to the board.

In a short presentation, Quigley highlighted his involvement with the 11 years of volunteering with the Cohasset Soccer Club. His three children have been actively involved in recreational activities.

"I'd like to be of service to the town and I think (the Recreation Commission) fits in well with what I know," Quigley said, adding he intends to serve on the board with an open mind and common sense.

The vote to appoint Quigley was unanimous, 10-0.

Mechanical problem causes car to shimmy, shake

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

As it turned out a Hingham woman in a brown/beige-colored car, who was stopped for driving erratically southbound on Route 3A last Monday (July 13) at about 10:10 a.m., was having serious mechanical problems with the vehicle police said.

Chief James Hussey said the shocks and stabilization in the front end of the car were awry and the car had been shimmying all over the road. Police confirmed that she was on her way to drop the car off for repairs.

Responding to a concerned caller, police pulled her over after she turned onto Pond Street and stopped the car near the intersection of Cushing Street and James Lane.

Purse stolen

A woman reported to police on Tuesday (July 14) that her purse had been stolen from her shopping cart in Stop & Shop. The Stop & Shop customer did not realize her purse was missing right away and drove off. Fifteen minutes later she returned and her purse was nowhere to be seen, police said. Missing were credit cards and $20 in cash. The woman cancelled her credit cards. Police detectives are checking out the surveillance videos in the store to see if they can identify who took her purse.

MV crashes

• On Tuesday July 14 at 5:22 p.m., police said a 1997 Ford, operated by a Scituate resident, did not stop at the light at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Pond Street. Two cars had stopped at the red light and the Ford caused a chain reaction, hitting one car and pushing it into the next car. All were headed north.

The second car, a 2002 Ford, operated by a Hull resident, had to be towed. The first car stopped at the light was a 1998 Chrysler operated by a Scituate resident. There were no apparent injuries.

The operator of the 1997 Ford that caused the accident was cited for following too close and for operating after license suspension, which has a fine of $500 for the first offense, police said.

• A very small dog was hit by a car on Elm Street at about 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday (July 14). The dog was killed instantly and its owner, who was at the scene, took custody of the dog. Witnesses were not able to provide a good description of the car involved. It is not clear if the operator knew that the dog was hit, police said. The incident happened on Elm Street not far from the police station.

• Police said a trailer became unhitched from a red Chevrolet Sebring and hit a utility pole on private property by the King Jewelers plaza on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The incident took place about noon on Sunday (July 19). No citation was issued. The person involved exchanged paperwork with the property owner about taking care of any possible damage, police said.

Blackberry

An AT&T Blackberry was turned into police last Wednesday (July 15). It was found near the intersection of South Main and Summer streets.

Speeding

A 41-year-old Cohasset man was summonsed to court for speeding and operating on an expired license. Police stopped the gray Jeep Cherokee on Sohier Street near the Music Circus for going 46 in a 30 mph zone, Chief Hussey said. A computer check revealed the man's license had expired. He contacted his wife who drove the vehicle home.

$500 fine

Police issued a $500 civil citation to a young man for operating after his license had been suspended last week. Police confirmed his license had been suspended. As of July 1, those charged with operating on a suspended license (first offense) are issued $500 citations. The young man's mother took the vehicle home, police said.

Check larceny

Officers responded last Thursday (July 16) to a report of a past larceny at a local business. The employer fired an employee after suspecting him of stealing and forging checks. About $2,000 was missing, police said.

Detectives are investigating the potential of bringing criminal charges, police said.

Vandalism

Police responded to a report of a truck that had been vandalized sometime overnight Saturday (July 18) to Sunday (July 19). The owner of the truck came out in the morning and found the windshield wipers had been bent and both sides of the vehicle had been scratched with an instrument.

Police canvassed the area and are trying to determine if this was a random or targeted incident.

The first stop for the wastewater is a two-step screening process — dubbed "Lakeside" after the company that manufactures it — to separate out the larger particles in the wastewater. A screen with one-millimeter sized holes separates out the screenings (corn, strings, seeds and other solid material) and then a small blower creates a rolling boil allowing the grit (sand, egg shells, coffee grinds) to fall out. The screenings and grit are separated out into huge trash bags and taken to the transfer facility.

"It cleans out that first flush of stuff," said Nye. The one-millimeter-sized hole screens were part of the new upgrade, previously there were three-millimeter sized holes. "These screens are much better for the membranes" because they make the water that much cleaner before moving on to the next step.

From the Lakeside screening step the wastewater heads to the anoxic tank — a 40,000 tank that creates a low air environment. Inside the anoxic tank, microscopic "bugs" break down the matter that comes into the plant.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Sewer commissioner Wayne Sawchuk inspects the sewer treatment plant on Elm Street while waste is being treated in the aeration tanks at the plant.

Likening himself to a doctor, Nye says he has to keep a close eye on the amount of what he calls "bugs," the microbes that do much of the work in the system. He keeps a close on the bacteria levels to ensure they are within certain parameters during the biomechanical process.

From the anoxic tank the water heads to one of two 40,000-gallon aeration tanks, where the membranes stand ready to do their part. Using three 60-horsepower blowers (and there are two smaller back-up blowers) housed in the adjacent control room, air is used to force particles through the membrane fibers. There are 14 membranes cassettes, 14 in all, seven in each tank.

As part of the upgrade, the plant got new membranes and two more were added to the plant.

The air injected into the tank caused the water and membranes to move around — "sloughing" off the impurities in the water. The membranes are long, thin plastic tubes, eight feet tall. The membranes are dotted with smaller than microscopic holes about 0.1 micron in size — or one–10th of one-millionth of a meter.

After passing through the membranes, the wastewater is sent to its final cleansing step before being discharged from the plant to the harbor. The water passed through a ultraviolet (UV) chamber where it is further disinfected.

UV changes the microorganisms (fecal coliform etc.) DNA so they are sterile; the tiny organisms can only survive 24-hours so if they are not able to reproduce they simple die off.

Since the original membranes went in 2000, Nye said there was a marked improvement in the quality of the exiting effluent.

The two things wastewater treatment plants are required to monitor are total suspended solids and biochemical oxygen demand, or BOD. By law, the treatment plant has to remove 85 percent of both.

"Since the membranes were installed typically we do 100 percent…the first time I saw that I almost fell off my chair," Nye said.

At the end of the UV chamber, Nye scooped up a beaker of the post-process water as it awaits the final flush to the harbor. Looking at the clear water, Nye said, "that water is better than Lily Pond."

After making its way through the UV chamber, the now clean water goes into an effluent wet well then down the drive, down Elm Street and joins up with the Atlantic Ocean through duckbilled diffusers in the harbor.

The exiting water is sampled and tested on a regular basis. Three times a week the plant tests for fecal coliform and during the summer months, they test for enterococci once a week.

Currently, the wastewater treatment plant is permitted by the DEP to process 300,000 gallons per day. However, the system, with the recent upgrades, is designed to handle 450,000 gallons per day. Before the Little Harbor homes are routed to the wastewater treatment plant the town will get a new permit to reflect the upgrades to the plant.

During the summer, the plant's intake drops to about 200,000 gallons per day. The 12-month rolling average for the plant is about 240,000 gallons per day.

Overflows

The new upgrade included the addition of an overflow system to more fully clean incoming effluent in the event of an extremely high flow. Incoming wastewater that cannot be fully processed by the plant due to high flows goes through the Lakeside screening process to the anoxic tank, then is diverted to the UV chamber (essentially skipping over the aeration tank where the membranes do their job) before being sent to the harbor.

With the recent upgrades and a few storms under his belt, Nye says the plant is more than ready to begin taking on the Little Harbor flow.

"Since the new membranes went in we haven't had an overflow. We've processed in the low 900K (gallons in a day) and the membranes worked like they were doing nothing," Nye attests. He credits a combination of the new membranes (including the addition of two new ones) and the one-millimeter size holes in the screens with the vast improvement.

The overflow events (of which there have been over a dozen spread over years) are never pretty and raise significant concerns from the surrounding neighborhood. They typically occurred in conjunction with a major rain event as more water seeps in to the town's sewer pipes and drains.

Coming up!

In the coming weeks the Mariner will be touring the Cohasset Water Treatment Plant to get the inside look at how the water from Lily Pond is processed, treated and sent out the majority of homes and businesses in Cohasset.

James Lane hearing will be continued

The continued public hearing for the 17-unit condominium development proposed for 8 James Lane will not be discussed in detail at the scheduled Wed. July 29 Planning Board meeting. The Planning Board will open the public hearing only to continue it to Wed. August 19 at 8p.m.

The extra time will allow the applicant more time to put together the plans and other information previously requested by the Planning Board.

The Stoughton-based South Coastal Development Group has put forth for an application for a special permit under the relatively new village zoning regulations passed at the November 2008 Town Meeting.

The 26,000 square foot building will have three floors, an elevator and an underground parking garage in the basement. The property abuts the MBTA commuter rail tracks and fronts on James Lane.

Partner in recycling

Selectmen consider agreement with Hull

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Next door in Hull, one of the casualties of its fiscal 2010 budget cuts was the town's recycling center. As a result, an opportunity has come about for Cohasset to partner with Hull and provide recycling services to a group of dedicated recyclers in Hull.

In a three-page memo presented to Selectmen Monday night, Town Manager Bill Griffin outlined the parameters of a possible recycling agreement with Hull. Griffin attended a joint meeting with Hull and Cohasset representatives with both concerns and objectives.

"As you all know, (the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility) is not a particularly large facility and it is a very busy facility," Griffin said. While creating a cooperative venture, Griffin did not want to negatively impact Cohasset residents who use the same facility.

"I wanted to make sure there was benefit to the town – revenue or access to equipment…we want it to be a win-win for both communities," Griffin said.

The Selectmen supported the concept of sharing the facility with Hull residents and authorized the drafting of an intermunicipal agreement. The issue will be back before the board for final approval before being implemented.

In order to make the partnership work for Hull residents without severely impacting Cohasset residents or over-burdening the RTF staff, several parameters were suggested.

"…we want it to be a win-win for both communities,."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

The proposal limits Hull residents use of the facility to recyclable materials, not household trash or construction and demolition materials.

Hull residents could only use the facility on Saturdays. Because of some expected increased use, it is proposed to extend the RTF's hours on Saturday from 3:30 to 5:30p.m. Griffin said it is hoped the extended hours would spread out the impact of Hull residents utilizing the facility and, at the same time, provide additional hours for Cohasset residents.

Hull will sell distinctive stickers to its residents for $70 per sticker with all revenues being turned over to Cohasset. For planning purposes, it is being assumed about 400 of the current 450 Hull sticker holders will purchase a sticker for Cohasset facilities. The estimated total revenue is $28,000.

Approximately $18,000 to $20,000 of the new revenue will be used to pay employee overtime and to hire a gate monitor to check stickers for both Cohasset and Hull residents.

The town of Hull will provide, if needed, access to open- and closed-top containers for Cohasset's use and access to a roll-off truck. These containers were previously used at the Hull facility.

Due to the extended hours, the RTF will need lighting in the winter months. The town of Hull will provide assistance through its light department to put in the fixtures.

RTF employees also requested the gate monitor be employed on Sundays from 11:30a.m. to 3:30p.m. to ensure Hull residents don't attempt to use the facility on that day. They also suggested the arrangement be done on a trial basis to make sure the facility can handle the added clientele.

"This is a new venture and we're not exactly sure how it is going to work out…I'd like to be fluid on this and see how it works," Griffin told Selectmen.

The program will take some time to get up and running, Griffin said a Labor Day implementation is realistic.

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson wanted to ensure the program had a critical mass before rolling out. His thinking was if 200 Hull residents enroll, the program does not make back its cost, with 300 residents the town would break even, with 400 residents the program might make some money.

Griffin said that might not be the case because fewer users mean less costs and encouraged flexibility to see how the program is received.

Currently, the town is recovering about 70 percent of the total cost for the RTF through the sale of stickers, blue bags and the recyclables. If the partnership proves somewhat profitable, the town would be that much closer to a self-funded facility, Griffin said.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he would be more inclined to see the facility open to Hull residents on Saturday and Sunday to spread out the increased traffic over the two days.

"Cohasset residents are the ones that need to be thought of carefully," Dormitzer said.

Vice chair Karen Quigley seemed to be the most concerned with the proposal. She raised issues of enforcement, traffic and congestion at the facility.

Marc Fournier of Hull and the former Hull DPW director weighed in on the proposal. He called the vast majority of Hull recyclers "dedicated fanatics." As an example, he said when the recycling sticker price jumped from $10 to $50, participation numbers stayed flat.

The Selectmen supported the concept in a 5-0 vote.

The town has and continues to pursue opportunities for regional services. In recent years, Cohasset joined with Norwell to offer joint animal control services and the towns of Cohasset, Hull, Hingham and Norwell are well along in forming a centralized dispatch center.

scenarios – one where the budget has level revenues (meaning the coming years are funded at the same level at fiscal 2010) and a "worst case scenario" where state aid is reduced by 25 percent each year over the next five years. The two other budget scenarios had even more significant shortfalls for fiscal 2011, between $1.4 million and $1.7 million.

With the possibility of over a $1 million shortfall, Capital Budget Committee member Steve Gaumer asked if the town should be thinking about setting an objective to wean itself off of state aid and rely on local receipts to run town services.

"(State aid) is crack, it's addictive. Should we rely on the receipts we can generate…and look to live within our means," Gaumer said, hoping to begin a discussion on the possibility rather than promoting the idea. Over time, Gaumer feared, the state and federal dollars may leave Cohasset entirely leaving the community in the lurch.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh pointed out that state and federal aid comes in many forms, not only Chapter 70 and lottery aid but also through grants for specific programs like full-day kindergarten, METCO and special education.

In the coming meetings, the committee will review the entire cost to run the town and the many offsets to the budget generated from donations to fees. The committee particularly wanted to get a complete picture school side of the budget, which generates approximately 12 percent, or $1.8 million, of its cost to run the district from offsets (a combination of grants, user fees, donations and tuitions). An updated version including that information will be presented at the next meeting.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said the town needed to begin to examine the budget differently and look for efficiencies.

"We need to look at things differently and we might have to make tough decisions about what services we provide," Quigley said, specifically looking for (and exhausting) efficiencies across town departments as well as cuts.

"Our projected expenditures exceeds our projected revenue."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

At its next meeting, the budget planning group will look at potential additional revenue sources and begin to discuss how an expected shortfall is allocated across town departments. Gaumer said the committee should look at each line item and ask "why" — is it necessary, mandated, desired, etc.?

"We are a small community with a high fixed cost," Gaumer said.

The Budget Planning Group will meet again on Tuesday, August 11 at 7p.m. in the basement meeting room of Town Hall.

Hello Cohasset. Huge congratulations go out to the Cohasset Dramatic Club and the two shows that were performed last weekend at the Cohasset High School. Both "Annie Jr." and "The Wedding Singer" were performed and each show was amazing. The cast of children and teenagers put their heart and soul into what they did and should be so proud of themselves as we as parents and all the friends certainly are. Nice job to all involved.

Carolyn Mulcahy Pratt and Charles Robert George.

Pratt - George

Glenn Pratt of Cohasset and Kathleen Mulcahy of Hingham announce the engagement of their daughter, Carolyn Mulcahy Pratt, to Charles Robert George, son of Joseph and Karin George of Spring Hill, Fla.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Cohasset High School, Roger Williams University and Tufts University. After graduate school she worked as a school psychologist at Winchester High School and is currently working toward her doctorate degree in clinical psychology at The American School of Professional Psychology at Argosy University, Tampa.

Her fiancé is a graduate of Land O Lakes High School in Florida and he attended the University of South Florida. He is currently employed as a police officer and bomb technician for the City of Tampa Police Department.

group on Mars and do what needs to be done.

"We need to rethink a good bit about are we really ready to venture out that far…and what does it really take," Aldrin said, adding there are other things to explore besides Mars (asteroids, for example).

"We don't want to be kicking up dust on the moon" in 2035 unless there was a compelling reason to do so.

As a closing piece to Marcus, "we'll be doing some real man-to-man talking about how long you might want to stay…whether you want to spend rest of life on Mars or (wait) until we come up with warp drive so we can bring you back in a couple of days."

At his interview with the Mariner Tuesday morning, Marcus had on display a replica of the five-stage Apollo 11 rocket that took Buzz Aldrin to the moon. He explained the sequence of how the astronaut landed on the moon and returned safely to earth.

A lover of Legos and math, Marcus has been fascinated by all things "space" for the past few years. He watches television shows and reads books about space-related topics. When Marcus became the owner of two pet gerbils recently, he named one of them "Buzz," after Aldrin.

One of the reasons he'd like to go to Mars is to see if the secret to curing cancer is hidden on the Red Planet.

"We haven't explored (space) that much and I want to explore it," Marcus said. He and his parents have visited the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Florida and the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C.

In an interesting coincidence, Marcus' grandfather grew up in Montclair, New Jersey — Aldrin's hometown — on the same street as Aldrin. When the two were youngsters they were friends.

Marcus and his parents arrived at the museum early on Monday to explore the special exhibit celebrating the 40th anniversary of the landing on the moon. But, talking to Buzz Aldrin was the highlight.

"I'm going to go to space if I have to build a rocket and send myself up!" Marcus said.

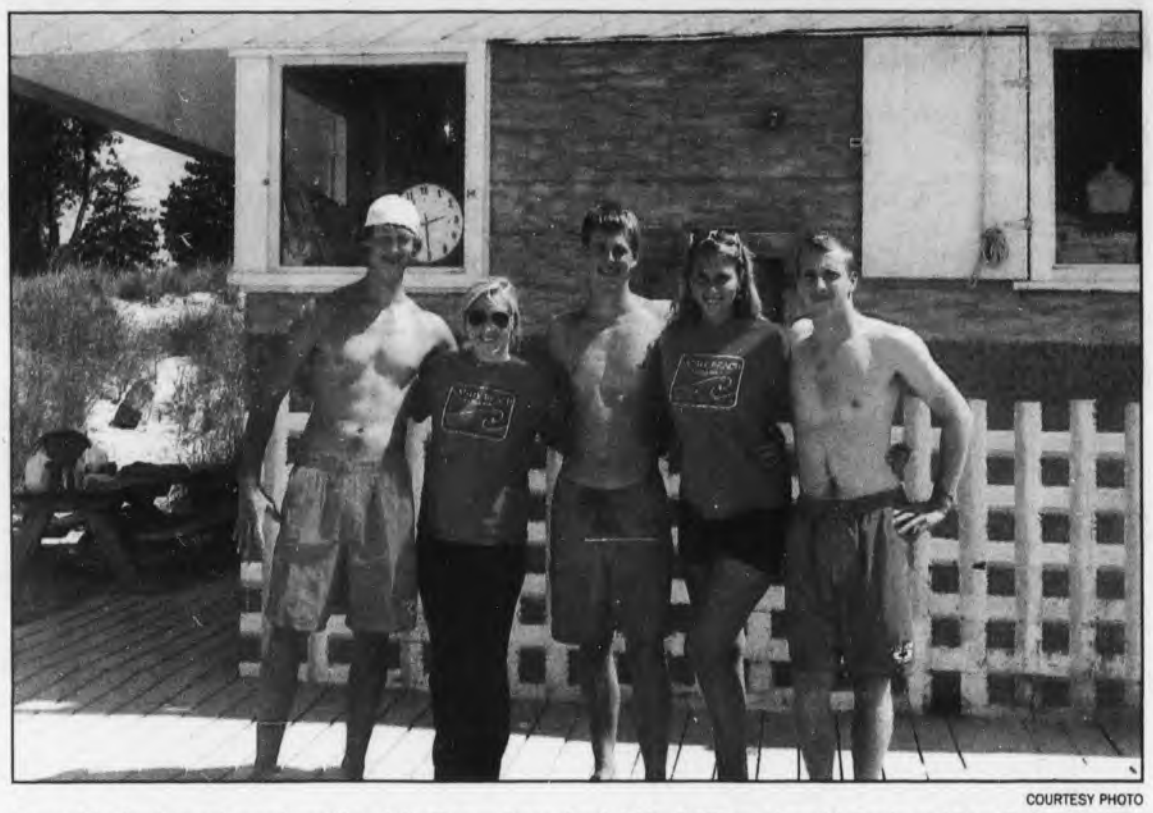
Sandy and Black Rock closed earlier this week

Both Sandy Beach and Black Rock Beach had to be closed for swimming as of Wednesday afternoon. The Board of Health's weekly Tuesday morning water sampling revealed bacteria counts above the state limits. Sandy Beach registered 187 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water and Black Rock Beach registered 132.

A 'no swimming flag' — a red flag with a crossed out swimmer — new this year was flown at Sandy Beach to alert beach goers and potential swimmers.



The cause for the high bacteria counts is unknown, but heath inspector Tara Tradd said it did rain the morning before the samples were taken. Often rain and its associated stormwater runoff can result in high bacteria counts for local beaches. Tradd said when the samples were taken the water was clear and had no debris.

The Board of Heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming. If a test reveals a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water the beach is closed. Beaches are also closed if there is a geometric mean over 35 colonies of enterococci spread over a five-week period.

The Board of Health planned to re-sample the beaches Thursday morning and, depending on the results, could re-open the beaches in time for the weekend.

This week's results:
Results indicate the number of colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters (cfu/100mL).

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

TED PURDY & JEN DISABATINO

We always strive for guard excellence. In addition to the preseason Waterfront Lifeguard Training at the Weymouth Club, Jen leads the staff by doing regular dry land and water drills.

The summer has started on a great note and our staff is excited to be on duty at Sandy Beach. We have many staff returning this year and some new faces joining us.

We have 14 full-time and part-time guards who regularly work at the beach. The guard staff trains and drills often, under the guidance of Manager and Senior Lifeguard Jennifer DiSabatino. The guards are: Ross Collins-Wooley, Kayla Farren, Abby Jones, Sarah Libby, Will Lynner, Alyssa McCarthy, Ryan McCarthy, Cliff Musto, Kate O'Callahan, Thomas Pecca, Joel Ripatrazone, Sam Spall and David (DJ) Weiss.

Here are some of what the staff is doing outside of their guard duties for a look at them individually....

Ross Collins-Wooley is a third-year guard who also worked as a beach maintenance worker (BMW) for years before that. He just graduated from Cohasset High School and will be attending Worcester State College in the fall. Kayla Farren is guarding for the second year and also just graduated from CHS; she will be off to Boston University next month. Kate O'Callahan is another new CHS graduate who is off to college. She will be attending Colby College in Waterville, Maine, but will spend her first semester in Salamanca, Spain. She is practicing her Spanish with Jen this summer!

Returning to Sandy Beach after a couple years, Abby Jones is a Hingham resident and Notre Dame alumna who just received her bachelor's from Hamilton College in Clinton, New York. Abby will be leaving next month for the Boulder/Denver Colorado area to work in a medical clinic for a year with AmeriCorps.

Will Lynner, Sarah Libby and DJ Weiss will all be seniors at CHS in 2009-2010. Sarah and DJ are both second-year guards. This is Will's first year as a guard after working as a BMW for a few years. Thomas Pecca is also in his second year guarding after working as a BMW and will be in his senior year at Boston College High School.

Alyssa McCarthy and Joel Ripatrazone both come to Sandy Beach with a lot of swimming and lifeguarding experience elsewhere. Alyssa is a Scituate resident and former Sci-Coh swimmer who will begin her second year at Boston College this fall. Her younger brother, Ryan, also a Sci-Coh swimmer, is a substitute guard and will be a junior at Scituate High School in the fall. Joel lives in Pembroke, graduated from Pembroke High School and was an assistant coach for the PHS swim team.

Cliff Musto is a regular substitute guard. The CHS graduate just completed his first year at the University of Connecticut at Storrs.

The youngest member of our regular staff is Sam Spall, who will be a junior at Hingham High School in the fall. Sam swims competitively in United States Swimming with the Weymouth Waves.

Alyssa, Ross and Abby are also acting managers on Jen's days off.

All of these guards, including Sr. Guard Jen DiSabatino, are certified in Red Cross Waterfront Lifeguard training, which requires additional training beyond the basic lifeguarding course to prevent injury and respond to emergencies in a beach environment.

We always strive for guard excellence. In addition to the preseason Waterfront Lifeguard Training at the Weymouth Club, Jen leads the staff by doing regular dry land and water drills.

Please respect their judgment and training as they are here to assist and make safety the priority for all patrons of our beautiful beach. Above all, the staff is there to prevent injury.

"If the most dramatic thing we have to do all summer is bandage a stubbed toe, we've done our job well," Jen said.

Respecting rules at Sandy Beach

Sandy Beach Association asks that people respect the rules of the beach. Alcohol, fires, fishing, glass bottles or flotation devices are prohibited anywhere on the beach. Frisbees, hard balls, kites, skimmers and boogies boards are allowed in orange cone marked areas only. Climbing on rocks on either side of the beach is dangerous and prohibited.

Dogs are not permitted on the beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., from mid-June through Labor Day. If people bring pets to the beach during off-hours, it is imperative that they pick up after the dog.

Residents should have received the Sandy Beach Association annual fundraising letter. This mailing is the only source of fundraising for the Sandy Beach Association. The fee for the parking sticker funds the parking lot only – it does not cover the costs of beach cleanup, staffing or beach operations. The beach can't operate as it does without the support of Cohasset residents. Donations can be sent to P.O. Box 285, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Parking lot entrance spruced up

"It's a big improvement over what was there and it creates a nice entrance to the parking lot."
— Darilynn Evans, Chamber of Commerce

The first stop for many visitors to Cohasset Village is the town parking lot. While the MBTA provided many improvements to the lot in conjunction with the commuter rail, its entrance off Pleasant Street was overgrown with weeds – until last month.

A joint initiative of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the Economic Development Committee cleared out the weeds and planted a new garden to grace the entrance of the main entrance of the parking lot.

Darilynn Evans, president of the Chamber and owner of the village shop, Darilynn's, said the new island creates that missing bridge between the North Main Street village and the shops at James Brook Crossing, the South Shore Art Center, and JJ's Junction.

"It's a big improvement over what was there and it creates a nice entrance to the parking lot," Evans said.

The Chamber members, with the help of local landscaper (and former owner of Cohasset Hardware) Jim Watson of Windward Landscape, rushed to complete the island in time for the Arts Festival. The job took about four hours of work by Chamber members.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer commented at this week's board meeting about how well the different islands around town were looking and extended his compliments to their various caretakers.

"They all look good, I'm glad to see it," Dormitzer said.

The grade crossing islands at Sohier and Beechwood Streets were recently adopted and planted by local landscaper Brian Buckley and his company BA Landscaping.

OPINION

GUEST EDITORIAL

GARRETT BRADLEY

With growing uncertainty about the future of the Hingham and Hull commuter boats, I recently sent a letter to the MBTA voicing my opposition to any stoppage or reduction of commuter boat service. The Hingham and Hull commuter boats are a heavily relied upon mode of transportation and to eliminate this service is unconscionable.

The MBTA estimates that over 3,500 people use the Hingham, Hull and Quincy commuter boats to commute to Boston every day. I feel that the $3.7 million subsidy from the MBTA for this service is an effective use of resources compared to the negative impacts which would arise if the commuter boat service was eliminated.

In Hingham, the Shipyard development came to fruition based on the fact that there would be commuter boat service at the shipyard. I feel that the elimination of service at the Hingham Shipyard would be devastating to the project that has already been hurt by the downturn of the global economy. In addition, I believe the MBTA is being shortsighted with their plans due to the fact that once this project is completed there will be many residents from the development who would use the boat to go to and from Boston every day. This will result in an increase in ridership, which is not reflected in current use estimates.

If the Hull boat were eliminated, along with their bus service to Hingham, the residents would have no public transportation to get to and from Boston. It is clear that the commuter boat is the fastest and most efficient way for Hull residents to commute to Boston.

It is critical that the MBTA hear from local residents who oppose the elimination or reduction of commuter boat service. I urge you to either attend a public meeting or send your comments to the MBTA to fareproposal@mbta.com by the Sept. 4th deadline.

A public meeting will be held from 5-7:30 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 12) at the Thayer Public Library, 798 Washington St., Braintree.

For more information on the dates and times of the MBTA's other public meetings and to see the letter Bradley sent to the MBTA, please go to his website: www.garrettbradley.com.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Cohasset The commuter boat continues to be popular with Cohasset residents.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

RTF boutique-lovers should unite!

TO THE EDITOR:

I have to be frank. I love the dump. I love to organize my "stuff" and send it away. But, most of all I love the boutique. And I have treasures to show for my dedication. I have a sofa, several carpets, an enamel kitchen stove from the 1950s I plan to design a kitchen around someday, books, paintings, pillows and, once, I found an ugly painting that intuition told me was valuable. It was worth $1,200! I consider a trip to the dump to be exciting much like the quest, never knowing if this is a disappointing day or a thrilling day for treasures.

I am writing to say that I believe that there is potential in the boutique that could be more fully realized if we, the citizens and boutique-lovers, would put our heads together and think. I can envision a rotation of boutique volunteers who will set aside the treasures so they will not be thrown in the trash twice a week. I cringe when useable items go into the big Dumpster in order to make room for the incoming goods. I also wince when people leave broken or unusable items in the boutique that should be put straight into the trash. I can foresee a system where cutlery and dishes are grouped so if a townsperson intends to go to the Salvation Army or Goodwill it is an easy trip to collect the items. I can see some income coming into the town if items could be offered on eBay. If we help out a few hours a month a system could be developed that might make Cohasset not only one of the richest towns on the South Shore but also one of the most generous.

I am a lifelong summer person. I cannot help out during the cold months of the year. But I have been coming to Cohasset for 59 years, so it adds up. In addition to all of the reasons I stated above, by organizing and overseeing the boutique a bit more, we will save time and energy of the hardworking transfer station facility staff who greet us with lollypops and dog bones and patiently repeat over and over, cardboard here, plastic over there.

HEALTH NOTES

Some useful summertime reminders

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Special notice: Our first reminder is that the BoH will review the new Town Private Well Regulations at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday July 29, at Town Hall. Please check there for the room number. For more information, call Tara at 383-4116.

Our next reminder: It's time for our yearly reminder about changing from an inside to outside lifestyle. It's as much an attitude thing as a physical change. A shift in habits and getting use to a slightly different set of conditions and challenges. Generally, it's not necessary to take special precautions when you start to be more outside; just the usual favorites:

First, don't forget about the bugs waiting to get a piece of you. Dress for whatever you plan to do and save the grief of getting the unnecessary bite or scrape. Remember, you're more or less bitable and scrape-able depending on coverage. So when a bit more is needed don't be found lacking. When you are outdoors, consider wearing long pants, a long-sleeved shirt and socks. While outside, find and turn over anything containing standing water that may harbor mosquitoes; even while you're out walking. Omit birdbaths since the neighbors may complain.

Food borne disease increases during summer months for all foods, including fresh produce. Use appropriate refrigeration and storage procedures and keep track of the age of produce and edibles.

Summer casualties are slightly more frequent than at other time in the year, but nothing to worry about. Between 2000 and 2008, 60 people were reported with WNV infection in Massachusetts. Six died. Eastern Equine Encephalitis is a very rare disease. Since the virus was first identified in Massachusetts in 1938, fewer than 100 cases have occurred. Outbreaks usually occur every 10 to 20 years. Our last outbreak in 2004 lasted through 2006 with five fatalities, so we should be good at least until 2016 or even into the 2020s. You're far more likely to infect a casually disregarded scratch. Curing an infected scratch has about a two week turnaround time if properly dealt with where one that's properly treated will cure in about three days.

It's probably also useful to avoid doing something stupid, like drinking and driving or driving with a cell phone clamped to your ear.

Best not to irritate bees, wild animals, stray neighborhood dogs and feisty neighbors.

Try behaving the way you would if there were a cop driving by. And always remember, that the Chief of Police takes a daily morning run through town, often with one of his associates.

If you're into trails and paths of which the town has plenty, don't be too casual about dress; get it right. Dress properly, not casually, and consider using a cane or stick. Ticks, etc. are out there; use a repellent with DEET (N, N-diethyl-m-toluamide), permethrin, picaridin (KBR 3023), IR3535 (3-[N-butyl-N-acetyl]-aminopropionic acid) or oil of lemon eucalyptus [p-menthane 3, 8-diol (PMD)] according to the instructions on the product label.

DEET products should not be used on infants under 2 months of age and should be used in concentrations of 30 percent or less on older children. Oil of lemon eucalyptus should not be used on children under three years of age. Permethrin products are intended for use on items such as clothing, shoes, bed nets and camping gear and should not be applied to skin.

Little Harbor Project is winding down

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – This and That – First, as you probably have gathered by watching the diminishing presence of L M Holdings workers in Town, the Little Harbor Sewer, Water and Drainage Project is really winding down. Early next week the construction office and storage yard on Jerusalem Road will be disassembled. We are certain the neighbors will not miss it one bit. The contractor continues sewer line testing as well as other finishing up tasks. Some of the jobs deal with small corrections that need to be made as the result of various construction activities.

For example, Whitehead Road, having been paved in October of last year, has had a chance to settle and has been used for about 9 months. When the road was regraded prior to paving most of the water drainage issues were remedied by regrading the contour of the road. However, anyone who has been in this business knows that regrading some of our small roads is not an exact science. Consequently, over the winter we discovered (along with the residents) that there was still an area that needed drainage improvement prior to final paving. So, last week LM Holdings, at the direction of our project engineer, added new drainage to the road. A swale was constructed alongside of the road to collect water and deliver it to a new under-the-road pipe that will carry the water away from the road.

A brief emergency situation – We have mentioned that National Grid, the supplier of natural gas to the residences in Cohasset, has undertaken a program to replace some of its infrastructure in the roadways around Little Harbor prior to them being repaved. Of course, that's a good deal for the Town because that will be one less reason for a utility to decide they need to dig up one of our roads after it has been newly paved. We applaud them for their foresight.

This week there was a bit of excitement with the gas main replacement project on Jerusalem Road, near Holly Hill Farm. The National Grid contractor nicked a live gas line. Whenever there is a gas leak as a result of a construction project, as you can imagine, it is cause for serious safety concerns. Consequently, the Cohasset Fire Department reacted quickly, which is totally appropriate, considering the potential for trouble. If you had occasion to access Jerusalem Road between Holly Hill Farm and Atlantic Avenue on Wednesday July 15th, you would have seen multiple fire apparatus on either side of the road closure. They were prepared to react on the construction site should trouble develop. Fortunately, all was safe.

Early next week the construction office and storage yard on Jerusalem Road will be disassembled. We are certain the neighbors will not miss it one bit.

Residential sewer connection plan – Several residents have asked us when they would be able to make their connection to the new sewer pipes currently being installed. We are not the decision makers in these matters, so we did a bit of probing so we could pass some information on to you. Since the installation and testing portion of the project is nearly complete that's a very reasonable question for residents to ask.

According to those in the know, users will be connected to their new sewer system in a phased plan according to the location of their home. The phasing of the system start-up is critical for proper operation of the system as the system progresses from "no service" to "full customer service." Over the next several months some residents will begin to receive connection information packages from the Sewer Commission. It is our understanding that the first neighborhood to be connected to the sewer system will be Deep Run, Rust Way and the portions of Jerusalem Road between them. So, these residents will be the first to receive their information packets. We will be talking a bit more about the connection plans as time progresses.

Common paving – As a brief reminder, by the time you read this, the roads around the Common and North Main Street as far north as Jerusalem Road will have several construction crews digging up the manholes and other structures in preparation for reclamation. Next week will be the big mess of reclamation followed by paving the week following. Please avoid this area if you possibly can. It will assist the workmen to do their job and will also save your vehicle from the dirt and bumps.

Top view of faulty curb installation.

A little bit of Greenbush – Several weeks ago, we noticed that part of the curbing in the Town Parking Lot surrounding the smaller of the two trees on the track-side of the lot was damaged. Apparently, the granite was not installed correctly. Usually, granite curb is embedded in concrete so it can withstand the onslaught of vehicle tires. Apparently, this section was not installed that way. Consequently, we have contacted the MBTA to have their contractor repair the curb. In the photo, taken looking straight down at the curb, you can see how far the curb has moved away from the edge of the asphalt.

Moonies

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

It seems that no matter how much progress we make as a species, a lunatic fringe will always be among us...

Last Monday was the 40th anniversary of the first moonwalk, arguably mankind's second greatest achievement right behind Cool Mint Creme Oreos. Of course a lot of remarkable astronaut-related video has been bouncing around the Internet this week, and the clip I never seem to tire of is the one of Buzz Aldrin punching Bart Sibrel in the face.

Sibrel is one of these people who is convinced the moon landing was a hoax. Totally impervious to evidence, he has dedicated his life to stalking, ambushing, and hounding the surviving Apollo astronauts, calling them liars and fakes. Think Bill O'Reilly only a little more likeable. Well, one day Bart got a bit too close to the 72-year-old Aldrin while harassing him and Buzz clocked him in the jaw. The recording of this incident is an engrossing film with steadily building tension, larger-than-life characters, and a satisfying ending in the form of a right hook to an idiot.

It seems that no matter how much progress we make as a species, a lunatic fringe will always be among us —people who combine an unlikely theory with the refusal or inability to spot its obvious fatal flaws. The twin towers were brought down by a controlled demolition! The Holocaust never happened! Barack Obama is not an American citizen!

First can I just state for the record that if a majority of American voters believes that Hugo Chavez's man bra will do a better job running this country than any of the other candidates, they probably have a point and their wishes should be honored? I personally can think of several non-citizens I would have chosen over George Bush in 2004 if I'd had the chance, one of whom wasn't even much better on the economy because he was a Chihuahua.

Second, if you were a secret foreigner bent on America's destruction and a harbinger of the apocalypse, why would you root against the Cubs? It makes no sense.

Anyway, in honor of the NASA anniversary the American Library Association made "Starship Adventures" this summer's theme in public libraries across the country, and my wife Hermione helped out with a craft at Paul Pratt where each kid made a little rocket from a cardboard tube and some tin foil. The day before the event we were in a minor panic. The tin foil was no problem, but how would we find 60 to 70 cardboard tubes? Our first thought was to harvest them from rolls of paper towels. Now, a brighter couple might have tried to come up with a second or third thought, but instead our home is now packed to the ceilings with unrolled paper towels. Not even our three careless, spastic children are able to generate spills fast enough to make a dent in this barricade. So if you're in the neighborhood and have yoghurt on your shirt or something, I hope you'll stop in for a half sheet or two.

The Paper Towel Fiasco is a classic example of the sort of brute force approach to problem solving that my wife Ingrid and I both tend to practice. This can happen when you're even lazier intellectually than you are physically. For instance when I need to lose weight, it's apparently easier for me to run four miles a day than it is to simply stop snarfing Cool Mint Creme Oreos. Counting calories sounds like way too much work. Meanwhile my wife Marsha will vacuum the entire house with the crevice tool rather than figure out how to switch attachments. Rather than plan out a grocery list we'll happily make four trips to Stop and Shop per day. And don't get me started on how we ended up with two extra children. It's a funny story but I'll leave that for another article.

It's fortunate that Paulina and I weren't the ones in charge of getting America to the moon by 1969. Our first idea would have been to take the 25 billion dollars, sock away 5 or 6 billion for the kids' college tuitions and spend the rest on an elaborate hoax. I must say you can make a pretty convincing fleet of model rockets using tin foil and some cardboard tubes. And if you get all the materials at BJ's you'll have plenty of cash left over for the necessary payoffs at all levels of government and industry. So where do you hide all the excess paper towel evidence? Simple: behind the moon. Problem solved.

Whew, that was taxing. Now if you'll excuse me I need to go burn off last night's cheesecake.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. He is not actually a polygamist, though he'd definitely consider the idea if Catherine Keener would ever show an interest.

New reforms keep government accountable

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

We have taken major steps toward making the legislative process more transparent and accountable to the citizens of Massachusetts.

The Legislature passed a broad package of ethics and campaign finance reform on June 25. The bill gives stronger investigatory power to the Secretary of State and State Ethics Commission, places more rigorous regulation on lobbyists, and provides for more disclosure and enforcement of campaign finance law. A conference committee made up of 3 House and 3 Senate members reported out the bill, which retains strong language to make state government more transparent and accountable to the citizens of the Commonwealth. The House and Senate unanimously approved the consensus bill.

Having begun the work of reforming campaign finance laws while I was Chairman of the Election Laws Committee, it is gratifying to see much of that effort reflected in the final ethics reform bill. We have taken major steps toward making the legislative process more transparent and accountable to the citizens of Massachusetts. House Speaker DeLeo and House Ethics Committee Chairman Peter Kocot were instrumental in supporting the campaign finance provisions. In addition, Michael Sullivan, Director of the Office of Campaign and Political Finance (OCPF) provided valuable guidance over the past two years as this legislation was being revised. This collaborative effort is reflected in the substantive and positive changes that exist within the bill.

The legislation bans all gifts to public officials, imposing a hefty civil violation for gifts up to $1,000 and making it a felony for anything with value greater than $1,000. The felony charge for gifts greater than $1,000 would carry a penalty of 5 years in prison, a $10,000 fine, or both, and would apply to both the recipient of the gift and the giver.

The consensus bill also provides the Ethics Commission with enhanced investigatory power to do its work, including enhanced subpoena power, expanded regulatory authority and an increased statute of limitations. Additionally, the bill allows the commission to impose heftier civil sanctions by increasing penalties for all ethics laws violations.

A new lobbyist classification redefines and clarifies lobbying activities and captures actions that seek to wrongly influence official government activity.

The legislation defines "lobbyist" as anyone paid to promote, oppose or influence, or to attempt to influence the decision of any officer or employee of the executive or legislative branch and requires strict performance rules for lobbyists including registration with the Secretary of State, annual training and detailed reporting. The bill also closes the "success fees" loophole that awards lobbyists for a specific accomplishment, and it protects civic-minded citizens and non-profits from the strictest reporting requirements.

The bill also targets reform of our campaign finance system, eliminating all "special committee" arrangements between a state political party and an elected official, allowing only individual contributions up to $5,000 to a political party.

The bill also requires the disclosure of expenditures and funding for "electioneering communications" (those third-party mailings and ads that support or criticize a candidate or campaign). Furthermore, the bill prohibits individuals from making committee checks payable to themselves or using campaign funds to pay fines brought about by ethics violations.

Penalties on all ethics law violations increase from $2,000 to $10,000 per violation, and the legislation allows the Attorney General to convene a statewide grand jury.

The Legislature agreed to provide the Secretary of State with civil enforcement authority over the lobbying laws, including authority to subpoena documents and testimony; conduct adjudicatory proceedings; impose civil fines of up to $10,000 per violation; and suspend and revoke a violator's license. In addition, the legislation:

- Expands the disclosure requirements for lobbyists.
- Increases the criminal penalties for violations of lobbying laws from $5,000 to $10,000 or imprisonment for up to 5 years in state prison or two-and-a-half years in county jail.
- Expands the revolving door restriction on executive branch lobbying to a one-year waiting period the same as the Legislature.
- Increases late filing penalties to $50 per day for first 20 days and $100 per day thereafter, and
- Raises the threshold for reporting independent expenditures from $100 to $250, but requires disclosure before an election.
- Requires that legal defense funds are maintained separately from campaign funds.
- Prohibits the name of candidates from appearing on a state ballot if a civil action has been initiated against the person for failure to file reports or statements.
- Increases penalties for late-filed reports from $10 per day and not more than $2,500 to $25 per day and not more than $5,000.
- Requires candidates for mayor in cities with populations over 40,000 who can reasonably expect to raise or spend more than $5,000 to file reports with OCPF.
- Increases the number of reports filed by political candidates (twice in non-election year; three times in election year).
- Requires candidates for Governor and Lt. Governor to file one week prior to candidates for other statewide offices.
- Requires that income derived from bribes, corrupt gifts and illegal activity counts as gross income for tax reporting purposes.
- Gives authority to the Attorney General to regulate and enforce the Open Meeting Law.

The public deserves to know who is seeking to influence public policy, and they demand tougher penalties for violations of lobbying and campaign finance laws. I believe this legislation represents a major step forward on both objectives.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on four roll calls and local senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of July 13-17.

Investment company UBS last month put the Mass Turnpike Authority (MTA) on notice that unless it quickly improves its credit rating, UBS will enforce a provision of their agreement and demand that the MTA immediately pay $274 million owed UBS. The MTA does not have the money for this payment.

These financial problems were in part created by so-called "swap deals" under which the state purchased variable rate bonds that were meant to save taxpayers money over the life of the loan compared to a standard fixed-rate bond. These deals are tied to future changes in lending rates. The MTA was betting that short-term interest rates would stay below long-term interest ones. It was wrong. When the economy tanked and the MTA's insurance company deteriorated, things went awry and the MTA is now stuck with high interest rates and lump sum payments due.

The Deval Patrick administration and legislative leaders developed two plans to deal with this problem and shore up the MTA's credit rating. Both plans were approved and are now on the governor's desk.

TURNPIKE PLAN #1 (H 4160)

House 153-3, Senate 30-7, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a bill that essentially repeals a recently-approved provision that requires that all revenue received from a toll be used only for expenses of that same tolled road. Supporters said that using tolls only for the highway, bridge or tunnel on which they are collected has resulted in insufficient revenue to pay off the Big Dig debt because some of that toll revenue was used to reduce that debt. They noted that this has lead to a reduced credit rating for the MTA and said this new plan would help upgrade the credit rating and prevent the MTA from being required to make a lump sum $274 million payment to investment company UBS. Opponents said that the bill is being rushed through the Legislature and is only a temporary, Band-Aid solution to a larger transportation problem. They argued that the bill should be defeated so that tolls are used solely for the benefit of the roads from which they are collected. Some noted that toll payers outside of Greater Boston are tired of seeing their tolls go to fund the never ending Big Dig. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

TURNPIKE PLAN #2 (H 4141)

House 156-0, Senate 24-4, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a bill authorizing the state to continue to guarantee a portion of the debt of the MTA. The current guarantee expired on June 30 and this bill would extend it to November 1. Supporters said that the guarantee is necessary to avoid the MTA being required to make an unaffordable $274 million lump sum payment that is due to UBS. Some opponents said that the bill is a weak and temporary solution to an increasingly deteriorating transportation system problem that is threatening the state. Others said that the bill lacks transparency, oversight and disclosure and reporting requirements. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill authorizing the state to continue to guarantee some of the debt of the MTA. A "No" vote is against the guarantee).

REQUIRE STATE AUTHORITIES TO PROVIDE $21.6 MILLION FOR STATE PROGRAMS (H 4129)

House 135-22, Senate 37-0, overrode Gov. Deval Patrick's veto of a budget section requiring 11 quasi-public state authorities to provide $21.6 million in funding for state programs that are related to the missions of the authorities. Examples include the Massachusetts Educational Finance Authority (MEFA) funding $1.6 million to help low income students and students with serious physical impairments afford a college education; Mass Housing Partnership providing $2 million for a soft second mortgage program that subsidizes a second mortgage for first-time homebuyers and Mass Housing paying $2.5 million for the rental voucher program that subsidizes a portion of the rent for qualified low-income persons. Supporters of the funding said that these agencies should continue to provide funding, as they did last year, for important programs that are underfunded because of the state's declining revenues. In his veto message, Gov. Patrick said, that he vetoed the section because it "adversely affects financially self-supported independent authorities that support important public services." He noted that his administration has worked with these authorities to make affordable contributions to support state services related to their mission without affecting the core services they were created to provide. (A "Yes" vote is for overriding the governor's veto and favors requiring the authorities to provide $21.6 million to fund state programs. (A "No" vote supports the governor's veto and opposes the funding).

BROADBAND ACCESS (H 4158)

House 153-0, approved legislation making changes to the state's program that provides $40 million to fund an initiative to bring high speed internet to underserved parts of the state by 2010. Supporters said that these technical changes are necessary in order to make the state eligible for an estimated $200 million from the federal government for broadband expansion. They noted that there are 63 Bay State communities with no broadband access and 32 with limited access. They argued that the expansion would enhance businesses, increases jobs and property values and improve education, public safety and health care access. Although no legislators voted against the bill, some critics argue that private companies, not the state or federal government, should fund the expansion. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

Carefully weighing health-care changes

COMMENTARY

EDWARD WOODS

Sometimes a difficult situation can be made even worse by an ill-considered rush to change for change's sake.

The issue of governmental health care rates high in today's headlines. As someone recently stated, "If you like public housing, you'll love public health care." While our current health care system is not completely "broken," it does need some radical fixing.

Yet, the quality of health care in the United States, by and large, is almost uniquely first class. Our medical and dental schools and the residency training thereafter try hard and quite successfully to graduate qualified doctors.

The sources of health problems and their care in this country essentially include:

1. A sharply increasing percentage of elder citizens requiring treatment for chronic illnesses.

2. Protective malpractice insurance premiums, in a litigious society, which have soared beyond the affordability of many physicians and surgeons. This has necessitated either the restriction of practices, or has even provoked retirement.

3. Inadequately paid primary physicians who, for lack of time, refer questionable cases to specialists for further defining and expensive examinations.

4. An ever increasing, out of control obesity epidemic, leading to diabetes, hypertension and other hurdles.

Washington politicians, like Don Quixote, are sparring at windmills. They propose to add a large proportion of the 45 million supposedly uninsured to the care of the current medical population. This will surely lessen the ability of physicians to care adequately for all.

Health care efforts today are directed essentially to "sick" cases. The converse is that we do not recognize or encourage good habits sufficiently. Although streets are beset with joggers, financial health incentives tax-wise, and/or employer discounts for health pursuits are rare. Safeway, for instance, on the other hand, adjusts its compensation for employees' concentration on their weight control, disuse of tobacco, and blood pressure and cholesterol checking.

The Obamacare people say that those satisfied with their current insurance can keep it. They also say their plan is just to keep 1,500 competing insurance company plans "honest." One wonders how much more honesty would be attainable with 1,501 plans to include government's singular addition.

Washington politicians would use the taxes people send and the borrowing power of the government to subsidize federal health policies – mandating purchase by all citizens. For those unwilling to pay, a separate taxation would be levied upon them. For how long could private companies compete under such circumstances? After such an undercutting process, a new national health care industry would be established.

One of the strengths of American medicine and the pharmaceutical compatriots is their ability to produce imaginatively the "miracle drugs" which have so well protected us and increased our longevity. With the politicians' desire to beat down these companies tax-wise, the enormous funds required to bring drugs to a useful status will be severely compromised, as will be the incentives for the needed years of experimentation.

So desperate is the coterie of Washington politicians to force this compulsory and irrevocable "health" measure upon us, that they are considering a radical dropping of the traditional need for 60 senatorial votes on such significant issues to a majority of 51. Further, it would appear that the politicians have no firm idea of the cost of this governance, and the funds they feel needed by taxation sound atmospheric.

Sometimes a difficult situation can be made even worse by an ill-considered rush to change for change's sake. As history has taught us, the path to genuine progress lies in cautious reflection of the elements. This current impetuosity could lead to still more grievous problems.

Of course, health care and its costs deserve serious deliberations not touched upon above, but let's back off a bit and weigh our steps more carefully.

Busy Professional Loses 33 Pounds and is now a Size 8!

I have battled with my weight my whole life. Tired of many diets and constant "yo-yoing" on the scale, I decided some accountability was necessary and made the commitment to personal training at Get In Shape. I dedicated myself to exercising 3 times a week from the start, but it wasn't until I took the instructions offered to me about eating healthy seriously, that muscles I had been developing began to emerge and I had a toned and slimmer body to show for my efforts. As of this date, I have lost 18.5 inches and 33 pounds going from size 14 to a size 8. I am so thankful for the motivation, instruction and support I received at Get In Shape to achieve a strong, healthy and slim new me!

Clarification on Treat's Pond story

In last week's article, "In Negotiation," on the status of the town's draft agreement with several Sandy Cove property owners, needs clarification. The 1964 easement granted by Elizabeth P. Bigelow to the town may not specifically grant rights to Treat's Pond's associated drainage pipe.

"I, Elizabeth P. Bigelow of Concord, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, Grant, Release and Dedicate to the Town of Cohasset the following perpetual easement and restriction over real estate owned by me in said Town of Cohasset, County of Norfolk, described in Certificate of Title No. 18402 dated October 9, 1934 and recorded in Norfolk Registry District Book 93, Page 2, said real estate being described as Lot C in said Certificate and being shown as Lot C on a plan drawn by C. B. Humphrey, Engineer for Court, dated June 24, 1930, No. 3183D and filed in Norfolk Registry District with Certificate No. 14418, Sheets 1 and 2, Vol. 73.

"That portion of said Lot C consisting of a marsh pond known as Treat's Pond, a portion of the boundaries of which are shown on said plan, shall not be filled, dumped upon, drained or otherwise altered from its natural state as a marsh pond, nor shall said pond be excavated or cleared except as may be necessary to remove debris, blow down and over growth or otherwise preserve the natural appearance of said pond, and I grant to the town the right to enter upon the premises from time to time as may be necessary for said purposes, upon notice and on condition that any damage to my property caused by said entry be fully remedied.

"This easement and restriction is given for the promotion and development of the natural resources and open spaces of the said Town for conservation purposes under the Conservation Commission Act...and shall run with the land, subject to encumbrances of record, if any."

Rain barrels for sale at NSRWA office

North and South Rivers Watershed Association has joined with The New England Rain Barrel Co. to provide New Englander rain barrels to area residents at the discounted price of $79.95, almost 30 percent off the retail price of $119.95.

Considering that the average homeowner uses approximately 40 percent of their total water consumption for outdoor use, rain barrels are an effective way for capturing and reusing roof runoff. A 1-inch rainfall on a 1,200 square foot roof will yield more than 700 gallons of water.

The rain barrels are made from 55-gallon blue plastic recycled containers. The top does not come off, so no children or pets can get in the barrel. It has a 6-inch diameter inlet opening, covered with a screened louver to keep insects and debris out. The barrels have two brass spigots; one to connect a hose for watering, and one for overflow. A hose can be connected to the overflow spigot, redirecting the water away from a home. Each rain barrel comes with a 5-foot hose with a shutoff valve. Multiple barrels can be joined together for additional capacity.

The rain barrels are made from 55-gallon blue plastic recycled containers. The top does not come off, so no children or pets can get in the barrel.

Orders may be placed through Aug.7, and the rain barrel may be picked up at the NSRWA office, 214 South St., Norwell, on Tuesday, Aug. 11 from 4 to 7 pm. Those who can't make the pickup time, can have the rain barrel stored for pickup at a later date. To order a rain barrel, call New England Rain Barrel Co. at 877-977-3135 or order online at nerainbarrel.com.

'What it comes down to is comradeship'

WWII vet uses Web to stay connected

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

Every day, Ben Barrett places the finishing touches on the daily newsletter he sends to more than 400 recipients. Barrett, a World War II army veteran who fought in the Battle of the Bulge along with his comrades of the 517the Parachute Regimental Combat Team refers to his brothers in battle as, "the real heroes. They are the ones who never came home."

A special Memorial Day edition of Mail Call, was prepared at his desk facing a wall covered with awards, honors and remembrances from his service in the war. Still humble, yet very nimble at almost 91, Barrett enjoys his days in Cohasset with his family while tirelessly continuing the maintenance of a Web site dedicated to his Paratrooper's Combat Team and its great legacy.

The Memorial Day message to his readers was poignantly simple yet powerful in both its image and words. It began with a quote and a poem from two chaplains of the 517th regiment and was followed by a listing of more than 250 names of their fallen fellow soldiers.

The paratroopers of the 517th PRCT comprised a small unit of approximately 2,500 men. Though one of the first elite units specially prepared and highly trained in World War II, they rarely received the recognition due them for their acts of bravery and valor. The vital role they assumed in defending and liberating small European towns was as an independent division during various conflicts in World War II. They were engaged in some battles with the heaviest and most treacherous fighting of the European campaign. "Groups like the 82nd and 101st Airborne are far better known," said Barrett. "They had members of approximately 20,000 while we were a group only a tenth of that, even though our training and missions were similar."

At almost 91, Barrett not only cherishes and shares history but also looks toward the future and the responsibility he feels toward younger generations. The Web site he maintains with the assistance of his son, Bob, provides a detailed account of the actions of the 517th PRCT (www.517prct.org) and has been recognized as one of the most complete and educational sites about veterans and World War II in existence. When Bob originally designed the Web site almost 10 years ago for his Dad, his goal was not only to honor his father but to create a place where anyone could go to learn about the 517th and find the information in the same place rather than scattered all over the Internet. "We still have people who write to us today and say they have found a new reference to the unit. We ask them to send us the link so that we can post it and have it on the Web site," said Barrett.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Ben Barrett is reflected in his medal case that contains the Purple Heart that he received for being wounded at the Battle of the Bulge. The case includes a combat infantry badge, a bronze star, his paratrooper wings, and marksmanship medal for using a carbine and a rifle.

Response

The tremendous response to the Web site and the correspondence from people all over the world prompted the group to take their historical recollections a step further. As time passes, more and more children and grandchildren of these soldiers are curious to learn about their relatives and the contributions they made to preserve the freedom of our nation and much of the world. Several accounts have been written over the years about the 517th role in World War II. But what interests the descendants of these men as well as students of history are the personal and individual recollections of the soldiers during their days in combat. No books or articles can describe the frigid cold in the forest of Ardennes that December when the Battle of the Bulge was fought. Second-hand accounts of parachuting cannot adequately express the paralyzing fear of a young man the second before his jump. No words can illustrate the deafening roar of engines, the sky red with smoky explosions or the uncertainty of when a German tank might next appear. Nothing can recreate the heart wrenching agony of advancing on the battlefield upon the command of an officer while stepping over the mangled bloody bodies of fellow soldiers pleading for help. No one can do this that is, but the men who were there and lived through these hellish experiences.

Many among the more than 100 veterans from the 517th still living and active have embarked on a project to create a film about their extraordinary feats that will preserve these accounts of bravery, peril and love of country. The unit continues to have an annual reunion when the members gather with friends and family to reminisce, reconnect and share anecdotes about life since World War II. At the last reunion, which was held in St. Louis, the group began steps to prepare this film.

Auxiliary

These veterans are fortunate enough to have a passionate and productive Auxiliary group who supports the efforts of the 517th, assists with trips, projects and reunions and was enthusiastic about being involved in this film project. Auxiliary members are people with any type of connection to the 517th veterans. Many are children and grandchildren, friends and even folks from Europe who lived in towns liberated by the 517th during the conflict. They continue to love and admire the soldiers as they did when the paratroopers were young boys fighting for the freedom of European countries like Belgium and France. From village to village, and home to home, the Americans acted to save the civilians from the dangers of the German advance. Not only do these European friends remain loyal and grateful to the Americans but they have taught their children, grandchildren and any others who have come to live in their communities that they owe their freedom to the Americans.

The Auxiliary has proceeded with efforts to make this film account of the 517th a reality. The group enjoys financial good health and is quite confident that the project will be completed in a format appropriate for classroom and educational viewing. In order to do this, Auxiliary president Claire Giblin, daughter of a 517th soldier, has led the efforts to secure professionals to help with the production. Patrick O'Donnell, a historian and author who captures tales and recollections of former soldiers in order to share such accounts with the general public, filmed interviews with 517th members at their reunion. He is currently at work interspersing these interviews with narrative history, documentation, photos and background from Washington Archives in order to develop a high-quality finished product. A producer has also been secured to participate in the production of the film. It is hoped that a finished version of the preview will be available for showing at the annual 517th reunion later this summer.

Long-range plans for the film include the acquisition of more funds in order that the piece is refined in more depth to be of a quality suitable for distribution on television channels like the History Channel or Discovery.

Humble

Ever humble about his acts of greatness on and off the battlefield, Barrett shared the portion of film that depicts him on camera telling of his recollections of the battles in which the 517th was engaged. His vivid and emotional descriptions place the viewer in the 1944 fields and village of Trois-Points, Belgium, the dirt and danger filled roads of Manhay and the dark ominous night in Bergeval where Barrett was wounded by a German shell.

Barrett is thrilled that this project is coming to fruition and believes it is a medium that will appeal to young people today. Often his Web site and newsletter receive messages from youngsters and students interested in World War II, researching their family or just following interesting links on the Internet. "It's the young kids that really know how to navigate the Internet," he remarked. "They are very savvy and know how to find out what interests them. This is often their first exposure to details about World War II."

Recalling a story shared by one of his comrades, Merle McMorrow of North Dakota, Barrett chuckled, "Merle occasionally goes to a local bookstore to promote a book about his time as a paratrooper that he wrote. Sometimes he wears a paratrooper uniform. A kid came up to him and asked him if he knew 'Ben Barrett.' When Merle said 'yes,' the kid went off to get his little friend and brought him back. The kid said, 'He knows Ben Barrett! He's famous!'"

As the grandfather of 10, Barrett is particularly interested in having permanent legacies available to the young who will eventually be the defenders and leaders of our nation. He also believes that the lessons of the battlefield teach invaluable principles to apply throughout life. "I think back and often wonder how we did it. I still don't understand and I was there! What it comes down to is comradeship. We would do anything including lay down our lives for the guys next to us. And they would do the same."

To Europe

Barrett plans a trip to Europe this summer to commemorate the 65th anniversary of the 1944 battles. Though not part of D Day that occurred in June, the 517th was part of what is recognized but much less prominently identified as the "2nd D Day" when the paratroopers were among those fighting in August 1944. Barrett was stationed elsewhere in Europe at the time and joined his comrades in October of that year. He will be accompanied by members of his family including his daughter, Joanne, and grandson, Eric, also of Cohasset. "We are hoping to walk along some of the same streets where Dad was in 1944," said Joanne. The friends of the 517th in Belgium and France are busy making arrangements and planning activities and honors for their special guests.

Barrett appears especially pleased that grandson, Eric, will be on the trip. "It's good for his education, said Barrett. He also hopes that when finished, the film project is something that might be used by a class in which Eric participates.

Despite his dedication to preserving the accuracy and great feats of the 517th for the benefit of all Americans, Barrett is optimistic as he looks toward the future. "I hope our film will spark the interest of kids and help them to understand the greatness of America. It is important for them to have this foundation because I have always believed that whatever we face, the youth of our country will come through."

The most important lesson Barrett hopes all Americans will consider is one that has not changed since the birth of our nation. "We are so fortunate to live here and have all this freedom. But freedom is never free. Someone must pay the price for it. No other country on earth has what we have. It is this love of freedom that must keep it this way."

Arts Night: a true student showcase

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

Cohasset Middle School hosted its annual Arts Night on June 2, at which the students showcased their creativity in a range of media. The students' artwork was displayed in the school foyer, while the choruses and bands performed in the auditorium.

The students' artwork ranged from studies of perspective to models made of plaster of Paris. There were certain trends in the projects: Still lifes in multiple hues of the same color, studies of buildings and hallways using perspective, and art that featured a balance of contrasting colors. Students exhibited highly realistic landscapes, and completely abstract paintings that consisted only of paint splattered on a canvas. The student sculptures were equally impressive: Peace signs, models of cows made of plaster of Paris, replicas of Coke cans, and even a model of the Eiffel Tower made of Legos. Laura Swartz, Middle School art teacher, has been teaching the students this wide variety of techniques, and she is very pleased with their results: "It's great to see the progression of their artwork throughout sixth, seventh and eighth grade. Seeing them up on stage is fun – in a different creative way."

The performing arts portion of the evening opened with the sixth-grade chorus. They performed three pieces, including "Seize the Day" from the musical "Newsies" – a piece which varies between slow, legato tones and fast, dance beats. The sixth graders really captured the energy of the piece through the rhythm and layers of sound. Another unique piece was "Rockin' Frere Jacques," a modern adaptation of the traditional French folk song.

The seventh- and eighth-grade chorus performed the next set of songs. "True Colors" featured soloists Charlotte Barszewski and Colin Bell, capably backed-up by the chorus, particularly the bass section in this popular modern piece. "Michael Finnigan," a traditional folk song, was another well-done piece: the song is complicated tongue twister, but the chorus's diction was exceptionally clear. Both choruses performed together briefly: "It Don't Mean A Thing If It Ain't Got That Sing, Sing, Sing," was a combinations of Duke Ellington's and Benny Goodman's famous songs. It had a 1930s swing tempo and the chorus infused it with energy and life.

The band portion of the evening began after a short intermission and opened with the sixth-grade concert band. One of their most creative pieces performed was "Kilauea," which depicted various stages of a volcanic eruption through various musical themes. Starting out slow and contemplative, from which the piece built on itself to become a cacophony of sound. The reed section was especially strong in this piece. "Ceremonium" was a particularly strong composition – both in tone and in the students' musical capability. The piece was a series of strong phrases, punctuated with cymbal claps. The tones were imperial and martial – indicated by the title of the piece. The whole band had a strong sound and clarity throughout all their songs.

The seventh- and eighth-grade concert band performed next. They reprised "Abandoned Treasure Hunt" from All School Band Day. It was just as excellent, if not better, than before. The band also performed a selection of West Point Songs: "Cadet Chapel" and "Marching Songs." Both pieces featured the brass section in particular. The first piece consisted of a "call-and-response" between the brass and drums against the flutes and clarinets. It was a march, but less brisk then most, more like a hymn. The second piece opened with a street beat and turned into a strong march. It featured Joe Buckley on the piccolo. All concert performed "Night On Bald Mountain," recognized in the movie "Fantasia." Clarinet and flute trills gave the piece and hunted, chilling air. The entire repertoire was well executed and lively.

The Concert Repertoire Ensemble performed next. The band consists of five musicians: Joe Buckley on flute, Conor Sheehy, Robbie Hillman and Ben Buckley on trumpet, and Ben Williams on saxophone. One of their pieces, "Reminiscence" featured Ben Williams and Joe Buckley in a beautiful duet of flute and saxophone. "Dedication" was intended to be a trumpet solo, but due to an unforeseen illness, became an unaccompanied trumpet solo, preformed by Robbie Hillman. The Concert Repertoire Ensemble concluded their set with the "James Bond Theme" which got a huge reaction from the crowd.

Jazz Ensemble, directed by Mrs. Moriarty, gave the final performance of the evening. The ensemble opened their set with "Rock Fourth" – a jazzy rock piece which featured Ben Williams and Cole Morrison. Another excellent piece, featuring the saxophones and trumpets, "Work Song" was infused with a mix of blues and jazz with a strong trombone beneath the rest of the ensemble. Bobby Nahill and Joe Buckley each had solos. The final song, "Low Rider" featured the brass. It was a jazz/rock combination, featuring interesting percussion instruments: Cowbell, bongos and solos by Drew Nahill, Harrison Durant, and Robbie Hillman. The Jazz Ensemble fully deserved the standing ovation they received.

The entire evening was an excellent showcase for all aspects of the arts in the Cohasset Middle School. The Town of Cohasset looks forward to the event next year with even more anticipation.

Kathryn Hillman of Cohasset is a senior at Notre Dame Academy.

Mother Nature ends playoff hopes

Post 118 unable to get in makeup games

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

Legion Baseball

A year ago the Scituate/Cohasset American Legion Baseball team made a strong late season run to qualify for the Zone 6 playoffs.

Cohasset's attempted late season run this year never got off the ground. Post 118 had a number of makeup games, 11, going into the final week of the season and it was too much for them to overcome.

"It was fun at times," said Cohasset coach Greg Taylor. "But with the rainouts it was tough to put things together. We just ran out of pitching in the last week. We were getting offense but just did not have the pitching strength to play seven games in the last five days of the season."

Cohasset was only able to play 16 of the 22 games on the schedule because of the postponements.

With the standings determined by points, not just wins and losses, the missed games became killers.

Regardless, there were still positives.

Post 118, in its last game of the season against Quincy, had some highlights in a 14-6 loss.

Doonan went 3-for-4 and made two great defensive plays at second base. Signarelli went 2-for-4 with a double for his last Legion plate appearance.

"Mike got a standing ovation from the Cohasset/Scituate bench and to show his gratitude tipped his helmet to his teammates and spectators while standing at second base," said Taylor.

Jordan Berry, who had not pitched in two years went to the mound and worked 4 1/3 innings in the Quincy game, because of the shortage of arms.

"Brendan Doonan, Jeff Cavanaro and Matt Sheehan are heading to East Cobb's AAU complex in Georgia to play in the 16-year old East Cobb Wooden Bat Tournament," said Taylor. "The team that they are playing for is the South Shore Seadogs 16-year old AAU team. If anyone knows about AAU baseball they have heard about East Cobb. It is one of if not the elite AAU program in the country."

The team had some big wins during the season. They were able to defeat Morrissette (6-5), which made it to the south sectional of the state tournament behind the pitching of Derek Schwantner and Brendan Doonan.

They defeated Holbrook, 7-4 early in the season. Holbrook had qualified for the Zone 6 playoffs.

Brendan Doonan in the first half of the season won in his first three decisions for Post 118.

Schwantner did something rather unusual in the opening game of the season against Quincy. He belted two home-runs out of what is normally a tough place to go deep, Adams Field, in a Post 118 win.

"I am very proud of the team," Taylor said. "The schedule was very tough due to the rain, and when there is talent like we had in our district things can get out of control fast. But as a team we hung in there. The guys did not stop having fun no matter what the situation and that's basically what this is all about."

"Nelson" Vanderwell has his eyes — and mouth — on the ball(s)... as he watches the Carroll Tennis Tournament over the weekend!

Carroll Tournament a success

The Cohasset Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital Boston was in full swing last weekend with players competing on donated courts throughout town. The tournament was dedicated in memory of Paul Carroll, a local tennis enthusiast and Cohasset High School tennis coach who was involved in the annual summer benefit since it began more than 50 years ago.

Brilliant summer sun and an offshore breeze however, found players competing for the remainder of the weekend on twenty of the most spectacular and tucked away tennis courts in Cohasset.

Proceeds each summer benefit Children's Hospital Boston. This year the money will help cover transportation and lodging expenses for needy families visiting sick and injured children at the hospital.

The state of soccer

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

When the United States national soccer team upset Spain in the Confederations Cup last month, it piqued the interest of a number of non-soccer fans here in the U.S. Granted the U.S. men didn't win the World Cup or Olympic gold medal, but they pulled off an amazing feat, snapping Spain's winning streak, the second longest unbeaten stretch up to that point. The win put the U.S. National Team into its first-ever FIFA championship match. But after losing to Brazil, interest in soccer once again began to decline.

The only time the U.S. men's and women's national teams draw significant attention is when they pull off upsets, reach tournament finals, or win Olympic medals. But the buzz wears off shortly thereafter.

When David Beckham left Real Madrid in 2007 to play for the LA Galaxy in Major League Soccer, some people thought he would be the answer. His star power could boost television ratings and attendance rates (which it did during his first season with the Galaxy). But the Beckham Effect didn't last too long. He saw limited time in 2007 due to injury, and TV ratings and attendance rates actually declined during his second MLS season, even falling lower than they were the year before Beckham arrived to play in MLS.

"I think David Beckham's arrival hasn't been nearly as successful as many had hoped, but it hasn't been a total failure," said Boston's Trevor Hayward, owner and editor of www.world-soccerreader.com "It has given MLS a lot of exposure from the media elite in this country. He also was a great financial boost for LA Galaxy through shirt sales and the league through increased attendances. I attended his first game at Giants Stadium. While the game and crowd (were) very exciting, that would probably have to go down as the highlight of his time in MLS so far."

Global dominance

The game of soccer, known in the rest of the world as football, ranks as the one of the most played and most watched sports in the world. But despite the fact that it is the national sport of several countries, the game has yet to fully catch on here in the United States. In other parts of the world, particularly in England, almost everyone eats, breaths, sleeps, and even plays soccer. Local derbys, games between intercity rivals (think Yankees vs. Mets), draw huge crowds and pit fans from the same town against each other. Several other major rivalries include teams from one end of England to the other, such as Manchester United vs. Chelsea, two of the biggest names in the English Premier League (EPL). But fans don't just get fired up for the big matches. They avidly follow every game of their favorite teams.

Born in Chelsea, an area of southwest London, Dave Sorrell has been a fan of Chelsea, since, "The day I was born." He grew up five minutes from the team's stadium. Currently living in Middlesex, England, Sorrell attended his first Chelsea game during the team's 1966-67 season.

"My dad took me, and I couldn't believe the size of the ground. Nearly 80,000 fans," Sorrell said. "We love the sport. I just can't understand why it has never taken off in the U.S."

In 1976, Sorrell bought his first Chelsea season ticket. He currently holds season tickets for all of Chelsea's home and away matches. He's even traveled up to the Arctic Circle to watch Chelsea play.

"I go every week, home, away, and into Europe," Sorrell said. "In 1997, in the European Cup Winners Cup, we played Tromso in Norway. It took us five hours to get there on four different flights. Snow was falling during the game, and it was so cold, but it was an amazing place. We lost, 3-2, but we beat them in the second leg at home. We went on to win the Cup in Stockholm. I have been all over Europe to watch Chelsea."

Hayward follows his favorite soccer teams – Red Bull New York, New England Revolution, and Seattle Sounders, all of

Lanzetta never misinterprets the rules

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Everybody cheats in golf. Every golfer who has teed it up doesn't mean to break the rules.

However, all are guilty and many even never knew they broke the rules.

It's because the Rules of Golf are as complex as nuclear fission.

There is a Book of Rules and there is another tome, much thicker, called the Decisions Book, which gives examples of complex rules.

Charlie Lanzetta of Marshfield, when he is not managing Rockland Golf Course or Strawberry Valley in Abington, is one of the top rules officials in the United States.

He has worked as a rule official for the PGA of America since the 1980s and has been on hand at just about every major, from the PGA Championship to the Masters. He has worked the Ryder Cup on both sides of the ocean.

Lanzetta is his biggest admirer and is careful to call him, "Mr. Palmer."

But one thing is for sure, Lanzetta knows the rules of golf.

He says one of the key flaws for many golfers is when the ball lies in a hazard. "They pick up twigs and rocks. I think it's done unintentionally, because they don't know where their ball lies," said Lanzetta. "On the other hand, if their ball is not in a hazard and there are loose impediments, if they interfere with your swing, you can go in there and move that loose impediment as long as their ball doesn't lie in a hazard."

He says there are two forms of golf. "We have social play and competitive play. In a social round, if a person loses a ball, many times they just drop another where they think the ball might have been and play on. But I think it is important that they realize that it is a penalty of stroke and distance. They have to go back to the place where they originally played the stroke."

Another rule that can mystify amateurs is what to do when your ball moves before you take a shot.

"Anytime an action that causes your ball to be moved under a penalty situation, your ball must be replaced to the spot," said Lanzetta. There are other situations where your ball could be on the green and a gust of wind moves the ball, either closer to the hole – of further away from the hole – and you play it from where it winds up.

"I had a situation with Jim Thorpe at the Senior PGA Championship at Oak Tree in Oklahoma. What happened was he was playing with Curtis Strange and Dana Quigley. They were on the green and he marked his ball and replaced it. He started looking over the putt when a gust of wind came up and blew his ball from 25 feet from the hole to 10 feet from the hole."

Thorpe wasn't sure what the call was so Lanzetta was called over to make a decision. "I told him there was no penalty and he didn't have to move it back. But I also told him the wind could have blown it 25 feet away from the hole and he would have had to play it from there. He laughed."

After Mahan made a long putt on the 17th hole to go 1-up, he hit his drive into the water hazard on the final hole. "Unfortunately the observer and marshal on the right side were not able to give me a definite point of entry," said Lanzetta. "My observer on the left side got a look at it and we determined where I felt it went into the hazard and Paul Casey was comfortable with it. Hunter Mahan just wanted to get on with it. All of a sudden Nick Faldo, the captain of the team, tapped me on the shoulder and said the BBC is reporting that the point we had was not correct."

Lanzetta then called the CBS booth where the PGA had an official there monitoring the action. They didn't see anything so Lanzetta stood his ground against Faldo. Casey made birdie and won the hole and the match wound up tied.

Lanzetta attended his first rules school in 1976 and got his hands-on experience working the old PGA National Assistant Championships when it was held annually at Thorny Lea in Brockton. By the early-1980s, he worked the PGA mini-tours, and later moved on to the national events where he befriended Arnold Palmer.

"Mr. Palmer signed my flag and my scorecard of his last Masters round," said Lanzetta. Palmer did not sign them at Augusta, though. During the Senior PGA Championship, Lanzetta brought them to the tournament.

"We were in the locker room during a rain delay. Mr. Palmer knew I brought them and he told me to get them out and he would sign them. He's been so good to me and to my daughter Nikki over the years."

Tasho, Parziale are champs

The Thorny Lea pair of three-time State Amateur champion Steve Tasho and Matt Parziale, who was the runner-up to clubmate John Hadges in the State Amateur at Kittansett a year ago, teamed up to capture the Brockton City Four-Ball Championship on Sunday.

The three-day tournament is a 54-hole affair that began on Friday at D.W. Field Golf Course, moved to Brockton Country Club on Sunday and wound up with a final round at Thorny Lea.

Tee to Green

It was a two-stroke victory over the team of Hadges and Ray Richard. Tasho and Parziale shot a 6-under 64 at D.W. Field, an 8-under 64 at BCC and a 3-under 67 at Thorny Lea for a three-day score of 195.

Hadges and Richard fashioned the best round of the day, an 8-under 62 at Thorny Lea on the final day to move into contention.

The team of Tom Johnson and Nick Tempesta shot a 63-65-74 for a 202 to win the field division of the tournament. They won by a commanding five-shot spread over the second place team of Danny Reagan and Steve Stack.

M-G winners

The foursome of Cindy LaLiberte, Kathy Moody, Marge McDermott and Shyld Settles fashioned a 17-under 55 to capture the net championship at the Women's Association annual Member-Guest Tournament last Sunday at South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

They had the best net of 20 teams competing for the title. The team of Maureen Cawley, Diane Harber, Paula DeFranco and Jackie Lodge shot a 77 for the best gross score.

Maura Campbell, Pat Flaherty, Ceil Hanrahan and Kate Philbin shot a 57 for second net. While four teams carded 58s. They were: Carolyn Hart, Maura Overlan, Nancy O'Neil and Judy Hart; Joanne Frazier, Sarah Whitney, Christine McGrath, Truy Marsolini; Donna Keating, Debbie Brooks, Arlene Jeffrey, Jane Goodwin; and Glenna Goodnow, Suzanne Hoffses, Barbara Kelley, Laury Juhola.

Child's play

Isabel Southard, 14, of Sharon, and Meghan Khang of Rockland are headed to Bedminster, N.J., to compete in the US Junior Girls' championship at Trump National Golf Course. Mary Mulcahy of Scituate and Alison Eleey of Quincy are alternates for the tournament and could be allowed in the field if someone drops out.

On top of the world

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

The biggest debate about Granite Links Golf Course at Quarry Links, the reclamation project that strides across the Quincy/Milton border, is which is best: the golf course or the 19th hole.

GRANITE LINKS

The golf course, which sits high above with panoramic views of Boston, the harbor islands and the coast, has earned several meritorious awards. A national panel of experts selected Granite Links as one of the Top 100 golf courses open to the public in America for one national publication.

That's pretty hefty competition when you consider US Open sites such as Bethpage, Pebble Beach and Pinehurst are on the list.

But its Tavern Restaurant deserves rave reviews as well. It's been cited by Golf Digest as one of the "Fifty Best 19th Holes in America."

"Picture the hit TV show 'Cheers' (only Cliff and Norm play golf); devoted Boston sports fans drink next to local sports legends Bill Russell, Luis Tiant and Ray Bourque; impressive view of the city; be prepared to defend any statement you make about golf, sports or life in general to a complete stranger."

It's a perfect place to decompress after a round, that is, if you can get a seat. The place is usually packed. It is a destination for non-golfers as well because of the hospitality and good food.

But we digress. You come to Granite Links to play golf and there are three challenging nine-hole layouts.

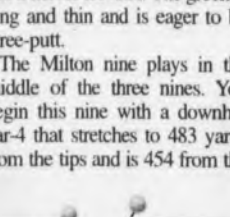
The first hole gives you an idea of what to expect. It isn't for the timid. It's a downhill par-5 that demands heady decisions on every shot, a place where the greedy are usually punished.

Our favorite on the nine is the seventh, a killer par-3 fronted by wetlands. It plays 218 yards from the tips and 187 yards from the blue tee markers. It's more than just a heroic tee shot. The green is long and thin and is eager to be three-putt.

The Milton nine plays in the middle of the three nines. You begin this nine with a downhill par-4 that stretches to 483 yards from the tips and is 454 from the blue markers. No matter which tees you choose, it shakes your confidence. You have to slam it over an abyss and the question is how much of it can you handle.



The hole we enjoy to play the most is the seventh, a short par-4 that stretches to 364 from the tips and is a manageable 323 yards from the blue tees. Because it's downhill, long hitters can drive it. But there is more trouble around this green than normal. Furthermore, the green has more waves than Nantasket Beach.

The Quincy nine is the newest of the three loops and probably the best. But you need to have your game in gear from the outset when you play the 551-yard first hole.

No matter which nine you play at Granite Links, you will be tested and re-tested with every shot.

Down on the mat . . .

Some golfers resent hitting practice balls off mats. They prefer turf. But if you have no other option, you can use the mat to your advantage. QUICK TIP BY JOE KEEFE

Cheers for local athletes

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

To start off, here's a cheer to all the athletes who competed at the Bay State Games over the past few weeks.

Rob McCunney and Brendan Doonan made their mark with the Southeast baseball team, while Tori Lehr had a solid outing for the Southeast basketball squad.

Good job everyone.

Crawford dives for the South Shore Diving Club, based in Quincy.

This past season she finished eighth in the MIAA Division 1 Diving Championships.

Good luck.

Baseball is a funny game. You never know what's going to happen from one pitch to the next, especially when pitchers have been playing a long, long season and have worn down.

That explains some ninth-inning comebacks and scores that looked more like slow pitch softball scores in the last week or two of American Legion ball and in the playoffs.

While I was a watching one game, it was almost funny to watch the pitchers react after giving up long homerun balls.

A quick shake of the head and a small laugh before heading back for more.

I guess that's what happens after playing twice a day or more for weeks.

I heard one parent talking about their son pitching 17 innings in a week.

That is a lot of innings.

Get those ice packs out folks.

Surprised myself last week when I took a shot at water skiing after three years away from the sport.

I pulled off a perfect dock start, and was able to ski without getting wet, until I noticed the legs wearing out and waved bye bye and dropped into the drink.

Made me feel kind of old there, especially when my eight-year old nephew popped out of the water and went around with ease.

There was a time when I was a good skier.

I could handle the course, jump without landing on my head, well at least a couple of times, and pretty much stay on the water for as long as I wanted to.

Can't do that anymore.

Eight-year old Brian Wassersug shows his concentration as he tries to get up on water skis last week. Skiing isn't as easy as it looks, at least when you get older like the writer.

Later I was reminded how tough some sports can really be when I got in the water with my daughter and tried to help her try.

After a ski to the knee, I think we'll stick her to knee boarding.

Then the next weekend, my nephew went to try again and couldn't get going.

Still, watching the effort and work he was doing made me remember the reason for sports.

It's that satisfaction of overcoming that obstacle, the exercise and of course, its fun.

Keep an eye open for an event down the street in Hingham on Aug. 15.

That's when Hingham Youth Football will host the NFL Punt Pass and Kick competition at Lynch Field in Hingham.

The event is free and open to youngsters from any town.

Winners have chances to advance to higher levels, with team and national competitions before or during NFL games.

This contest got some face time last year, when the New England area winner was booed by Indianapolis fans for wearing a Patriots jersey and was then invited to a Patriots game by Bob Kraft, where she was cheered by the home team fans.

Don't know why that story stuck in my head, but it did.

Still, don't let that stop you from taking a shot.

It is a lot of fun.

Last call for soccer camp

The registration deadline for the annual New England Soccer Academy day camp will be Friday July 24. All teams and individuals interested in taking part in the camp need to be registered by that date.

The camp will be held this year during the first two weeks of August at South Shore Regional VoTech High School in Hanover. The camp is ideally set up for pre-season conditioning for teams and individuals.

The first session runs from August 3-7 from 10:00 am-2:00 pm for boys and girls ages 7-12. Session II will be held on August 10-14 for boys and girls ages 13-18.

The New England Soccer Academy is known for its "soccernastics" method of game conditioning and skill development, directed by internationally renowned soccer player and coach Isaac Adeyemi. Coach Adeyemi was a member of the 1990 Nigerian national World Cup team, and has coached women's collegiate soccer. He was the boys varsity soccer coach at Archbishop Williams High School, and is currently a soccer coaching consultant at Thayer Academy.

Joining the camp for his third season is Assistant Director Alan McCall, who has 17 years of soccer coaching experience at all youth and high school levels. Coach McCall was most recently the boys varsity soccer coach at South Shore Christian Academy, and was recently appointed as boys middle school soccer coach at Milton Academy.

Cost of the camp is $150 per session. Team and referral discounts are available.

Major League Soccer, as well as Aston Villa (EPL) and Werder Bremen of Bundesliga, Germany's top-flight league.

"I honestly don't think soccer will ever get to the level of popularity of (American) football, basketball, or baseball. I do think soccer has a place within the American sports landscape, probably somewhere just above hockey at best. I think as this generation grows up with easy access to the game and a greater knowledge of the game, as a result of playing and/or watching the sport, it could only help having the average sportswriter and sports fan of the future being a bit more educated on the sport."

As of what Hayward thinks of ESPN's recent contracts to televise EPL and La Liga (featuring soccer heavyweights Barcelona and Real Madrid), he said, "I think (it) can only help the sport in this country, giving more people easy access to some of the most exciting games in the sport."

The U.S. has its share of top-notch soccer players; several play in MLS. Pembroke's Luke Vercollone, who played for the New England Revolution in 2004 and 2005, now plays for the Richmond Kickers of the United Soccer Leagues (USL). The 2000 Silver Lake High School graduate played for the Charleston Battery of the USL First Division in 2006 and 2007. This season with the Kickers, he plays midfield and has logged 1,017 minutes in the first 12 games, tops on the team.

"It was tough for me in MLS, but I was still able to play with a good team and at a good level," Vercollone said. "The speed of play, everything's faster, quicker. MLS has some of the best athletes in the world. Playing with players from other countries, coaches try to take what they bring and use their style."

Vercollone also believes that soccer is more popular abroad.

"They grow up watching it more. They have a better understanding of how to play," he said. "I watch it. I love Fulham. I'm good friends with Clint Dempsey, who's on the team."

English Premier League and 'Beckhamania'

Brian Horton, current assistant manager at Hull City of the English Premier League, managed eight teams, including Manchester City in the Premier League in the 1993/94 and 1994/95 seasons. Horton coached against Beckham when Beckham played for rival Manchester United.

"I think it's fantastic that a superstar like David Beckham, we're seeing him now as a global ambassador for football, and that could try and get it moving forward in America," Horton said. "It would only be good for the game if America took part in all the soccer tournaments against teams that could rank as big as ours."

Horton played as a midfielder for Port Vale, Brighton and Hove Albion, Luton Town, and Hull City. He started his soccer career in a youth program in Walsall, located in the West Midlands of England.

"I just think that it's played right from when a kid can walk. It's in their genes," Horton said. "They want to play football. In America, you've got so many sports. It's everybody's dream in England to be a footballer. There are 92 football league clubs, and then there's non-league clubs. Then you've got your school football and Sunday morning football, junior football. It's just absolutely huge."

Beckham, who has played for the English national team since 1996, has a contract with the L.A. Galaxy that runs through the 2011 season. His signing, a five-year, $32.5 million/year contract, is the biggest in MLS history, however, the midfielder has a clause in his contract that allows him to leave after the 2009 season. He also earns millions from incentives, jersey sales, and outside endorsements.

"We have noticed Beckhamania is sweeping the states, but I think that a player slightly over his prime may not be enough for soccer to become as big as baseball," said Richard Gillbard of Plymouth, England. "Maybe if Americans had a Babe Ruth of soccer, you would start to get more interested in the sport, and of course if your national team were to have a great World Cup, I am sure people would sit up and get more interested."

It's rare to see a stadium in England not sold out on game day, particularly in the EPL. The same goes for the Football League Championship, Football League One, and Football League Two. For 15 years, beginning when he turned 6 years old, Gillbard traveled to all of Plymouth Argyle's home games with his father and grandfather. Due to work commitments as a farmer and agricultural contractor he rarely gets a chance to see Argyle, a member of the Football League Championship.

"Many of our cities and towns have more than one team, making local derbys feel like cup finals," Gibbard said. "And the banter has been known to divide friends, coworkers and even families."

David Beckham sends a ball to L.A. Galaxy teammate Landon Donovan in a game last year against the Revolution. Beckham was supposed to be the savior of soccer in the U.S., but that never materialized.

Youth and high school level

England has a number of youth soccer academies. Two in particular stand out. The Premier Academy League and the Football League Youth Alliance. Teams such as Manchester United, Liverpool, and Hull City all have junior programs. Horton said that football clubs as high as the Premier League begin scouting players as young as seven.

"Kids that play football from the age of 5 or 6 years old, they're always going to be there to play for a Premier League team," Horton said. "The top teams have their academies that start at eight years old. At 16, they can come into the football club as scholars."

Horton said that when English professional teams, particularly those in the Premier League, look to fill their rosters, local talent is abundant. He did, however, say that managers have a sense what U.S. soccer is all about.

"Obviously it's slightly projective," he said. "I came over with my old team Brighton back in the early 80s. We played the Portland Timbers, the California Surf. We watch for it, but it can never be as big as England. It's our national sport. At the moment, the Premier League is the biggest in the world, getting massive crowds, massive publicity, so it's just huge over here compared to America."

In the U.S., there's a youth soccer program in practically every town. Joe Cummings, current president and general manager of the Boston Breakers of Women's Professional Soccer, got his start 30 years ago, coaching at the youth level when he founded the Northboro Youth Soccer Association. Cummings said that Massachusetts has the second largest youth soccer program in the country. A ton of locals have gone on to achieve great success, including Hanson's Kristie Mewis, a member of the U.S. under-17 women's national team.

Norwell senior Kate MacDonald played club soccer for South Coast Scorpions up until her freshman year of high school. A three-year varsity starter at center midfield for the Norwell High School girls team, MacDonald said the lack of interest was due in part to the many opportunities young athletes have in the U.S.

"People are so focused on so many other sports in our area, especially hockey, which is huge in this state," she said. "We're occupied by other sports because we have the opportunity to play so many sports."

MacDonald, a captain of this fall's squad, has attended one New England Revolution game, cited David Beckham as her favorite player, and said she only watches World Cup soccer.

Two different perspectives

Soccer is massive in Brazil. Leah Fortune knows firsthand. The 18-year-old from Illinois has two different perspectives of the game. She's played for teams in two different countries. In addition to playing for Wheaton Academy, a high school in West Chicago and the Chicago Eclipse Select team, Fortune plays for the under-20 Brazilian National Women's Team. She was born in San Paulo, Brazil. Her parents, Hudson and Karen, are American. Hudson grew up in Brazil as the son of a missionary.

"When you're on a national team, you represent the country," said Fortune, who said she will play soccer for the University of Texas this fall. "The training and sacrifice you put into the game is on a whole other level. The biggest difference is the speed of the game. Everything is tactical and technical. They make every single touch and pass perfect. You can tell when you play different countries."

Fortune, who played in the 2008 FIFA U-20 Women's World Cup last fall, was called up last week to the Brazilian Women's National Team. She will take part in exhibition matches and take part in camps this month, playing alongside former World Cup and Olympic players such as Maurin, Ester, Daiane, Aline, and Graziella.

"Having dual citizenship is great. It's a really nice opportunity. Last year was the first time I was called up (to the U-20 team). It was for the South American Championships," said Fortune, who explained how she got a shot at Team Brazil. "I went down with a U.S. regional team and the (former) Brazilian national team coach (Jorge Barcellos) had seen me play. He found out I was Brazilian. I thought it was the opportunity of a lifetime. I never thought I'd end up there. It's a great group of girls I'm able to play with."

Fortune has seen the soccer culture in two different countries, so she's had a first-hand view and provided insight from both perspectives.

"In Brazil, it really is a culture. They really do love the game. I think we aren't raised with it as much. There's not a love of the game that the children (in Brazil) have. The girls on the team don't go to school. Soccer is their job. It's such a passion. Here, I think men's soccer is improving. I think soccer is getting more noticed and more publicity. It's an international sport, but men's soccer and soccer in the U.S. is becoming much larger."

Fortune has until she is 21 years old to decide whether or not she wants to stay with Brazil or make herself available to play for the U.S. Women's National Team.

"I'm just going to see what happens," she said. "As of now, I'm getting an incredible opportunity. It's been a blessing and an awesome opportunity."

Entrepreneur shines in Bridgewater State program

By Ariel Wittenberg
DAILY NEWS CORRESPONDENT

Barbara Mulford of Canton only expected to graduate Bridgewater State College with a bachelor's degree in business when she enrolled in the college.

After her career in banking "fizzled out," Mulford hoped the degree would land her a higher paying job to support her three children after her recent divorce.

Instead, Mulford graduated with a business plan to start her own business, three classmates who agreed to work for her start-up, and a $2,500 prize for winning the college's 2009 Business Plan Writing Contest.

"In my generation, it wasn't emphasized that you had to get a college degree to go into banking," she said. "But now, it's really important, so I figured I'd take the time to go. But, I never dreamed I'd end up owning a business."

Mulford's transition from business major to business owner began when she took a class in entrepreneurship to fulfill an elective requirement for her major. The class was offered out of the college's Center for Entrepreneurship Studies founded just this fall.

When she was required to write her own business plan as an academic exercise for the class, Mulford decided to actually start her new company, Watts Green Inc.

"As I was writing it I realized, 'Gee, this sounds fantastic,' and it's something I love and I could earn a living with," she said.

Watts Green Inc. is a photo voltaic solar energy system provider that provides and installs electric systems powered by the sun through solar panels placed on the roofs of businesses and homes. The company is currently able to install systems in homes and will be prepared to bid on commercial jobs within 60 days, Mulford said.

Even after she had the idea to make her business plan a reality, Mulford said she could not have done it without the help of Bridgewater State College.

"After I had the idea, I would sit in class writing notes in my textbook of how what we were learning applied to my particular business," she said. "The college just had a tremendous impact on my life."

Dr. Shannon Donovan, director of the college's Center for Entrepreneurship, said the center was created after she noticed a large number of students trying to "patch together" their own curriculum for how to start a business.

"You'd have art majors taking accounting, and I'd ask them why and they would say, you know, 'I want to start my own art dealership' or something," she said. "So we decided that we should put together that curriculum for them."

Currently, students at Bridgewater State College can minor in entrepreneurship and have to take six classes including consulting, introduction to entreprenurship, finance and accounting, marketing and business planning.

While Donovan said the program was not specifically designed for "non-traditional" or older students, she believes that with the recession the program will begin to see more students in their 30s and 40s.

"It's so difficult to get a job these days. A lot of people might think, 'Well, maybe I'll just start my own business instead,' " Donovan said.

While Mulford, 39, was one of the oldest students in the class, she said she didn't mind because she was "determined to get my degree."

"There were a couple older people in the class, but I remember this one time second semester when I was standing outside my class talking to my fellow students and I was the oldest person there. Everyone else was 20 to 25, tops," she said. "It was the funniest thing."

Mulford said she couldn't complain too much about being the eldest because after she graduated she hired three of her younger fellow classmates to work for her company.

"Since they went through the program, I knew them and I knew they'd do a good job," she said.

And winning $2,500 in the school's Business Writing Plan Contest helped her further her studies. Mulford said she used the prize money to take additional classes to learn about solar technology and to trademark and incorporate her new company.

While Bridgewater State is a four-year college, Mulford was able to obtain her degree in just one by taking seven to nine classes per semester.

"Years ago people would tell you not to own your own business because if you did, you'd be working day and night," she said. "But nowadays, with the recession, people working white collar jobs are doing that anyway, so you might as well be the one in charge."

Vets head to school

By Peter Cox
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

BRIDGEWATER – The director of admissions at Bridgewater State College has seen enrollment boom as the economy flopped and private university costs soared.

Now, as troops come home from Iraq and Afghanistan, admissions head Gregg Meyer is preparing for the returning veterans who want to continue their education at the state's flagship public college.

"We don't think we're going to be inundated with these veterans, but we will be getting a number of them," said Meyer, who has a special committee to handle the influx. "They'll go right into the mix we have here."

Meanwhile, movement on Beacon Hill could make a degree at state colleges like Bridgewater State more appealing to not just vets, but also teachers, firefighters and other public employees.

Lawmakers are reviewing some bills that would trim or waive the cost of earning a degree at a state college or university for these groups, calling the measure a matter of fairness.

U Waive tuition and fees for all veterans of the armed forces to attend public higher education.

U Eliminate tuition for teachers and firefighters – along with firefighters' families – at public colleges and universities.

U Help pay off loans for some social workers.

U Waive tuition and room and board costs for the children of state workers killed on the job.

Locally, Vietnam veteran Steve Nolan, Easton's veterans agent, said the proposals are "a lot better than what they had."

"It's more in line with World War II, actually, but still not close," he said. "In Vietnam, school was cheaper, and they gave us war bonuses to help pay for it. Now it doesn't even come close."

Currently, veterans of the Massachusetts National Guard get tuition and fee waivers to attend any public college or University of Massachusetts campus in the state.

Veterans of other branches of the armed forces get some tuition waivers from the federal government, but none from the state.

State Sen. Stephen M. Brewer, D-Barre, has proposed giving all veterans – regardless of the military branch they served in – waivers for tuition and fees at all public colleges and universities.

Brewer said his bill is meant to fill any gaps between the needs of local veterans and the federal government's new Post 9/11 GI Bill, slated to start Aug. 1.

The federal program would cover tuition and fees at any institution of higher education, but with limits. In Massachusetts, the GI Bill would cover a maximum of about $6,000 in fees per semester, according to the program's Web site.

But paying for all these measures could run up a tab the state can't afford right now, some experts say.

"When I was raising my children, I always reminded them - getting a good job means getting a good education. Well, they're grown and gone now, so I decided to follow my own advice. I took the next step by enrolling at Massasoit Community College, and I'm working toward a Human Services degree. It's affordable,it's close to home, and it's going to get me a better job than I have now. See, a parent can never stop setting an example."

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 20, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Is someone at work resisting that Aries charm? Hard to believe. But seriously, Lamb, you might want to back up your ideas with some solid data, and then watch the yeas pile on.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your hard work could pay off in ways you didn't expect, but certainly deserve. Tend to that pesky health problem now so you'll be in top shape to tackle the new projects coming up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Planning a family event can be stressful unless you make it clear from the start that you're in charge. You might accept suggestions, but it will be your decisions that count.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You still have a way to go to bring that professional matter to a satisfactory conclusion. Meanwhile, an important personal situation could require more of your attention by week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) There's something about you Fine Felines that makes people want to tell you secrets. But once again, be wary of who is doing the telling. You might not want to be that person's confidante.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Creating a fuss about a family matter might get everyone's attention. But it might be better to talk one-on-one with family members in order to spare a loved one unnecessary embarrassment.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You're making progress on that career move, albeit not as quickly as you had hoped. But stay with it. Your personal life takes an unexpected (but very welcome) new turn.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) If you feel you've been unfairly treated in a workplace decision, correct the situation now while there's still time to do so. Arm yourself with facts, and go to it. Good luck.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Devising your own system of doing things might be the best way to handle an increasingly complex situation. But do it tactfully in order to avoid ruffling too many of your colleagues' feathers.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A family member's health problem might once again require you to shift some of your current priorities around. But this time, make certain other relatives will be there to help.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Catching up on tasks you've left undone will take a while to accomplish. But the sooner you complete them, the sooner you'll be able to take on another time-sensitive project.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might feel swamped by all that you're expected to do. But take a moment to come up for air, then handle things one at a time, and you'll soon get through them all.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

A trip down memory lane

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When HBO was casting its 1998 TV-movie "The Rat Pack," about the Las Vegas exploits of Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr., Joey Bishop, and Peter Lawford, comedian Bishop knew just who he wanted to play him – Sandy Hackett, son of Bishop's longtime friend and fellow comic headliner, Buddy Hackett. That film role eventually went to another actor, but the younger Hackett was so flattered by Bishop's casting idea that he soon came up with another way to honor it.

Sandy Hackett along with co-producer and Rockland native Dick Feeney developed a live show, "The Rat Pack is Back!" Area performances take place July 26 in Stoneham, July 28 in Hyannis and July 29 in Cohasset.

Hackett — along with co-producer and Rockland native Dick Feeney — developed a live show, "The Rat Pack is Back!" inspired by Bishop's recordings and memories of those legendary Sands Hotel performances, which is at the Stoneham Theatre through Sunday, and then the Cape Cod Melody Tent on July 28, and South Shore Music Circus on July 29.

"Joey Bishop was a friend of our family for as long as I can remember. He was very kind to me when we were creating this show. We met in this wonderful trophy room that he had upstairs at his home in Beverly Hills and he told me a handful of terrific Rat Pack stories," said Hackett by telephone recently from Las Vegas. "One involved Sammy Davis Jr., after he had lost his eye in a car accident. Sammy was driving Joey and himself from Los Angeles to Vegas in Sammy's brand new Rolls Royce when they were pulled over by the highway patrol. When the officer told Sammy he was speeding, Joey asked, 'He's only got one eye – should he keep it on the speedometer or on the road?'"

Sandy Hackett

It was Bishop's finely honed comic timing that made him integral to the act, according to Hackett, who now alternates with another actor in the role of Bishop, who died in 2007, in the show's open-ended engagement at The Plaza Hotel and Casino in downtown Las Vegas. Hackett acknowledges that there are several other "Rat Pack" tribute shows, which present only Frank, Sammy, and Dean, and none which include film actor Lawford, the one-time husband of Patricia Kennedy Lawford.

"The other Rat Pack shows leave Joey out altogether which I believe is a big mistake. They also leave out Lawford, which is easier to understand because he didn't sing or do comedy. Joey, however, was the host and he was also a first-rate comedian. In 1960, when they were all filming the original 'Ocean's 11' in Las Vegas, Sinatra invited his co-stars over to the Sands where he was headlining. Sinatra hated the term 'Rat Pack,' and called the gatherings 'The Summit Meetings.' Everyone thought that Frank, Sammy, and Dean would eat Joey alive. They were huge stars at the time and Joey was a virtual unknown, but he was really fast and really funny and he held his own with the other guys."

Hackett, 53, still has fond childhood memories of his father taking a 2 a.m. flight out of Las Vegas, where he often played the Sahara Hotel showroom, just to wake up in the same house as his son. The elder Hackett would then fly back to Vegas once his son had left for school. After high school, Hackett studied hospitality management and planned a career in the hotel industry. It wasn't long, however, before he followed his father into show business, honing his own comedy skills in the lounge at the Sahara before spending a decade as his father's opening act.

"My father was my mentor and my best friend. I'm blessed that Joey Bishop set me on a course that led to this show, but I learned everything I know from my father. He was quite simply the best comedy teacher a person could ever have. I still do my Dad's jokes today, and some of them are even in this show."

Buddy Hackett - perhaps best-known for his role in the 1963 film "'It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" as well as many television variety and talk show appearances - died six years ago at age 78, but continues to share a stage with his son in a recording played at the beginning of each "Rat Pack" performance.

"My original idea was for George Burns to do the voice of God for us, introducing the guys from up in heaven, but George himself passed away before that could happen so I turned to my father and asked him to impersonate Burns for the recording. My father did several versions and when he sent them over to me, I thought 'Why am I asking Buddy Hackett to do George Burns?' The version we finally chose to use is my father's voice as God, says Hackett. "It's a wonderful gift he left behind for me. Every time I hear it, I swear I can see his smile and feel his happiness."

Theater review

'Rent' at home in Colonial

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

"Rent: The Broadway Tour" will be at The Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through July 26.

From its earliest days off-Broadway in January 1996, it was clear that the rock-infused musical "Rent" – with its story of young artists and musicians dealing with AIDS, drugs, and socio-economic conflicts on Manhattan's Lower East Side had struck a chord with a whole new generation of theater-goers.

With Puccini's La Boheme as inspiration, composer and librettist Jonathan Larson is said to have written the semi-autobiographical "Rent" as a story about the power of a community to affect change. Larson's tragic death, at 35, from an aortic aneurysm just hours before the show's final off-Broadway dress rehearsal, galvanized the New York theater community. His final work was transferred to Broadway in April 2006, where it became that season's hardest-to-get ticket, winning the Tony Award for Best Musical and Pulitzer Prize for Drama.

The show – which launched the careers of original cast members including Jesse L. Martin ("Law & Order"), Idina Menzel ("Wicked") – continued on Broadway for 12 years, spawning a 2005 feature film version and endless tours. In November 1996, Boston's Shubert Theatre was the first stop on the show's first national tour in a production that featured Carol Burnett's daughter, the late Carrie Hamilton. Many "Rent" tours have played Boston in the years since, usually at the cavernous Wang Theatre, and while audiences have remained loyal and large, the sometimes non-Equity touring productions have seldom done justice to the original.

Whether you see "Rent" on every visit, and know it's every line – and there seemed to be many thunderously applauding people in this category at last week's press night – or you've been waiting for just the right time to see the show, you should head over to Boston's Colonial Theater, where "Rent: The Broadway Tour" has set up shop through Sunday, for a first-rate, not-to-be missed production

Stars Anthony Rapp – whose connection with "Rent" dates to a 1994 New York Theatre Workshop reading – and Adam Pascal reprise their original roles as amateur documentarian Mark and aspiring songwriter Roger, respectively, with their considerable charms and vocal power intact. They are joined by a strong company of performers including Justin Johnston as Angel, Lexi Lawson as Mimi, Michael McElroy as Tom Collins, and Nicolette Hart as Maureen who sing Larson's soaring score, including "Seasons of Love," "La Vie Boheme" and "Take Me or Leave Me," full out, with the passion and power it deserves.

"Rent: The Broadway Tour" will be at The Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through July 26. For tickets, visit the box office, call 800-982-2787, or go online at BroadwayAcrossAmerica.com.

Joy Behar has lots to say

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Joy Behar will perform at the Wilbur Theatre in Boston, on July 24 and Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis, July 25.

Joy Behar doesn't hesitate to go head to head with her co-hosts or their guests when the topics on ABC-TV's "The View" get hot, and she plans a similar approach on her new eponymous talk show debuting this fall on HLN.

"I'd love to have people on who disagree with me. I love to hear other people's opinions. I definitely don't want to do just a liberal show," Behar explained by telephone from New York last week. "When I was sitting in for Larry King on his show, I interviewed Ann Coulter and we developed a rapport. I like to talk to her. And I didn't really have to take her on. I just let her talk and she shows the viewers what she is all about."

Even while adding a new night job to her long-running daytime gig alongside Whoopi Goldberg, Sherri Shepherd, Elisabeth Hasselbeck, and Barbara Walters, the Brooklyn-born Behar won't be cutting back on her other career as a stand-up comic. Indeed, Behar brings her act to Boston's Wilbur Theatre this Friday and the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis on Saturday.

"When I was a kid, I used to watch a comic named Jean Carroll on 'The Ed Sullivan Show.' She was a good-looking broad who also happened to be very funny. She was one of my real inspirations. After college, I became a teacher, but before long, I started to pursue comedy professionally. It has been my bread and butter ever since," says Behar. "Jerry Seinfeld is a billionaire from television, but he still does stand-up all the time. It is like oxygen for some of us. I never do it gratuitously, because it means too much. In stand-up, you're the producer, director, writer, and star of your own show. That's the good and the bad of it. There is always a certain unpredictability to stand-up that is scary. It keeps me anxious every time I do it."

Behar, 65, is less anxious when it comes to her new schedule.

"I get up at 7, I do 'The View,' we're on the air from 11a.m. to noon, and there's always something to do and then I'm free," she said. "Now, I'll be working mornings and the late afternoons when I'll do the HLN show live to tape. I have a lot of energy and there is nothing I like better than interesting conversation so I see the new show as just more of what I like to do."

Behar hopes "The Joy Behar Show," slated for the 9 p.m. HLN slot now filled by a "Lou Dobbs Tonight" repeat, will become something both public figures and entertainers like to do.

"I see it is as news show with comedy. I really want to have roundtable discussions with newsmakers and comedians," says Behar who hopes to book friends and fellow performers like Bill Maher and Dennis Leary as well as high-profile politicians. "I'd love to have Sarah Palin on my show. Right now, she would be my number one choice for a guest. She would do very well with me, because I'm not out to get Sarah Palin. I want to hear from her. She has things to say. I would want to ask her a few questions, however, like 'What were you thinking when you did the Katie Couric interview?' and "Were the McCain people mean to you?' I'd also like to interview Bernie Madoff's secretary to find out what he was really like and I'd like to have on some of Madoff's victims, too."

"As a child, I was never told to shut up and I never have. I've had lots of different experiences. I marched on Washington in my 20s. I've been married and divorced. I have a daughter. I've been a teacher, a comic, an actress, and a radio and TV talk show host, and I've been in a relationship with the same man for 27 years."

That last bit of life experience, Behar's long-time relationship with Steve Janowitz, has led to some recent gossip-column speculation which Behar is quick to clear up.

"We don't care one way or the other about getting married. We've been together for a long time, however, and it is something we've thought about as we've gotten older. We're friends with a lesbian couple who have also been together forever, and it hit us that if one of them were to get sick, the other might not be legally able to take care of her which is just not right. Not too long ago, I announced that Steve and I were getting married. I think I did that just to stop people from asking. I'm not a Bridezilla in any way, shape, or form. I have no interest in a big wedding. If we ever do it, we'll probably slip away over a weekend and then tell people on Monday that we're married."

Joy Behar will at the Wilbur Theatre, 246 Tremont St., Boston, on July 24. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-45-3000 or go online at thewilburtheatre.com.

Offense

NAME: Greg Reynolds
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Attack
STATS: Reynolds was the school's career leader in goals and points, and according to coach Mark Puzzangara, should have been an All-American alongside teammate Kyle Crowley. He had 91 goals and 36 assists this season, and had a staggering nine goals in a semifinal game against Swampscott.

NAME: Dean Driscoll
SCHOOL: Cohasset
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Attack
STATS: Driscoll was the second highest scorer and goal leader for the Skippers, scoring 64 goals with 18 helpers. Also a South Shore League All-Star.

NAME: Cam Scullen
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Midfield
STATS: Cam was the Harbormen's offensive heart, taking control on the faceoff, where he was an 80 percent winner. He scored 35 goals and had 17 assists as well.

NAME: Westley Hawkins
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Sophomore
POSITION: Midfield
STATS: The Scituate offense ran through Hawkins, who dominated the faceoff all season long. More often than not, when he won the draw, the Sailors scored.

NAME: Kyle Crowley
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Attack
STATS: An All-American this season, Crowley had his biggest game when it counted most – in the state championship game, where he had three goals, including the game-winner in overtime. Had 84 goals and 49 assists this season.

NAME: Pat Lawlor
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Attack
STATS: The school's all-time leading scorer had 75 goals and 75 assists on his way to being named an All-American this season. A recent Hanover Mariner Athlete of the Month, Lawlor's leadership, scoring prowess and all-around game should serve him well as he heads to Bowdoin College next year.

NAME: Hakeem Lecky
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Midfielder
STATS: Lecky, by far has the hardest shot out of any player in the state, probably clocking in at at least 75 miles per hour. That's probably why he scored 33 goals, earned All-America status, and is heading to Syracuse University to play for the Orangemen. The fastest player on the team, Lecky, a 2009 Patriot League all-star, also added 17 assists this year for the state champion Green Dragons.

NAME: Quinn Cully
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Midfielder
STATS: One of two All-Americans on the state champion Duxbury lacrosse team, Cully was a force in nearly every aspect of the game. The Notre Dame bound Cully, a 2009 Patriot League all-star, scored a team-high 49 goals to go with his 15 assists.

NAME: Will Wise
SCHOOL: Cohasset
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Attack
STATS: Wise was the top scorer for Cohasset this season. He had 48 goals and 59 assists.
"Eighty-five percent of our offense went through his stick," coach Stew Curran said. Wise was a South Shore League All-Star as well.

NAME: Greg Thompson
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Attack
STATS: Thompson was a key to Hanover's offense, notching 65 goals and 34 assists. With Thompson as an option, teams couldn't concentrate on just shutting down Lawlor.

NAME: Kevin Lydon
SCHOOL: Braintree
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Midfield/Attack
STATS: This 5-11, 175-pound dynamo was a team captain and leading scorer for the Wamps. He had 77 goals and 44 assists for 121 points. He was a Braintree Forum Athlete of the Month. For the second consecutive year, he was a first-team Bay State Conference All-Star ... Also a four-year varsity athlete on the Wamps' golf and hockey teams.

NAME: Zach Triner
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Midfielder
STATS: A 2009 Atlantic Coast League all-star, Triner led the team with 29 assists and finished second on the team in goals scored (24). The senior midfielder went off in the month of May, netting 12 goals and adding 12 assists, to help his team qualify for the East Division 1 postseason lacrosse tournament.

NAME: Jake Harvey
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Attack
STATS: Downright nasty on the Duxbury attack, Harvey led his team with 49 assists and finished second to Quinn Cully in goals scored with 47. A first-time Patriot League all-star in 2009, Harvey led an offensive surge that gave Duxbury its sixth straight state title.

NAME: Brendan Wilbur
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Attack
STATS: Wilbur was the top scorer for Hingham, notching 62 goals with 35 assists for the Harbormen. Had four goals against both Whitman-Hanson and King Phillip in playoff games. Had another big game in Hingham's quarterfinal loss to Reading with three goals.

NAME: Derrick Healy
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Attack
STATS: A two-sport star, he was a standout football player as well as a star lacrosse player. A team captain, he led Weymouth in scoring with 34 goals with 36 assists. He won more than 60 percent of his faceoffs this year and his best game was a nine-goal, three-assist effort against Milton. Healy earned a spot on the Bay State Conference All-Star squad as a second-team selection. He will play football at Bridgewater State this fall.

NAME: Steve Sousa
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Midfielder
STATS: This kid had a knack for making opposing goalies look silly. Sousa, a 2009 Atlantic Coast League all-star, netted a team-high 30 goals to go along with 16 assists and proved to be a major factor in getting the Rams to the postseason.

NAME: Ken Doyle
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Midfielder
STATS: This 5-10, 145-pound four-year starter served as team captain because of his leadership skills. Doyle was the Wildcats' MVP and first-team Bay State Conference All-Star. He scored 26 goals and 24 assists, but his best game was a six-goal effort against Braintree, where he scored both the tying and winning goals.

NAME: Paul Donovan
SCHOOL: Norwell
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Midfielder
STATS: One of six South Shore League all-stars for the Clippers, Donovan proved to be a dangerous weapon and a pain in the neck for opposing teams. He averaged nearly three goals and three assists per game and was a menace when it came to the face-off circle, winning more than 75 percent of the time. Donovan also proved vital when it came to ground balls and was an integral part in getting the Clippers into the postseason.

NEW BUSINESS

Behind (candy) bars

Former jailhouse now home to penny candy store

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The building at 25 South Main Street has been many things, a fire station, a police station and jailhouse, a gown museum and a fireplace store. It's latest reincarnation Cohasset resident Susan Young is hoping will be the most fun yet.

Jailhouse Rocks, a penny candy store, opened last week at the corner of Elm and Main streets in the Village. The new shop has a little something for everyone — candy and ice cream, homemade muffins and cupcakes, tea, coffee, hot dogs and popcorn.

As a lifelong Cohasset resident, Young recalls what it was like to be old enough to hang out with your friends without parental supervision and head to the village. She remembers finding new spots to sit and hang out and now she sees kids, including her 11-year-old daughter, Zoë, doing the same thing.

"I wanted to create a place where kids feel welcome," Young said. With colorfully painted walls, shelves of candy, the smell of freshly popped popcorn in the air, it could be considered a children's paradise.

"I know there are a lot of kids in the area…it's an untapped market. They need somewhere to hang out – somewhere cool – hopefully, they'll come in here," Young said.

She's also hoping there is an element of nostalgia for the parents and grandparents who come in. She's on the lookout for classic toys she and her generation may remember from their youth.

Owning her own business has been a dream of Young's for nearly a decade. A complete business plan for a sandwich café with wi-fi access has been collecting dust for nine years. A lack of financing and wrong timing had delayed her dream.

When she lost her job as a waitress earlier this year, she started thinking about her business plan once again. As she drove through the village in June the 'For Lease' sign at the former Independence Fireplace storefront caught her eye. She pulled right over and called the number on the door to ask what the rent was — after hearing the number she began to think maybe this could work.

She went home that night and completely revised her business plan to be able to open quickly and with limited funds. She adapted the sandwich café idea to the penny candy model; she contacted vendors the next day. Her family and friends supported her and Young points to the various items her family gave to the business to help get her off the ground.

"I'm going to put up a plaque saying this is 'The Miracle on Main Street.'" Young said with a smile.

Although she just opened last week, Young has already begun establishing relationships and partnerships with other Village businesses.

"I think we all need to help each other out, not compete. There can be enough business for everyone if we work together. We all can survive if we do it right," Young said.

Young has partnered with fellow

Perfect pitch

Local boy throws out first ball at Fenway Park

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Before Jon Lester took the pitching mound at Fenway Park this past Saturday night, 9-year-old Shane Heffernan tried out his own arm from the very same spot thanks to the Cohasset Stop & Shop.

As the culmination of Stop & Shop's annual fundraising campaign to raise money for the Jimmy Fund, Shane got the opportunity to throw out the ceremonial first pitch in front of a crowd of thousands of fans.

The pitch was the finale for two months of work and contributions from the Cohasset Stop & Shop community — customers and employees — to raise money for the Jimmy Fund and to get Shane a chance to throw out the first pitch.

The two goals went hand-in-hand because the Cohasset store had to achieve the largest percentage increase over last year in Triple Winner raffle ticket sales to get the first pitch at Fenway Park. They competed with all the other Stop & Shop supermarkets in the company.

Water rate break offered

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In March, Town Meeting approved a substantial rate hike that affected the majority of Cohasset water users.

One of the concerns expressed leading up to the vote was the possible hardship of the increase on residents with fixed or low incomes.

As the water department prepares the first quarterly bills reflecting this increase, they have announced their plan to make available a 50 percent reduced rate for basic quarterly service to customers who are already qualified by the Board of Assessors for tax exemptions under the elderly and veteran categories.

"The Commission is pleased to be able to contribute, in a small way to helping certain customers on fixed or low incomes," said Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt. The Quarterly Rate for customers with one-inch or smaller meters, which is about 80 percent of water users, increased from $37.85 to $94.06 per quarter.

The 50 percent reduced rate only applies to the fixed, or quarterly rate. Actual water consumption will be Tuesday's fire caused significant damage to the barn and a nearby pick-up truck. The two-alarm fire also destroyed a shed on the property.

Barn fire on Doane Street

Cause is believed accidental

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"...when we arrived the shed was fully consumed in flame and the barn was fully involved."
— Chief Robert Silvia

In a fire on Doane Street Tuesday afternoon, a shed was complete destroyed, a barn significantly damaged and a pick-up truck heavily damaged.

A 911 call from a resident at 90 Doane Street came in shortly after 4:30p.m. on Tuesday (July 28). The caller reported the shed was on fire. With the ambulance out of town on a mutual aid call, Chief Robert Silvia and three firefighters responded to the scene with Engine 3.

Silvia was the first on the scene, "when we arrived the shed was fully consumed in flame and the barn was fully involved."

On the property there was a 15-by-25 foot two-story barn with a small shed on the side. It is believed the fire started in the shed, Silvia said.

After the Cohasset fire department began to extinguish the fire, a second alarm was pulled to call in mutual aid. Fire units from Norwell and Scituate responded to the scene and Hingham units covered the Cohasset station while the blaze was battled.

There were no injuries and the property's residence was not affected; the barn was used for storage, Silvia said. There was significant damage to the barn and a pick-up truck parked about 15 to 20 feet from the barn caught fire resulting in heavy damage.

The cause of the fire is under investigation, but Silvia said it is believed to be accidental.

"Given the extent of the fire we may not get a definitive cause," Silvia said. A ride-on lawnmower was put into the shed shortly before the fire began.

The owner of the home, Lawrence Ash, said the lawnmower backfired and exploded in his face starting the fire. He was not hurt in the incident.

"The fire spread really quickly," Ash said. "The house wasn't affected."

POLICE BEAT

Motor vehicle accidents add up

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

• At 10:56 a.m. on Monday (July 20) a 2005 Nissan, operated by a Scituate woman, "rear-ended" a 2003 Chevrolet, operated by a Hingham woman, that had stopped at the lights by Stop & Shop, police said. Police said the driver of the Nissan apparently took her eyes off the road for an instant and hit the Chevrolet. Both cars were headed north. The Chevrolet was towed; no one was transported to the hospital. The operator of the Nissan was cited for following too closely.

• Police said a 1999 Isuzu, operated by a Worcester woman, was making a left from Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) onto Beechwood Street, when it pulled into the path on an oncoming 2005 Volvo that was headed south. The Volvo, operated by a Cohasset woman, collided with the Isuzu. Both cars were towed; no one was transported to the hospital. The operator of the Isuzu was cited for failure to grant right of way. The accident took place at 4:26 p.m. on Tuesday (July 21).

• An Elm Street resident reported that her parked car, a 2002 VW Passat, had been damaged overnight (July 22). The woman said there was damage to the rear driver's side and marks on the left rear bumper. An officer observed the damage and looked for evidence of the other car but none was left at the scene. The apparent hit and run is under investigation; police hope to find someone who may have witnessed the accident.

• A tree toppled over, likely due to a combination of wind and rain, last Friday (July 24) at about 10:38 a.m. on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near King Street. The tree hit a 2007 Ford that was traveling north and operated by a Hanover woman, causing minor damage. A 2007 Mercury that was headed south and was being operated by a Hingham man drove over the tree, potentially damaging the undercarriage, police said. No one was injured and neither car was towed.

• Police are looking for a tan Subaru that hit a stop sign at Ripley Road and North Main Street and kept on going. A witness reported the incident at 7:04 a.m. on Saturday (July 25). Police found tire marks on the grass and were able to reinstall the sign. The witness said the driver took off toward the library.

• Police said a 1991 Dodge, being operated by a Cohasset man, was rear-ended on Forest Avenue when it was making a right to attempt to turn into a driveway. The operator of the 2001 Saab, a Cohasset man, that struck the Dodge, was cited for following too closely. The Saab had to be towed. There were no apparent injuries, police said. The accident took place at bout 4:23 p.m. on Sunday (July 26).

Alcohol arrests

Two 18-year-olds and a 19-year-old, whom police say were under the influence of alcohol, were arrested at an under-age drinking gathering in the woods off Rocky Lane on Wednesday (July 22) at about 9:40 p.m. Police responded to the scene after receiving multiple calls about teens loitering in the area and about seeing a fire in the woods.

Police found a campfire that they extinguished. Most of those in attendance scattered as police approached but they were able to place three into custody, all who displayed signs of intoxication, police said. Police found multiple buckets of beer and empty beer cans in the area. There were cars left at the scene; police contacted the registered adult owners to have them moved. They did not want any of the teens to return and get behind the wheel, Chief James Hussey said.

The three teens were charged with being minors in possession of alcohol.

Stolen bikes

• At 7:41 p.m. on Wednesday (July 22), an Elm Street resident, who had been away for a few days, reported that a Cannondale mountain bike was missing from the back of the house.

• Two bicycles were reported stolen from an unlocked garage on South Main Street on Saturday (July 25) at 2:14 p.m. The bikes, black men's Univega road bicycle and a white woman's Schwinn cruiser bike were taken. Nothing else appeared to be missing and there was no forced entry police said.

• A blue-gray Olympia mountain bike was reported stolen from the rear of a South Main Street house on Sunday (July 26) at about 2 p.m. All the bicycle thefts are under investigation, police said.

Backpack

The owner of a backpack that was left on the public dock at the end of Parker Avenue during a rowing class was missing when the rower returned. Inside the backpack was $100, an iPod and some items of clothing. The larceny was reported at 7:22 p.m. on Thursday (July 23).

Sign vandalized

Police are working with a Beach Street homeowner to determine whether a "private" sign on the property was vandalized as a random act or was deliberately targeted. The incident was reported at about 1:37 p.m. on Thursday (July 23).

Suspicious person

A man on a bicycle, who had been at the playground behind the library where he had yelled at some youngsters playing basketball, checked out OK, police said. A concerned caller reported that a suspicious man had been hanging around the playground for about half and hour on Saturday (July 25) at about 5:15 p.m. The caller said the man had been walking around the bushes, talking to himself and swearing.

Police said there was no crime involved. The man, who lives in Cohasset, had been on his cell phone and yelled at the kids playing basketball when they made eye contact with him. The man, who said he apologized to the parents at the playground, spoke freely to police about why he had been there.

Bicycle safety

Police encourage all bicyclists, skateboarders and scooter riders to use helmets while riding. Helmets are mandated for all children 16 and younger.

Police have bike helmets that are available at no charge to residents and their families. For information, ask at the front window of police headquarters.

UNCOMMON ROADWORK

Cohasset resident Kari O'Donnell walks past Police Officer Jim McLaughlin who diverted auto and pedestrian traffic along Highland Avenue Tuesday morning as the road surface is replaced on all roads around the Common. Access to Town Hall and the surroundings buildings and homes is being maintained, but may be restricted from time to time as the construction crews move throughout the area.

50 percent reduction for qualified elderly, veterans

"The fact is most who qualify for these exemptions don't use much water so the quarterly fee could be the biggest portion of their bill," Pratt said.

The primary driver for the rate increase is a sizeable jump in additional debt service taken on to improve the town-wide water system.

Beginning in 1996, the Water Commission began major work on the water distribution system and treatment plant. Roughly $34 million on spending for water system improvements have been approved by Town Meeting since the late nineties. The result has been roughly half the pipes in the system have been replaced with the funding.

"Over the last 15 years the Water Department has executed an aggressive Capital Project to improve and expand the towns' water system. The cost of these system upgrades has pushed water rates up causing a hardship for some customers," Pratt said.

"The fact is most who qualify for these exemptions don't use much water so the quarterly fee could be the biggest portion of their bill."

— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission

From the time the commission made the decision to increase the water rate, Pratt said they wanted to find a way to reduce the hardship for those who truly could not afford the increase.

As a result, they are tagging on to the well-established tax exemption process run out of the Board of Assessors office. There are strict criteria in which residents must meet in order to receive tax-exempt status. Every year, residents much apply to the assessor's office.

Pratt said about 47 people in town are currently qualified in the veteran and elderly categories.

"We're not in the decision making process," Pratt said.

Those residents with a current year exemption for the above categories must bring a copy of the exemption to the Water Department at 339 King Street to have their quarterly rate adjusted for 2009.

The quarterly water bills will be sent out to Cohasset water users on or around Aug. 15.

Stormwater Committee needs members

In February, Selectmen voted to create a five-member Stormwater Advisory Committee. They are still seeking members with specific expertise or knowledge to volunteer. A couple of residents have expressed interest, but not enough to form the board. The Town Manager is currently accepting applications from interested residents.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee will take on myriad tasks including conducting public education activities in support of stormwater remediation, providing opportunities for public participation in stormwater and watershed remediation discussions, conducting an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset, seeking funding sources for stormwater remediation and advising the Board of Selectmen on stormwater-related capital expenditures.

Liaisons from the Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Water Commission, Sewer Commission, Planning Board, School Committee, and Department of Emergency Management will be participating as well.

Appointments to the Stormwater Advisory Committee will first be made from interested members of the liaison boards and committees listed above, then from volunteers from the community, with preference given to people with relevant professional qualifications, including licensed professional engineers in hydrological or environmental specialties, architects and attorneys specializing in environmental law, and public relations professionals.

Interested candidates are requested to submit a letter of interest and resume to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or by e-mail to: wgriffin@townofcohasset.org

Special Education Teacher Loses 23 Pounds and is now a Size 12!

Before

As I was organizing my pictures, I came across this photo, and barely recognized myself. I knew I had reached the breaking point - either continue wearing elasticized pants (like my grandmother) or get real about my health and body image.

I knew I needed help. I had joined commercial gyms in the past. To them I was just a paying customer - no individual attention, no meal suggestions, and most of all, no one pushing me to show up. At Get in Shape for Women, all these needs were met and more. Knowing that a personal trainer and nutritionist were expecting me provided all the incentive I needed to show up. Generally I don't like to exercise, but the staff and other clients are cheerful and full of support that I almost forget that I'm exercising.

In addition to exercise, the nutritionist also set me up with a meal plan that was easy to follow. Since I don't like to cook, I was skeptical at first. But they provided me with enough choices to fit my busy schedule, and I am never hungry!

It's been almost 7 months since I joined. I have lost 23 pounds and have gone from an 18 pant size to a 12! I haven't been in a size 12 since the 1980s! Not only am I looking better, but I feel great - both physically and mentally. Thank you for helping me find the fun and energetic person that was hiding inside those pants!

Out for a summer stroll

Shops open late, farmer's market, concert on Thursday

By Nancy White

The best of Cohasset in the summer will be on display between the Common and the Village next Thursday afternoon as several organizations team up to bring the first annual Summer Stroll.

In addition to the popular Farmer's Market on the Common, the Village shops will be having open houses and special activities until from 4:30 to 7:30p.m. on Thursday, August 6.

The Recreation Department has the local band, Crossroads Blues Project, booked to play the Common that night starting at 7p.m. Both Historical Society properties, the Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum, will be open for viewing.

The business owners are hoping not only to boost sales during the event, but also put Cohasset's best foot forward to attract customers back again and again.

"The Chamber has partnered with the Music Circus to play up the destination concept," said Matthew Cunningham, vice president of the Chamber.

The Music Circus will send out thousands of e-mails to their mailing list alerting them of Thursday's special event. "Defending the Caveman," a comedy show, is playing at the Music Circus that night.

"We think ticket holders would enjoy coming early and spending a few extra hours in the village," Cunningham said. "We want to attract them to come back again and again."

Much like the Holiday Stroll and the October Night Out on Main Street, the Summer Stroll will have different activities throughout the village.

Raffle baskets will be on display at Pilgrim Bank. Village Wine and Spirits will have a wine tasting. Twist will be giving away a pocket book every hour (at 5, 6 and 7p.m.). Ports & Company will have models walking in the village and in the picture windows of the shop. Darilynn's plans to have a craft table where kids can decorate starfish. The 15 Depot Court building plans to have live music and balloons.

"We're trying to bring people down to the village," says Darilynn Evans, president of the Cohasset Chamber.

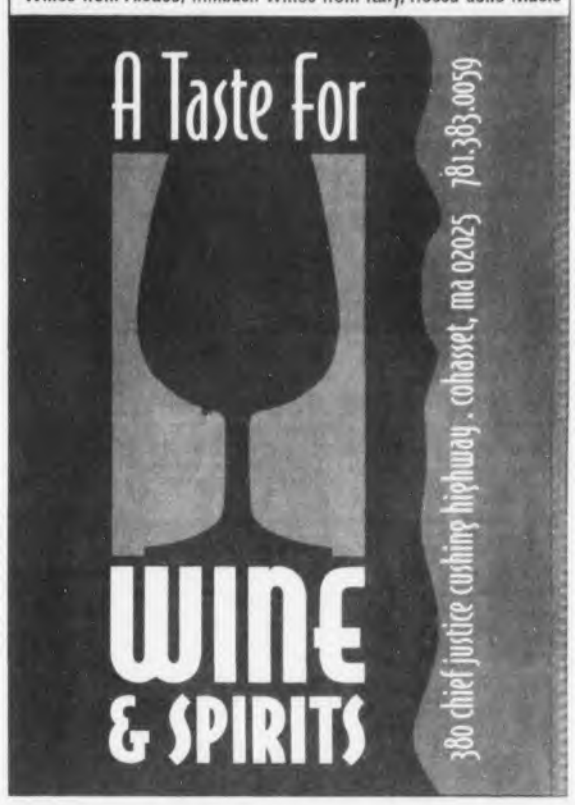
The Village will be dressed up for the occasion — balloons will signify the businesses participating.

Lisa Lynch of Ports & Company and Sue Dreamer of Twist said business has been steady in the village.

"We can't complain in the summer," Lynch said. Business is spurred on by visitors in town to visit family, friends or attend a wedding.

The Village shop owners said Thursdays tend to be a busy day for business during the summer because of the family friendly Farmer's Market on the Common. Kids and adults trickle down into the village to check out the shops.

After visiting the shops in the village, the Recreation Director Ted Carroll hopes many return to the common with a blanket or lawn chair to enjoy a concert by the Crossroads Blues Project. The third concert in the summer series features a blues and rock five-man band comprised of music teachers, former students and current music students. The common denominator is an association with Crossroads Music in Hanover. They have been doing local shows for about seven years.



Greek festival planned for Aug. 15 and 16

A Greek festival, hosted by Panagia Greek Orthodox Church of Cohasset, will take place Saturday, Aug. 15, 11:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sunday, Aug. 16, noon to 6 p.m., at the Sons of Italy, Route 3A, Hingham.

This annual celebration of Greek culture, a Taverna, will feature Greek food for on site consumption, a marketplace for take home, and fun for the entire family including children's activities. Live music will be provided by the Greek band Asteria, Harry Athanasiou conducting.

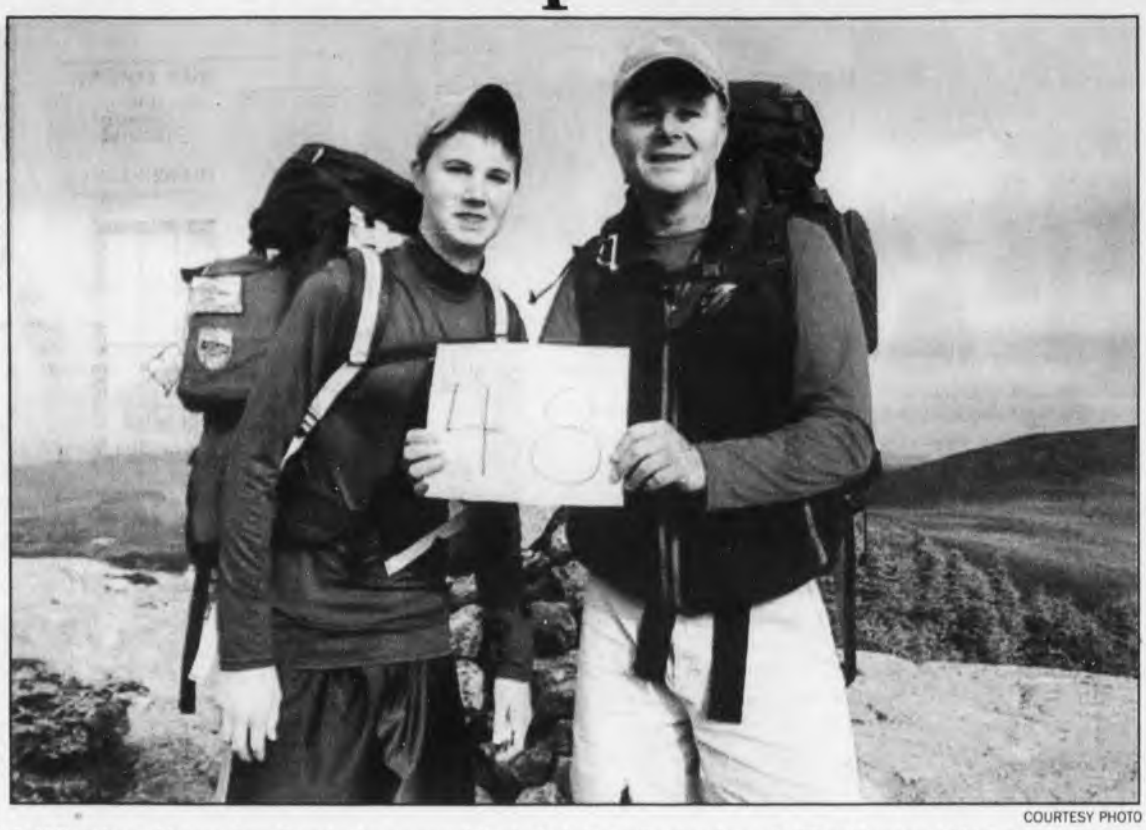
GOOD TIMES



Hello Cohasset. I cannot believe that we are already on the doorstep of August 2009! Please make sure to enjoy this month in any way you can and let us know about some of the fun activities and vacation news you may have.

This weekend is our CHS Class of '84 25th class reunion beginning tonight at the Atlantica for a few drinks, laughs and reminiscing I am sure. It will be a fun time and I want everyone involved to know that it is time to "CELEBRATE GOOD TIMES, COME ON!"

HIKING

Last spring, Rolf Gjesteby, and his son, Lars Gjesteby of Cohasset were inducted into the Appalachian Mountain Four Thousand Footer Club of the White Mountains after successfully climbing all 48 official peaks on the White Mountain 4,000 foot-or higher list.

Both worked together as a team and learned the importance of supporting one another through the challenges of hiking. Lessons learned on the trail have brought success to the pair beyond just the world of hiking.

EMMANUEL

We have a few students to honor and recognize this week. Christopher Clark received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Global Studies from Emmanuel College in Boston on May 9, 2009. Good luck in the future with all of your plans Christopher and congratulations.

UMASS

Also receiving accolades are Alida Tangherlini and Mary Fegreus who qualified for Dean's List at the University of Massachusetts Amherst in the 2009 spring semester. Both young ladies received a 3.5 grade-point average or higher to earn this recognition. Nice work to you both!

local business Simply Fresh to use their kitchen in the early morning. She is going to freshly bake muffins to sell at the store. As her business develops, she aims to do birthday parties at Our World Children's Museum and use Simply Fresh pizza. Twist was handing out coupons for free cupcakes to their customers in the hopes they would walk across the street to check out Jailhouse Rocks. The new JJ's Junction plans to put a Jailhouse Rocks coupon in their box lunches.

So far, Young said, her reception has been positive from the kids and the community. She described the first day she was open, which coincided with a Thursday Farmer's Market, as "crazy." She sold two dozen hot dogs and countless pieces of penny candy.

"When the kids come in the door, they are like 'wow!'" Young attests.

As her business grows, she has an endless supply of ideas — birthday parties, themed 'jailbird' t-shirts for the staff, a bulletin board with pictures of her customers and even a 'jailbird' mascot.

Looking around her store at the kids flowing in and out of the space last week, Young said, "this is going to be a lot of fun."

Jailhouse Rocks is located on at 24 South Main Street at the intersection of Main and Elm streets. The shop will be open seven days a week: Monday through Friday, 10a.m. to 6p.m.; Saturday, 9a.m. to 5p.m.; Sunday, 10a.m. to 2p.m.

Natalie McFetridge, 11 left, of Cohasset and Meghan Considine, 11 right, of Cohasset have their recently purchased slushes outside Jailhouse Rocks.

Megan Bowen, 6, of Cohasset looks at all the candy that she could get at Jailhouse Rocks which opened last week.

Owner Susan Young grabs some cupcakes for a customer at her new store, Jailhouse Rocks. She also has peanut butter bars, muffins, and coconut cream cake.

efforts over the last two months the Cohasset Stop & Shop just about doubled their ticket sales over last year. A total of 20,000 raffle tickets were sold in the months of May and June. Last year, 10,810 tickets were sold out of the Cohasset store.

For Shane, a self-described "really big Red Sox fan," throwing out the first pitch was a dream come true. Shane lives with cystic fibrosis, a chronic disease that affects the lungs and digestive system. The realized dream was made even sweeter knowing that it was made possible by raising money to help find a cure for pediatric cancers.

"Shane knows the important thing is raising money to help the kids who have cancer," said dad, Tom Heffernan. "As a dad I couldn't be more proud."

"It sounds corny, but I've never been more proud of my team. I am so appreciative of my employees, the customers, the community, the chamber of commerce. Everyone stepped forward to help this cause," said Steve Cronin, Cohasset Stop & Shop store manager.

Cronin said his employees had a never-ending stream of ideas to raise money for the Jimmy Fund and sell more tickets. There was a car wash, a cookout, a trip to Foxwoods, a bowling tournament, a silent auction (with donations from about 20 local Chamber of Commerce businesses), multiple raffles, and the list goes on.

Cronin said employees from his teenage part-timers right on up the ladder participated in whatever ways they could.

"I think some paychecks never even left the store," Cronin said with a laugh. "And I think their enthusiasm was contagious."

Many customers sought out Tom Heffernan, who is the assistant produce manager in the Cohasset store, to ask how the raffle was going and how Shane was doing.

"It makes you feel part of the community…it's a good feeling," said Cronin.

When Heffernan told his son he would be throwing out the first pitch at Fenway, he was in a state of quiet shock for about 15 minutes as the news set in.

"Now, he's all pumped up," Heffernan said. Last week, Heffernan said Shane is ecstatic, but very nervous.

According to Heffernan, Shane is always throwing around the baseball and has continued to refine his throw since finding out about his pitch at Fenway Park.

"I just want him to reach whoever he's throwing to," Heffernan said with a laugh.

Since Triple Winner first began, millions of dollars have been raised to help fund cancer treatment and research. For each raffle ticket sold 100 percent of the donation goes to the Jimmy Fund. This year, Stop & Shop set the goal to raise $2.5 million for The Jimmy Fund to benefit the Stop & Shop Pediatric Brain Tumor Clinic and $1.25 million for the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

Shane's pitch may have set the tone for the night. The Red Sox went on to decisively win the game over the Baltimore Orioles, 7-2.

Turbine project appeals

Lawsuit filed with Land Court

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Planning Board's special permit decision was filed with the Town Clerk on July 9 and CCI-Energy filed its appeal of the decision on July 20.

Almost three months after the Planning Board denied the special permit application from CCI-Energy, the applicant has filed an appeal of that decision in Land Court.

The 19-page document describing the grounds for appeal refutes each of the reasons given in the Planning Board decision to deny and alleges there was "undue influence" on the board from the public.

CCI-Energy is requesting the court annul the decision, determine the project did comply with the town's bylaws, and approve the special permit application or remand the Planning Board to do so.

A private developer, Plymouth-based CCI-Energy, put the project application proposing the installation of two 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber. One of the two 100-meter, 328-feet turbines would be located closer to Route 3A and near the Graham Waste buildings, the other would be sited farther back at the corner of the capped landfill. The application underwent eight months of scrutiny by the board over the course of 11 public hearings.

The CCI-Energy special permit application was the first application under the town's wind energy conversion facility bylaw passed at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting.

In early May, the Planning Board voted 3 to 1 to approve the application. However, the vote was effectively a denial of the application because under state statutes, the application had to be approved by four members of the five-member board. (Planning Board member Jean Healey took office after the public hearing began and could not vote on the project.)

Planning Board vice chairman Stuart Ivimey was the sole opposing vote. The Planning Board's special permit decision was filed with the Town Clerk on July 9 and CCI-Energy filed its appeal of the decision on July 20.

In the decision, five general areas of concern are named: visual impact, noise, excessive noise, vibration, or light, ice and/or snow throw, and structural integrity.

"In each of these areas, the Decision is wrong as a matter of fact and of law," states the appeal document. The appeal goes on to expand on how they did meet the zoning bylaw criteria in each of those areas. For example, in regard to visual impact, CCI-Energy argues they did minimize the visual impact.

In addition to be set back from the road and most residential neighborhoods, CCI-Energy moved the proposed locations of the wind turbine generators six times in "order to accommodate various visual impact and other community impact concerns."

The appeal document also alleges "undue influence" on the planning board during the course of its public hearings.

It cites the "large, organized, energetic, tenacious, and vocal contingent of people, mostly residents of the well-to-do neighborhood located across the state highway from the Project location" as one of those influences. As a result, CCI-Energy said the Planning Board began to express intentions of imposing "substantial and severe conditions on the Project" prematurely, before all evidence and data had been reviewed.

The CCI-Energy appeal also alleges Ivimey, as the sole opposing member of the board, used a higher burden of proof standard to evaluate this particular project.

"This higher burden of proof was applied in an arbitrary and discriminatory fashion," the appeal states.

Ken Ingber, attorney for CCI-Energy, did not want to comment further on the appeal.

"I think the document speaks for itself," he said by phone. The filing of a suit in Land Court is the prescribed statutory process when appealing a zoning matter, Ingber said.

The Planning Board discussed the pending litigation with CCI-Energy in an executive session at its Wednesday meeting.

Phone messages left earlier this week for Planning Board chairman Al Moore and vice chair Stuart Ivimey at their places of business were not immediately returned.

Locking up

Although Cohasset is a very modern place in many ways, its size and location have kept it relatively safe and insulated it from problems that larger communities today often face.

Cohasset is off the beaten path. Would-be criminals could have a tough time getting away to a major thoroughfare if they did not know the geography. Scituate, which is arguably more remote than Cohasset, also shares that same sense of "you cannot get there from here."

However, next door in Hingham, which has easy access to Route 3 and is closer to the "big city," instances of housebreaks, for example, are common and numerous. Some of thieves have been brazen — breaking in while the residents were asleep in their beds! Hingham is also a much larger town with about three times the population of Cohasset.

We think the sense of security that living in Cohasset provides has to be the reason that many residents do not lock their cars at night, do not lock their doors or garages, and leave their valuables, like bicycles or backpacks, in plain view and unattended.

Last year there was a spate of pocketbooks thefts from unlocked cars at the post office and other locations. Some women would apparently dash in, leaving their pocketbook on the front seat in an unlocked car. When they came back out, the pocketbook was gone.

This year, thefts appear to be gravitating toward bicycles. It is not clear if the bicycles are being stolen for a quick joyride and then abandoned or being taken and later sold. What is clear, though, is that most of the bicycles being stolen were not locked up.

Cars have also been broken into overnight in various Cohasset neighborhoods. In nearly all the cases the vehicles were left unlocked with the thefts discovered by the motorist the next morning.

The easiest way to prevent theft is to lock up and put your valuables out of plain view! Locking up alone would reduce the crime rate in Cohasset by a lot!

However, we understand the reluctance to locking up. We have to constantly remind ourselves to push the lock button on our car keychain at night. Our driveway seems so secure and our neighborhood so quiet that we feel it is almost a sanctuary. Pressing that lock button jolts us into a reality that we may not want to face: there are bad people out there!

We all want to return to the days of "Mayberry." When the "Andy Griffith Show" was on, the editor's family lived in Scituate in a Victorian farmhouse that had locks but keys that no one could locate or ever remember seeing. In other words, the doors were never locked and no one ever gave it a second thought.

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

ROB LAWRENCE

Man's "best friend" resides in many of Cohasset's 2,600 households – 700 dogs are licensed by Town Hall. As we coexist with our four-legged friends, it is incumbent upon residents to act responsibly and pick up after their dogs.

Pet waste is repulsive and can cause health risks in humans when left on beaches; it contains bacteria and parasites that can cause human gastro-intestinal infections, particularly those resulting in fever, cramping, fatigue, headache, vomiting, diarrhea and weight loss. Of specific concern to beachgoers is a parasitic infection, Toxocriasis, which can cause rash, fever and coughing in children exposed to this parasite in sand.

While a single dog may not be the source of significant pollutant, the combined impact of many dogs can be considerable and contribute to poor water quality and human health problems. Rain events can potentiate the pollutant problem as waste left untreated on the ground passes through storm sewers or washes directly into the ocean. Animal waste that finds its final resting place in water decomposes, using up oxygen. During summer months, low dissolved oxygen levels can harm fish and other aquatic life. Bacteria in pet waste can be a cause of water test results that require closure of beaches and shellfish beds.

No one wants to step in dog waste and neither do we want our children to play in it. Cohasset has a "pooper scooper" regulation that requires pet owners to clean up after their pets and dispose of waste in an appropriate manner or risk a fine should the regulation be violated. Following are helpful suggestions that will assist pet owners in protecting the environment: (1) always carry plastic bags to pick up pet waste ("poop bags" are available on a post at the beach entrance); (2) dispose of sealed bagged pet waste in a trash can; (3) obey seasonal bans at Sandy Beach – dogs are not permitted on the beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., from Memorial Day to Labor Day.

Responsible pet owners can have a positive impact upon the environment and keep Sandy Beach safe and healthy for beachgoers. Together, town residents can achieve this goal.

This article is based in part on information from the Massachusetts Department of Public Health Bureau of Environmental Health.

BEACH TESTING

Sandy Beach is a private developed barrier beach, owned and managed by the Sandy Beach Association for the safe recreational use by Cohasset residents. Massachusetts Department of Public Health regulations mandate weekly bacterial contamination sampling of all ocean beach waters during the swim season (Memorial Day through Labor Day) by local boards of health.

The indicator organisms are Enterococci, bacteria most closely related to developing gastro-intestinal illness as a consequence of swimming in contaminated water. Enterococci, generally found in human and animal waste, may be concentrated in coastal waters after a rain event due to fecal matter being washed into the waters from surrounding land. Results are reported in the number of bacterial colonies in 100 milliliters of water. Single-sample test results cannot exceed a specified number of bacteria colonies per 100/ml sample. Should the sample exceed the maximum allowable contamination level of 104 Enterococci/100 ml, the Cohasset Board of Health will immediately order Sandy Beach closed for swimming.

The results of Sandy Beach water sampling may be obtained by calling the Board of Health at 781-383-4116 or accessing the Mariner Web site at www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset. Sample levels at every beach in Massachusetts can be found at www.mass.gov/dph; follow the links for beach water quality testing. [Note: most beaches on the South Shore were closed last weekend due to Enterococci counts that exceed the Commonwealth established minimum standard for human safety. The Massachusetts Department of Public Health is investigating the causes for the unlikely widespread beach water access closings.

The Sandy Beach Association's goal of saving our valuable natural resource while retaining its safe recreational use continues to be of paramount importance, and we applaud the vigilance of the Board of Health Board in keeping our beach safe for swimming.

Connection plan for sewer hookups

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

As new users are added, spreading out away from the plant, the additional pumps will be pumping into a system that is already moving toward the plant.

Little Harbor Project Connections — Last week, we mentioned that shortly the Sewer Commission will begin notifying residents of their ability to hook up to the new system according to connection plan developed by the Sewer Commissioners. This plan will involve a specific sequence for residential connections based on their location. The reason for this is very simple, if you think about it. Remember, it is the grinder pumps at each home that actually provide the energy to move the effluent to the sewage plant. Therefore, by starting at areas closest to the plant and working toward the extreme ends of the system the effluent has less distance to travel. As new users are added, spreading out away from the plant, the additional pumps will be pumping into a system that is already moving toward the plant. Generally, sewage will not move backwards, away from the plant, because the unused sections of pipe are filled with air and water from the testing operations which blocks reverse flow.

We mentioned that the Rust Way, Deep Run and the portion of Jerusalem Road between these two roads will be the first area to be offered the ability to connect. Now, the astute observer might ask, "Clearly that area is not close to the sewer plant. How can that be connected first, in light of the above statement?" Well, here's the deal. There is a valve in Jerusalem Road at Deep Run that will shut off the flow toward the Cohasset Sewer Plant. And, there is a pipe that connects this neighborhood to the North Cohasset sewer lines and on to the Hull treatment plant.

The second area to be considered for connection will be the immediate areas on and abutting North Main Street including N. Main Street itself, Red Gate Lane, Joy Place and Gammons and Jerusalem Road from N. Main to Gammons. Now that the plan has been developed, you are probably ready to ask, "When can I connect?" We can't answer that one. It is up to the Sewer Commissioners and their engineers to determine when the new system is ready for the new connections to start.

Project Status — The contractor on the Little Harbor Project, LMH, is still in their final phase of leak testing. As we go to press, the contractor is performing final leak testing on Jerusalem Road between Nichols and Jerusalem Road Drive. While this is underway in one location, crews are actively decommissioning the project staging area on Jerusalem Road near Nichols.

The trailers used as offices have been removed and LMH is in the process of re-landscaping the area. Were sure the neighbors are not sad to see the project-related equipment and material stockpiles disappear.

If you have ever been involved in a construction project, you are familiar with the concept of a "punch list." A punch list is a list of all the things that remain to be done, some small and some not so small. As you can imagine, a project of this size will probably have a large punch list. This project's punch list, presently numbers about 277 items. And, this is only for the sewer portion of the project and does not include the Water Department's items or drainage items identified by the DPW.

Paving on the Common — Late last week the cast iron structures in the roadways around the Common were removed so the reclaiming machines would not damage them. This week the reclaiming started in earnest. If you had a chance to drive in the area of the Common you could see the commotion caused by the reclaimer as it ground up the old road. Monday and Tuesday of this week the reclaimer and road grader were the principal machines at work.

To recap, the reclaimer is like a giant food processor that reaches down about 8 to 12 inches and homogenizes the asphalt and a bit of the road substrate. The grader then smoothes the mixture out so it can be driven on as a temporary measure. In the accompanying photo you might be able to see the fluffed up mixture on the left side as the reclaimer does its thing. And, on the right side of the photo, the grader has smoothed the road so it can be temporarily driven on.

Wednesday of this week, the next phase of the paving operation started. Since we will be adding about four and a half inches of new asphalt (the total of both base and top coats), we need to remove about five inches of the ground up road before we can do the final grading in preparation for paving. Just to give you an idea of how much material will be removed from around the Common and on N. Main Street down to Jerusalem Road, we estimate between 110 and 120 truck loads will need to be removed. Fortunately, this excess material is in demand for construction purposes. We have found numerous local organizations that can use the material, including our DPW, who always have first dibs. Locating local stockpiles means that we will save on trucking costs and will have no dust problem.

So what's ahead? By the end of this week our plan is to have the Common area final graded ready for paving. Weather permitting, paving should start around the Common on Monday, August 10th. The Common area is planned to be complete in time for the Farmer's Market and the Chamber of Commerce Cohasset Show on Thursday, August 13th. Further utility grinding work on underground work on South Main Street will also take place around the Common. Hopefully the weather will be super-expressive.

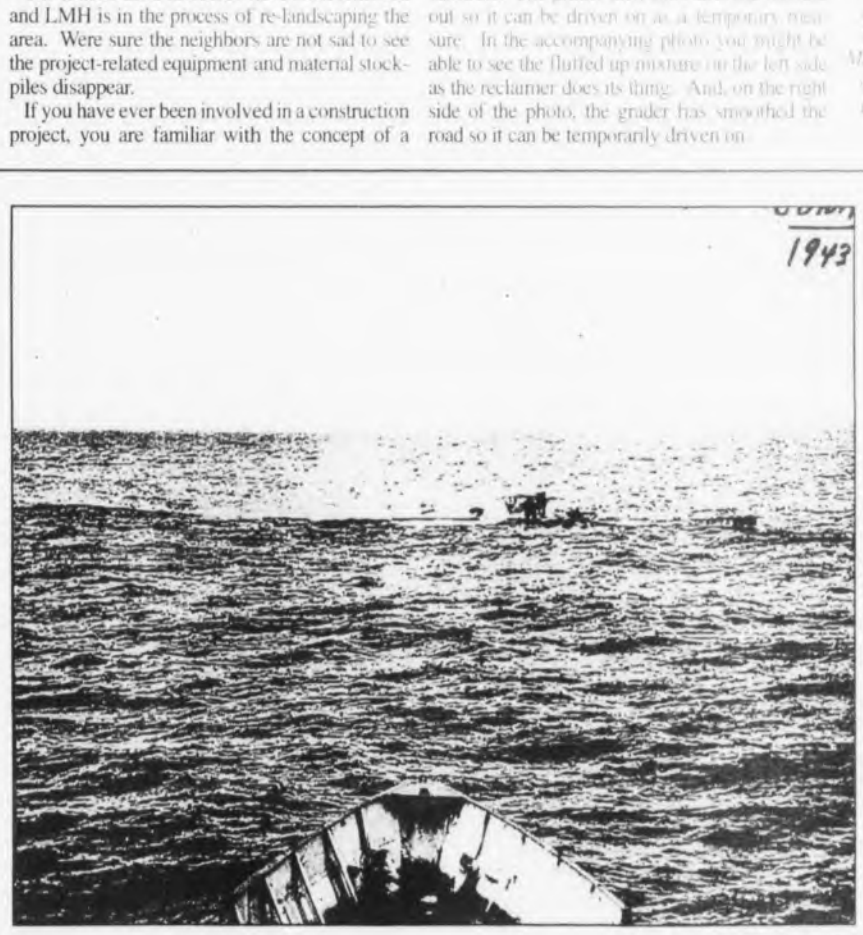
Haley's War

CALLING ALL VETERANS

RONALD WHEATLEY



George Haley scanned the cruel sea ahead from the deck of the Coast Guard Cutter Duane making full speed to the location of the submarine that had been detected shadowing the task force. It was a cold April 17, 1943 during the Battle of the Atlantic. The Duane was part of a Task Unit which included Spencer, as flagship, and four British escorts. The task unit was providing escort for convoy HX-233 comprised of 56-ships. About 500 nautical miles southwest of Ireland one of the merchantmen was torpedoed. Sonar on both the Spencer and the Duane picked up the submarine's location.

"After graduating from High School, and about a month after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, I joined the Coast Guard on Jan. 2, 1942," said George Haley, lifelong resident of Cohasset. "I was sworn in at Boston. I did not go to boot camp. They wanted a typist and I had typed at school. So they put me right into an office in Boston in the Custom House." Seeking action outside the typing pool, Haley joined the crew of the Duane and sailed for convoy escort duty in March in 1943.

"The Spencer depth charged it first. They damaged the submarine. We teamed with them in the hunt, but we already had contact on our sonar," Haley said. "When we laid our barrage, the submarine was still submerged. We laid down a pattern of depth charges to a depth of 50 or 100 feet, and we swung around in a circle scanning the surface."

Haley remembers spotting the black conning tower of the submarine break the surface of the cold gray sea ahead of the Duane. "As we closed in, we were firing five-inch and three-inch guns and 20-millimeter canons at the surfacing sub," Haley recalls. "I could see a German sailor come up on the deck of the sub to fire at us from its main deck gun. The sailor disappeared in a hail of 20-millimeter rounds."

The conning tower of the sub was smoking Haley recalls and the submarine was moving ahead slowly, circling to the right. Haley watched as the submarine began sinking by the stern just as the boarding party's lifeboat from the Spencer reached it. He is one of the few remaining eyewitnesses to "the first Americans to board an enemy man-of-war at sea since the War of 1812." Before the sub went down, the boarding party was able to identify it as the U-175.

COURTESY PHOTO

"As the submarine was sinking — its crewmen started jumping overboard. They wore life jackets. And we could see their heads bobbing in the cold water. We lowered a boat and picked up survivors. We helped them board and we took good care of them. We gave them blankets and coffee. We had a brig below and we put them there."

Navy records report that one German officer and 18 men were rescued by Spencer and 22 others by Duane. U-175's commanding officer was killed in the initial surface gunfire. According to Time Life's "The Battle of the Atlantic," U-boat Captain Gerhardt Muntz and six of his crew died on the U-175's deck as a result of the barrage. The rest of U-boat crew escaped as their ship sank.

The battle had been won, but Haley's war was not over. He returned to Norfolk, Va., where the Duane was prepared to participate in the invasion of southern France. "We had finished our North Atlantic escort duty, and at Norfolk Navy Yard, the ship was fitted out with communications equipment. From there we shipped out as part of the Eighth Amphibious Force. We sailed to Naples where we trained another three months. The Luftwaffe identified our ship as an important target. They followed us from Gibraltar. Each night they would fly over Naples harbor dropping illumination flares and try to bomb us. From Naples we sailed to participate in the invasion of Southern France on Aug. 15, 1944."

Following duty during the invasion of Southern France, Duane provided Mediterranean escort duties. Haley achieved the rank of Seaman Third Class. For his service he was awarded two citations, one for action in sinking the U-175, and one for participating in the invasion of southern France. He received two campaign ribbons with two bronze battle stars.

Staying busy this summer

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE MULLEN

In all my years I don't remember a spring and summer such as the one we've been having this season. Of course, we need rain now and then but not day after day. As I write this, it is sunny and hot, but for how long I wonder?

A few weeks ago six of our number joined a large group from Plymouth for a day trip to New York where they visited Ellis Island and the Statue of Liberty. From all reports they enjoyed their trip.

Two weeks ago we savored a barbeque at the Golden Living Center of Cohasset. Tables were set up inside as the weather was "iffy." They have invited us to two more luncheons on Aug. 19 and Aug. 26. Our thanks go out to them.

Just this last week we were guests at luncheon served at the Allerton House in Hingham. Although it looked like it might rain, it was nice enough so we could eat outside. This Wednesday we will be guests, along with seniors from surrounding towns, at Glastonbury Abbey. This is a yearly event.

On Aug. 18, after a visit to Allerton Point in Hull, we will enjoy an early dinner at Raphael's. Then in September there are plans for lunch and a cruise at Cambridge Side Galleria.

Plymouth COA has planned two trips in which they have invited us to join them. One is a September trip to Portsmouth with lunch and a lighthouse tour included. The other is another bus tour in early December to see the show at Rockefeller Center.

Be sure to call Trudy at the Center 781-383-9112 for prices and questions. Reservations for events are a must.

Our thanks go out to the aforementioned organizations and to our dedicated staff who are keeping us pretty busy even in the lazy, hazy days of summer.

40B 'poster child' for Hedlund legislation

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

The state's regulations, for example, don't offer any protections for barrier beaches, coastal floodplains, well-field watersheds, wildlife habitats, or the small streams and pools...

The salt marsh that surrounds First Herring Brook in Scituate is beautiful this time of year. When I'm out for a bicycle ride, I often try to include it along my route. The marsh grasses are thick and long, and filled with birds and other wildlife. The brook itself wends through the marsh towards the North River, rising and receding with the tide.

Gloria Holstein is very familiar with First Herring Brook. She is able to watch out her back window on a monthly basis as the brook, swollen by a high lunar tide or heavy rainstorms, to creep up over its muddy banks. She's witnessed on several occasions over the years when the brook, whipped up by a costal storm or heavy rainfall, doesn't just spill over its banks, but actually flows across her backyard, flooding her property and the neighboring Watson property in waist-deep water.

The land floods so often that Ms. Holstein's children have been able to ice skate from their backyard well onto the frozen over field. In the spring, ducks swim from the brook across to the submerged field.

However it's on this land, 15 acres situated on the edge of a regularly-flooded salt marsh, that developers now want to build 60 units of "affordable" luxury housing called Herring Brook Meadow under Chapter 40B.

This project is the poster child for a bill that I filed this session, Senate 770, which would require 40B projects to meet local wetlands bylaws. Currently, these projects must only comply with state rules. However, the state's rules are one-size-fits-all regulations that do not recognize the environmental differences between Scituate and Saugus or Marshfield and Medford.

The state's regulations, for example, don't offer any protections for barrier beaches, coastal floodplains, well-field watersheds, wildlife habitats, or the small streams and pools that pop-up every spring and early summer and are considered critical environmental links.

Scituate is one of many towns throughout the Commonwealth that has recognized the importance of enhanced protection for these areas from the damaging effects of manmade erosion, stormwater run-off from driveways and roadways, and habitat destruction. Scituate's voters considered and approved local wetland bylaws because they wanted to protect their community's natural resources. While I believe that people have a right to build on their property, and understand the need for more affordable housing options in my district, I do not think development should come at the expense of harming critical wetlands and salt marshes.

The lobbyists for the real estate developers who recently testified against my bill, which has been endorsed by the Sierra Club of Massachusetts and the Massachusetts Municipal Association, disagree. They think communities who haven't met their affordable housing goals shouldn't be allowed to have any say over "affordable " housing developments that threaten water supplies, damage important habitat areas, or exacerbate local flooding.

The Scituate zoning board's official rejection of Herring Brook Meadow states that the developers and their engineers were either slow or resistant to provide critical information to the town and its consultants.

One of this project's biggest secrets is the amount of fill that will need to be trucked into the site just to make it buildable. The amount is so secret, in fact, that the project's engineers have not yet even performed the calculations, despite already applying for environmental permits from the town and state. The project's lead engineer said under oath at a recent Housing Appeals Committee hearing that a 180-foot-by-400-foot area of the property must be raised a minimum of 5 feet just to stay dry during a major flooding event. Simple arithmetic shows that this means the developers will have to haul in at least 7 acres of fill just so the "affordable" units don't wash out in the next coastal storm.

That's a minimum of 7 acres of fill at the edge of a salt marsh that is prone to flooding, and is part of the watershed for the North River, the state's first designated scenic river, and a federally designated National Natural Landmark. (As an aside, I am also actively inquiring into why the project has not been required to undergo any sort of state Environmental Impact Review.) The property also sits along a priority habitat for rare species, and is within a buffer zone designed to protect the town's drinking water supply.

Adding seven acres of fill also raises great questions about what the impact will be on Ms. Holstein's property, and whether any sort of drainage system will be able to prevent additional flooding on surrounding properties.

But these are issues that the developers don't want to consider, and they are exactly the questions that my bill, Senate 770, would force them to answer.

Extreme challenges in Marblehead

COHASSET SAILING CLUB

EMILY PELO

The sailors rigged and launched their boats, and headed out of the harbor on the second day in the rain and a stiff 15-knot breeze.

Last week, the Cohasset Sailing Club Race Team took to the seas again at the Marblehead Junior Race Week, which was hosted by Pleon Yacht Club on July 20–22. The Cohasset Sailing Club brought two 420's to the event, sailed by Andrew Burnett and Greg Berube in one boat, and Jack O'Brian and Billy Mack in the other. Throughout the three-day regatta, sailors experienced a range of weather conditions and showed their strength and skills to compete in these two extremes. On the first day of the regatta, the sailors headed out of Marblehead Harbor to the racecourse, only to be met with no breeze. Although the sun was shining and it was a clear day, the wind did not pick up enough to get a race off. The coach boats and safety boats had to tow all the sailors back into the harbor, resulting in everyone tied for first by the end of the day. Despite the lack of racing, that night the Cohasset Sailing Club Race Team exercised their competitiveness in a couple games of laser tag to celebrate Jack's 13th birthday.

On Tuesday, the sailors were confronted with quite the opposite conditions. The sailors rigged and launched their boats, and headed out of the harbor on the second day in the rain and a stiff 15-knot breeze. Fortunately, these circumstances presented the opportunity for the Race Committee to get five races off that day. By the last two races, however, it was pouring rain and the breeze had picked up to 20 knots with gusts to 25 and 30 knots. While about a third of the sailors abandoned racing for the day due to the tough conditions, the Cohasset Sailing Club Race Team stuck it out to the end and proved their ability to sail in the strong wind.

On Wednesday, the last day of racing, the sailors were once again presented with calm seas and little wind. The breeze did pick up enough to get one race off, however, concluding the regatta with a total of six races sailed. After an exhausting week, the Cohasset Sailing Club Race Team has been practicing to hit the water again next week at the Junior Olympics hosted by Scituate Harbor Yacht Club Aug. 3-4. Come down and watch if you can!!

12-acre land buy up for discussion again

Late last year, a 12-acre parcel of land off Beach Street went on the market. The undeveloped land off Beach Street was the missing piece to connect several town open space parcels and Cohasset Conservation Trust properties (Great Brewster Woods, Deans Meadow, Sumner Smith Overlook, Blake property).

In January, the town sought out the assistance of the non-profit group Trust for Public Lands and the Selectmen supported exploring a land purchase.

In March, the land purchase was off the table. In a letter, the Trust for Public Lands formally notified the Board of Selectmen of its withdrawal from its offer to purchase the parcel known as the Morrissey Property citing the economic climate and concerns about raising the funds needed to purchase the property.

Now, in July, a private fundraising group could be forming to generate funds for the purchase of the property. Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said the fundraising group has some volunteers, but no one to chair the group yet. She said one of the important elements right now is to determine how much private funding is needed to finance the purchase.

Grants are available for this type of land purchase, but Quigley said the town missed the deadline. The next round is not until summer 2010.

The property is owned by Ellen Morrissey of 488 Jerusalem Road and includes two access points: one from the Town Hall parking lot and the other from Beach Street. The property is currently on the market for $1.7 million.

The Selectmen will discuss the possibility of a land buy in open session at a future meeting.

Quigley encouraged residents interested in participating on a fundraising committee to contact her or Sandy Durant, Open Space Committee chairman.

Free legal clinic

The Bar Association of Norfolk County will sponsor a free legal clinic from 6-8 p.m. Aug. 4 at Quincy District Court as a public service to the community. Attorneys will be available for a one-on-one consultation to discuss legal questions. Consultations are confidential.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of July 20-24. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

RETAIN AFFORDABLE HOUSING (S 2111)

Senate 35-0, approved and sent to the House a bill that would require owners of "expiring use" affordable housing to notify a tenant at least two years before bringing a unit's rent back to market rates. Expiring use affordable housing is housing that was built or renovated by private developers with the help of federal money in exchange for the developers guaranteeing that a percentage of the units would be affordable for the life of the federally subsidized mortgage.

A few years ago, the U.S. Congress approved a law allowing the owners of these buildings to pre-pay their mortgages and thus end their obligation to keep a percentage of the units affordable. In addition, thousands of these building have 30 and 40 year mortgages that will be paid off in the next few years and their owners will be allowed to convert the units to market rates.

Another key provision of the legislation gives the state the right of first refusal to purchase the property at the current appraised value when the owner voluntarily decides to sell it. The measure also offers some other protections to tenants including a cap on how much the rent can be raised during the first three years following the changeover to market rates.

Supporters said that the hiking of these rents would make the state's affordable housing crisis ever worse. They argued that many renters, including low income residents, seniors and disabled people would not be able to afford the increased rent which in some cases will triple. They noted that there are thousands of units that are about to expire and said that thousands of people will be displaced and homeless. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

Y

REGULATE MIXED MARTIAL ARTS COMPETITION (S 998)

Senate 34-1, approved and sent to the House a bill regulating kickboxing, wrestling, karate, jiu-jitsu, and other mixed martial arts competition in Massachusetts. The most popular example of this competition is the Ultimate Fighting Championship. The bill would replace the current State Boxing Commission that regulates boxing with a new and expanded State Athletic Commission that also regulates the promoters, fighters, referees and doctors of mixed martial arts. Currently, this sport is not regulated by the state. The measure also gives the state four percent of the revenue from ticket sales and imposes a two percent tax, up to $75,000, on revenues from televised events.

Supporters said that there are currently martial arts matches across the state that are completely unregulated and can lead to fraud, injuries and even death. They argued that the bill would lead to the popular Ultimate Fighting Championship staging matches in the Bay State. They noted that these matches would generate up to $12 million in revenue for ancillary businesses and untold money for the state from the sales tax, meals tax and hotel tax that would be generated when people come to these events.

The lone opponent said that she did not want to sanction this type of sport when there is already too much violence in America. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

Y

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

RESTRICT TANNING SALONS TO ADULTS - The Public Health Committee heard testimony on a bill that would prohibit anyone under age 16 from using a tanning bed at a tanning salon. Teens aged 16 and 17 would be permitted to tan with parental permission. Teens under 18 would not be allowed to work at the salon. Supporters said that these booths are dangerous and increase by 75 percent a person's chances of getting melanoma. They said that while adults can make their own decisions, it is the state's job to protect children.

TAX CUTS - The Revenue Committee (formerly known as the Taxation Committee) held a hearing on dozens of proposals that would offer tax relief to Massachusetts taxpayers. The measures include allowing taxpayers to deduct several things from their taxable income including all fees paid to a city or town for participation in sports, academic or other student activities (S 1225); the cost of transporting students to school if bus service is not made available by the local city or town (H 2731); municipal fees for water, sewer and refuse collection (S 1334); up to $10,000 for the travel, lodging and lost wages of a person who donates a human organ (S 1333) and up to $3,000 for expenses for commuting to work (S 1345).

Other proposals allow any city or town to replace its residential real estate tax with a local income tax (H 3607); increase taxes by allowing a graduated income tax (a higher rate) on millionaires (H 2733); reduce the state income tax rate from 5.3 percent to 5.15 percent for 2011 and to five percent in 2012 (H 2781) and allow seniors over 65 to receive up to a $2,000 annual tax credit for the cost of their medical prescriptions (S 1745). Seniors whose drugs costs are fully covered by an insurance plan would be allowed a credit for the cost of their premiums and deductibles.

SELL RIGHTS TO NAME ZOOS - Rep. Alice Wolf (D-Cambridge) has proposed a solution if the Legislature does not override Gov. Patrick's veto and vote to restore $4 million for the state's zoos. The Cambridge legislator says that the state should sell the naming rights to these zoos in order to raise much needed revenue to keep them open and save jobs.

Health Notes

H1N1 has not gone away

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A most important issue that bears watching is the progress of preparations for the swine flu threat.

First off, the Board of Health is an equal opportunity purveyor of health care matters. We have no plans to recommend the cancellation of any pilgrimages to Mecca as some Arab states have done or anything like that. Still, there're some important key dates coming up which we feel very strongly about. A most important issue that bears watching is the progress of preparations for the swine flu threat. Many characteristics of the Swine Flu virus, also known as H1N1, are similar to the behavior of the 1918 virus about which very little is known. However that "Spanish Flu" pandemic is reported to have killed 40 million people worldwide.

As of last Friday, in Massachusetts, there were 1,343 confirmed cases of H1N1; with more than 164 cumulative hospitalizations and six deaths – about 700 deaths worldwide.

The Massachusetts DPH has purchased $2.5 million worth of antivirals for the Commonwealth stockpile and will have enough to treat more than 300,000 individuals.

In the United States there are 40,617 confirmed or probable cases of novel H1N1 in 55 states and territories (District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands) with 263 deaths.

World Health Organization is no longer issuing global tables showing the numbers of confirmed cases for all countries. Nevertheless, an ongoing need still exists for all countries to closely monitor unusual events, such as clusters of cases of severe or fatal pandemic (H1N1) virus, clusters of respiratory illness requiring hospitalization, or unexplained or unusual clinical patterns associated with serious or fatal cases. Also, our National Center for Disease Control is tracking changes in patterns of transmission. Signals to watch for include spikes in absenteeism from schools or the workplace or a more severe disease pattern (such as suggested by a surge in Emergency Room visits).

Evidence to date suggests that population immunity to this virus is low, particularly among the young. Antibodies were found among some older people but not in any younger adults or children. Widespread susceptibility to this virus among young persons creates the potential for large numbers of cases with more hospitalizations and deaths among younger age groups than would be expected for a typical routine seasonal influenza virus. Importantly, severe disease and death caused by novel H1N1 thus far have affected younger adults, children and pregnant women, in addition to people of all ages with certain underlying medical conditions.

It is therefore necessary to reach school-age populations either through venues such as school-associated mass vaccination efforts, or, where private capacity is sufficient, through local pediatric providers.

Steps you can take. Stay informed. Health officials will provide additional information as it becomes available.

- Cover your nose and mouth with a tissue when you cough or sneeze. Throw the tissue in the trash after you use it.
- Wash your hands often with soap and water, especially after you cough or sneeze. Alcohol-based hand cleaners are also effective.
- Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth. Germs spread this way.
- Try to avoid close contact with sick people.
- If you are sick with a flu-like illness, to keep from infecting others and spreading the virus further, stay home for seven days after your symptoms begin or until you have been symptom-free for 24 hours.
- Follow public health advice regarding school closures, avoiding crowds and other social distancing measures.

Additional data distilled from other sources

Federal government centralizes communications about H1N1 and seasonal flu on the federal government's new Web site, http://www.flu.gov/. This one-stop, comprehensive site brings together flu-related information from across HHS and other federal agencies. The expanded site builds on the pandemic planning information long presented on www.pandemicflu.gov and incorporates information about the novel H1N1 flu as well as the seasonal flu.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention expects to have a vaccine available in late October or early November 2009 specifically prepared for this virus. CDC has stated that sufficient syringes and needles, alcohol swabs and sharps containers will be distributed to accommodate H1N1 vaccine administration.

At the time vaccine is distributed the CDC will also finalize a targeted population approach to vaccination. CDC has stratified the United States population into the following DRAFT priority groups with regard to receiving H1N1 vaccine based upon our current understanding of individuals at greatest risk of contracting significant illness from exposure to the virus. This guidance was posted on July 8. The most current posting can be found at the following URL: http://www.cdc.gov/h1n1flu/vaccination/statelocal/planning.htm.

Priority groups

- Students and staff (all ages) associated with schools, kindergarten through grade 12.
- Students (6 months of age and older) and staff (all ages) in child care centers.
- Pregnant women.
- Other children 6 months of age to 4 years old.
- New parents.
- Household contacts of children less than 6 months of age.
- Non-elderly adults (age 65 years) with medical conditions that increase the risk of complications of influenza.
- Health care workers and emergency services sector personnel (regardless of age).

The vaccination of the remaining population would be accomplished after the identified priority groups have been vaccinated. At this time municipal planners should anticipate that all persons receiving H1N1 vaccine will require two injections approximately 28 days apart.

H1N1 vaccine for obstetrical care providers in Massachusetts.

In order to ensure that all pregnant women are vaccinated against seasonal influenza and, potentially, H1N1 influenza, all obstetrical care providers should establish procedures to administer vaccine in their practices. While seasonal influenza vaccine is available for purchase through vaccine manufacturers and distributors, the novel H1N1 influenza vaccine, should it become available, will be available only through MDPH, at least initially.

In order to receive state-supplied seasonal influenza vaccine, and H1N1 influenza vaccine should it become available, providers must be enrolled in the Massachusetts Department of Public Health Vaccine Program. An enrollment packet with the necessary information and forms were mailed to obstetrical care providers this week – please look for it.

HR Professional Loses 15 Pounds in Three Months!

Over the past 15 years or so I have joined and quit a few gyms. All the while getting slow results, but not maintaining them. I would go over to my gym and do the same weights, cardio, etc. over and over again. I found myself getting very bored or simply just not wanting to go.

Several weeks ago I was reading the local newspaper and there was an ad for a new gym "for women" opening in my area, this peaked my interest and I thought I would give it a try. I went and had my free workout and consultation with the owner/manager. He asked what I wanted to do for myself and I said I wanted to lose 15 pounds. He assured me that as long as I worked hard, eat the right foods and stay committed to the program, I would reach and surpass my goals!

After 3 short months I have lost those 15 pounds, over 8 inches and my body fat count is down almost 6% as well. I watch what I eat and I am working on that mid-life belly! I workout 3 mornings a week with 3 great women. The work is hard but I love it and know the benefits will help me live a long and healthy life. I actually look forward to my workouts and believe there is no chance for boredom. It is the BEST thing I have done for myself!

I encourage every woman to checkout Get In Shape for Women. I promise you will not be sorry with the results"!!

Cohasset 11A Travel Baseball wins Weymouth Tournament

Coach recaps the tourney

Game 1:

The tournament began last Friday night when heavy thunderstorms soaked the area. After a slight delay the games began with Cohasset facing Milton National in game 1. Cohasset sent out their ace Jack Chamberlain to face the tough Milton squad. After a leadoff single and a groundout, Chamberlain suffered some control problems hitting one batter and walking five, another single and Milton led early 5-0. John Paul Adams relieved Chamberlain and got out of further trouble. Cohasset's coaches knew if they were going to be successful in this tournament Chamberlain would have to be a big factor as the tournament progressed and pulled him to save his innings allowed.

Cohasset suffered some more control problems again in the third. After two quick outs, Adams would walk four batters to increase Milton's lead to 6-0. Cohasset's bats awoke in the top of the fourth when Ryan McElhinney reached on an error, Brett Dooley singled, Adams singled, Evan Canney singled and Matt Montefusco blasted a three run homer to centerfield. Cohasset now only trailed 6-5. Cohasset threatened again in the fifth but some great defense from Milton kept the score at 6-5 entering the final frame. Dooley led off the sixth with a single and remained at first after two long fly outs. Cohasset was down to their last hope but they just happened to have Montefusco stepping into the batter's box with the tying run at first. Montefusco lined one off the left centerfield fence but a perfect relay throw from Milton's leftfielder to their shortstop eventually nailed Dooley at the plate and Milton survived a valiant Cohasset comeback to win 6-5.

Dan Axelson struck out the side in the fourth and retired Milton one, two, three in the fifth to allow Cohasset their opportunity to attempt a comeback in the sixth.

Game 2:

Game two was at 1:00 on Saturday afternoon against Hanson. Cohasset sent Ryan McElhinney to the mound to face a Hanson team which won on Friday night 12-0 against Parkway (West Roxbury). Hanson got two quick runs in the top of the first but Cohasset wasted no time putting some runs of their own on the board. Justin Fein led off the bottom of the first

On Saturday, Edey & Duff featured the Builders Cup Race for boats built by E & D and sailed by those who know Good Boats.

The day was foggy to begin ,but by the time the race started at 1300 hours the sun broke through the fog and the the SW wind piped up to make for typical Buzzards Bay sailing conditions.The scene was awesome, Edey & Duff boats, Five Stone Horses, five Beetle Whale Boats rowed by club members from Buzzards Bay Rowing Club and from New Bedford Rowing Club, two 28 foot Shearwaters under yawl rig, a Dough Dish, a Stuart Knockabout and a new cat boat, Hull No.1 recently built and launched this day, all sailing about.

Also bobbing on moorings were Fatty Knees which seemed to be waiting contently for their passengers to finish the race. The Stone Horse race was competitive and at times the scene of all these good boats in view was a special sight to behold.The winner, Hull No. 3, Young America crossed the finish line only a few seconds before Windfall, manned by Cohasset sailor G. Robert Jackson of Woodland Drive, and the rest of the boats. After all the boats were moored and crews rowed ashore,all were treated to a Boatyard Cookout.

Afterwards Dave Davignon gave a talk about the past and future of Edey & Duff. The guests numbered 60 or 70 and all appeared to be having a fun time.

All the Edey & Duff workers were present with their families and friends, plus boat lovers and owners from Texas

Football season sneaking up on us

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

How did it happen so soon?

It seems like baseball weather just got here and all of a sudden we're already talking football.

Semi-pro teams all over the region have already started games, and today is the first day of Patriots training camp.

Don't blink because colleges will be teeing up in the next few weeks and high schools are just about set to start rolling.

Most schools in the area, get going Sept. 11 or 12.

Personally I'm excited, because I love football, but as I've said before, football also means cold is on the way, so there's a little bit of me wishing for at least a few more weeks before the kickoffs.

Putting that aside, lets talk about Patriots camp.

If you're a football fan, you have to go.

Rain can't dampen mood at the CCBL All-Star Game

By David Wolcott
DWOLCOTT@CNC.COM

BOSTON – As of June 18, a total of 785 former Cape Cod Baseball League players had made their way into the lineup for a Major League Baseball game. The next wave of future MLB players was on display Thursday night at a soggy Fenway Park, during the Under Armor Cape Cod League All-Star Game.

The West squad, led in part by a scoreless inning each by three Wareham Gatemen pitchers, was ahead 3-1 in the middle of the fifth when the game was halted by rain.

Brandon Workman (Texas) started the game and struck out a pair in his inning of work. Jack Armstrong (Vanderbilt) followed with a scoreless inning of his own before handing off the ball to Eric Pfisterer, who struck out two in his inning of work.

The star of the game offensively was Cotuit's Zach Cox, who drove in a pair of runs with a long triple and then a single in the first two innings.

Wareham's lone positional player on the team, shortstop Derek Dietrich (Georgia Tech), flied out in his only time at bat. The 2007 first-round draft pick of the Houston Astros was legitimately just happy for the opportunity to play in the lyric little handbox on Yawkey Way.

Parziale has heart of a champion

PHOTOS COURTESY OF THE NEW ENGLAND GOLF ASSOCIATION

It has been a terrific summer for Thorny Lea's Matt Parziale, who won the Brockton City Four-Ball and the New England Amateur in the same week. He has his eyes on a pro career.

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

We remember Matt Parziale, who won last week's New England Amateur at Portsmouth (N.H.) Country Club, as a skinny 14-year-old who would hang around Thorny Lea Golf Club, picking up a few dollars as a caddie on weekends.

He was a range rat.

He'd do anything to hit golf balls, play a few holes or chip and putt around the practice green.

He'd clean your golf clubs, work the bag round, anything to be around golf.

He was always courteous and respectful. That happens when you come from a hard-working family and attend Christian school, New Testament in Norton.

In fact, he would have been the best high school player in the state four years ago, earned All-Scholastic honors and maybe a college scholarship. He didn't. New Testament didn't have a golf team.

We'll never forget one round he was caddying in our group.

We were on the par-4 fifth hole and Parziale was fore caddying down the left side of the hole where trees and wetlands would jump out and steal perfectly good drives.

Well, we hit a screamer right at the poor kid. He reacted slowly, but as our Titliest targeted his head like a scud missile, we screamed, 'fore.' Finally, Parziale turned and jumped to get out of the way.

The poor kid was scrambled. His face was all bruised and swollen from his collision with the tree. We tried to convince him to go in. But he stayed with us for the rest of the round.

It told us a lot about young Mr. Parziale. He had guts and determination and to win in golf, no matter what anybody says, you need guts. If you haven't played tournament golf, you simply don't understand how mentally torturous golf can be.

Waterboarding is for sissies compared to a downhill eight-footer for par when a title is on the line and if you don't think so, ask Mr. Thomas Watson, who could have made history by sinking a simple putt to win the British Open. That stroke and the 72nd and final hole will torture him forever.

Parziale did not have to sink a putt to win the New England Amateur Championship last week. He made everything he had to and won easily. He carded a three-round 5-under par 283 to win the title.

The NE Am crown is the latest in a summer of outstanding tournaments for Parziale this summer.

Days before the NE Am, he and three-time State Amateur champion Steve Tasho of Easton combined to win the Brockton City Four-Ball Championship. He was low amateur and second overall in the Mass Open, made it to the quarterfinals of the North & South Amateur at Pinehurst in North Carolina and advanced to the match play phase of this year's State Amateur.

"It feels good, but it hasn't settled in just yet," Parziale, 22, a recent Southeastern University (Fla.) graduate, told reporters after winning the New England title. "I wanted to have a good summer and so far it's been awesome."

After this summer, don't be surprised if Parziale turns professional. He's been told to find a sponsor to help him pursue that dream. (Hint: anyone – or any group – out there who have deep pockets and would like to finance his dream, give him a call).

"We'll see what happens at the U.S. Amateur [qualifier next week], but I'm playing well which helps. There are a ton of names on that past champions list that have done well on the PGA Tour so I'd like to join them," he said.

Braintree golfer met Watson at British Open

The night before the opening round of this year's British Open at Turnberry, Tom Watson had a second-encounter with Rory McGuire of Braintree.

The two first met when Watson was honored by the Ouimet Caddie Scholarship Fund at a Boston dinner in May. McGuire, an Ouimet scholar winner and Vanderbilt University graduate, was a guest speaker.

How surprising was it for them to meet again at the British Open? McGuire was there as a marshal. While studying at St. Andrews University, he became a member at St. Andrews Golf Club, which provides marshals for the 18th hole of the British Open.

McGuire, who was a marshal at Carnoustie a year ago, was working at Turnberry this year.

When he was in Braintree High School, McGuire was the captain of the varsity golf and tennis teams. As a high school youngster, he worked every summer at Braintree Municipal Golf Course.

Evan Aamodt of Norwood, Brad Cadigan of South Weymouth, Steven Daly and Mike Calef of Brockton, Timothy Carey of Plymouth, Christopher Hawley and Douglas Clapp of Walpole, Andrew Diramio and Michael Gunderson of Duxbury, Bill Drohen of Stoughton, Keith Duffy of Braintree, Brian Houle of Hingham, Robert Mancini of Mansfield and James McDonough of Milton are entered at Maplegate in Bellingham. A very special place

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Every golf course is unique in one way or another, and it's not just about a monster par-5, a treacherous par-4 or a scenic par-3.

BRAINTREE MUNICIPAL GOLF COURSE

Braintree Municipal Golf Course, thanks to head professional Bob Beach, offers programs you will not find at many courses in America.

Sometimes it is about people and at Braintree Municipal Golf Course, it is Bob Beach, the long-time head professional.

When you visit Braintree Muny, you got to search out the old scorecard hanging on the wall. It's from 1938 when Scotsman Bob Steill was head professional. It was a nine-holer at the time and the fees were pretty steep. It cost 50 cents for a weekday and it was $1 on weekends. An annual membership was $24. The scorecard had ads for Ruby's Delicatessen and the Braintree Package Store.

Braintree, original designed by Wayne Stiles, was nine holes. In 1970, designer Sam Mitchell expanded it to 18 holes.

Before the Golf Boom, it was a highly sought after course. Golfers used to camp out in the parking lot in hopes of getting prime tee times. It's still a terrific track with some wonderful holes.

The seventh, a dogleg par-4 to the left, is a favorite. And it's nice to start off with a hole like its first, a short (329 yard) par-4 that gives you a few minutes to find your game.

The recent rain has played havoc with the golf course, though. In fact, it was closed last weekend because of wet grounds.

"It's probably a good thing because it could have gotten so beat up if we opened it," said Beach.

Braintree is special because of Beach.

He has devoted much of his time to making golf available for youngsters – an annual fee is only $200 – a bargain. Not only does he make golf available for the average youngster, every Monday from April through October, he has a morning golf clinic for special needs youngsters.

"One week we have kids from the Cardinal Cushing School in Hanover and the next it might be the May Center for Autism in Randolph and the next it could be a group of special needs kids from the Quincy YMCA," said Beach.

There is a Special Olympics tournament every October and many times, professionals from neighboring clubs will come and volunteer their time as well. Beach held an educational seminar, "Adapting a Golf Swing for Special Needs Students," for eight NEPGA professionals recently.

He had several of them help out when 40 special needs students from the Braintree public schools came for a morning of golf.

He even mixes regular kids with special needs youngsters. "They do it in the school and we thought it would be only right to do it here, too," he added.

Kevin Riordan, a special needs golfer, "has been my right hand man. He's helped is so many ways around the club with the programs."

He has discovered that he has more success with autistic youngsters on the putting green. So he set up an 18-hole course on the putting green for them during a visit. "It seems they grasp some things more visually."

with a walk, John Paul Adams reached on an error, Brett Dooley singled and Matt Montefusco hit his second home run of the tournament and Cohasset led 4-2. Cohasset increased their lead to 6-2 when Fein and Adams hit back to back home runs in the second inning.

Hanson erupted for six runs in the third and regained the lead at 8-6. Cohasset was able to tie the score in the bottom of the third without getting a hit. McElhinney led off with a walk, Jack Chamberlain and Davis Cronin reached on errors and some aggressive base running allowed Cohasset to even the score at 8-8. In the fourth Cohasset was able to push across the go ahead run when Adams and Dooley singled, Montefusco walked to load the bases with one out. Ryan McElhinney then knocked in what would be the winning run with a fielder's choice ground ball to shortstop.

Dooley pitched a scoreless fourth and fifth and turned the ball over to Jack Chamberlain to close it out in the sixth. The game ended in dramatic fashion with Milton runners on second and third and two outs the Milton batter lined a shot right at Chamberlain who put up his big glove and snared the hard liner to end the game.

Despite giving up eight runs the trio of Cohasset pitchers only allowed three walks.

Game 3:

Cohasset returned to Weymouth later that night to face Hanover under the lights at 7:00pm. Hanover had beaten Cohasset in the regular season a week earlier 4-3. Cohasset got on the board first, Justin Fein led off the first with a single and scored on two walks and a wild pitch. Hanover came right back grabbing a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the first after John Paul Adams gave up back to back singles, followed by a two run double.

Montefusco relieved John Paul Adams in the second, who left after one inning with a sore arm. Cohasset scored three times in the fourth, Adams, Dooley and Montefusco all scored with the help of a wild pitch and a Ryan McElhinney single with the bases loaded. Cohasset led 4-2 after four innings.

This is the point in the tournament when Cohasset evolved into a championship caliber team. Davis Cronin led off the fifth with a single, with one out Jack Osten singled, Lucas Slater knocked in Cronin with a groundball to second and Osten scored after Dylan Piasecki reached on catcher's interference and Justin Fein walked. Cohasset's confidence seem to grow as the lower part of the order increased the lead to 6-2 and high fives were being given out all over the dugout.

Montefusco continued to mowed down Hanover batter after batter, pitching the last five innings and only allowing single runs in the fifth and sixth, and then at the plate helping himself by hitting his third home run of the tournament in the top of the sixth to seal the victory for Cohasset 7-4.

Cohasset's pitching allowed only two walks and struck out seven.

Game 4:

Sunday afternoon brought bright sunshine and lots of humidity as the Cohasset squad faced off against the host team from Weymouth at 3:30.

Once again Cohasset looked to Jack Chamberlain to take the mound and from the first pitch "Big Jack" was on. Jack pitched the first three innings striking out seven batters out of the first nine outs.

Offensively, Cohasset scored two in the first after singles by McElhinney and Dooley were followed by a Montefusco walk which loaded the bases for Evan Canney. Canney lined a two run single to center and Cohasset once again had an early lead 2-0. Cohasset increased their lead to 3-0 after Fein led off the third with a walk, McElhinney singled and who else but Matt Montefusco knocked him in with a single. Weymouth got on the board in the fourth after Dooley allowed three singles and Cohasset still led 3-1. Cohasset managed to get a very important insurance run in the bottom of the fifth, Fein and McElhinney singled, Dooley was hit by a pitch and that man Montefusco again came through for Cohasset, this time working a bases loaded walk to force in a run, 4-1.

Weymouth would not go down without a fight in the sixth. Dooley pitching his third inning gave up three singles around a strikeout and a ground out to Jack Osten at third base and Weymouth was within 4-3 and had the tying runner on second with two outs. The game was secure after Jack Chamberlain fielded a tough groundball to first and narrowly beat the fast Weymouth runner to the bag and Cohasset had suddenly won their third game in a row, 4-3.

Game 5:

Cohasset not only had little time to rest in between games but also knew if they won their next game they would be in the tournament finals on Wednesday. After a brief cooling off period and a rousing rendition of "Sweet Caroline" for the standing room only crowd in Weymouth, Cohasset was back onto the field for their 5:30pm game.

Cohasset faced an undermanned Parkway team from West Roxbury. Parkway took the field with only nine players and an 0-4 record in the tournament. Cohasset scored five times in the first on a walk to Fein and after one out Dooley doubled to right center, Montefusco and Canney followe with walks before John Paul Adams cleared the bases with a triple to right field, 5-0 Cohasset. Parkway showed no quit as they came right back with three runs off of McElhinney in the bottom of the first and would have had more if it wasn't for the tremendous defense of Davis Cronin at secondbase, Justin Fein in centerfield and Dylan Piasecki at thirdbase.

Fein and McElhinney scored again in the second and Cohasset now led 7-3. Cohasset stretched their lead to 9-3 in the fifth when Fein reached base for the third time with a single and scored on Dooley's second double of the game, and Dooley scored on another single by Evan Canney.

Chamberlain lined a shot off of the Parkway pitcher's ankle forcing him to leave the game and Parkway had to finish the game with only eight players.

Cohaaset got solid pitching from, McElhinney, Adams, Michael Connelly and Montefusco to win 9-5 and advance to Wednesday night's final game against Milton National.

Game 6

Cohasset beat Milton National 12-4 in the final, Wednesday night. Details were unavailable at press time.

An MVP is awarded to each team after each game, the MVP's for Cohasset were:

Game 1 – Matt Montefusco
Game 2 – John Paul Adams
Game 3 – Matt Montefusco
Game 4 – Ryan McElhinney
Game 5 – Justin Fein

Pirates complete championship run

The Pirates of the Cohasset Youth Baseball Association won the 2009 Major League Championship series in a best-of-three game series sweep of the Dodgers 10-5 and 7-5.

After completing the regular season in first place with a record of 8-5-1, the Pirates advanced to the finals after a tough three game series against the Red Sox concluding in a nail biting 10-9 win in a game three featuring a persistent rain, tough hitting by both teams and a game-changing base path collision.

Ace, Pat Holway got the win, ably closed by the upstart rookie Xander Schubert with persistent hitting support by the deep veteran Pirates roster punctuated by key late game hits by rookies Liam Prescott and Jack Osten. The Dodgers, who completed the regular season in second place, swept their semi-finals series in two games against the perennial league contender and defending champion Cardinals to advance to the championship series.

you want to be a professional baseball player," Dietrich said while watching his Gateman teammate Brett Eibner compete in the Home Run contest. "This is a once in a lifetime chance for all of us, even though every one of us hopes and dream that one day we can come to these parks every day for a living."

But for now, Dietrich said he was more than happy to take to the diamond at Spillane Field every day and take another step toward his goal of making it to the major leagues.

"The people of Wareham have been great, making us feel at home right from the start," Dietrich said. "My host family (the Martin's) have been unbelievably gracious in taking me into their home and making me feel like a part of the family."

The CCBL community suffered a huge loss earlier this year with the passing of Gateman president John Wylde. Dietrich said he was sad he never had the chance to meet Wylde in person, but he was tremendously impressed by the telephone conversations he had with the longtime baseball icon before coming to Wareham.

"You could tell the depth of love he had for both Wareham and the Cape Cod Baseball League," Dietrich said. "It's a shame that I never got the chance to meet him in the flesh, but you can see the love he had for the game has rubbed off on the entire Gateman organization. I'm sure they will continue to follow in the path he set for the team."

One of the biggest supporters of the CCBL has been Hall of Fame baseball writer Peter Gammons. The ESPN commentator was one of the more popular figures around the batting cage before the game Thursday night.

"This is the first taste these kids get of playing something that's really like professional baseball, with the wooden bats and the commitment to the game," Gammons opined when asked about the importance of the CCBL in developing pro ball players. "They play baseball every day (during the summer) and it becomes something close to a job for them. This isn't a controlled environment like they live with in college. They face some adversity for the first time and they have to learn how to deal with it if they are going to make the step up to professional baseball.

"In the Cape League they are out on their own and they have to figure things out for themselves, which is the way that it should be."

Despite the fact that many of the players in the league already perform in front of large crowds in college, Gammons said that taking the field at Fenway Park was a huge thrill for every single one of the ballplayers. Thursday was the first time in 23 years that the All-Star game had been played at Fenway.

"For some of these kids, this game will be the first time they've stepped onto a professional baseball field and you can see their eyes light up once they are here. They're playing a high level of baseball all summer, but once they step onto the field at Fenway, they've got a taste of the big time for the very first time."

Gammons still follows many of the players he's watched over prior summers as they've made their way from the minor leagues to "The Show." There is one former Wareham Gatemen slugger in particular that he's rooting for to make the big time.

"One of my favorite players ever to watch in the Cape League was Matt Murton. I'm still waiting for him to get a real chance to hit it big," Gammons said. "Someday he is going to get the chance to show what he can do and he is really going to open up some eyes. There will come a time for him to get his big chance. He may even get that chance here in Boston."

One former CCBL player who did get his shot in Boston was Lou Merloni. The Framingham native was a popular utility player for the Red Sox in the 1990s and can now be heard and seen on radio and TV as a baseball analyst.

"I'd been to Fenway tons of times as a kid, but coming here as a player in the Cape Cod League was something else completely," said Merloni, a Dennis resident who played with Bourne (1991) and Cotuit (1992). "The entire Cape League experience was an awesome time for me. To be a local kid and get a chance to play in the best college league around in my own backyard was an unbelievable opportunity.

"It was a great chance for me to show what I could do against top competition. This is what baseball should be about in its finest form. The players even get to experience our lovely New England weather."

There are football themed games, food, sometimes the cheerleaders come out, and sometimes there's music.

The best part is that everything is free.

Well, almost everything.

You will have to pony up for food and drink, but it doesn't cost anything to watch the practices and parking is also on the house.

That is personally one of my favorite aspects, because I hate to admit it, but I truly cringe at paying for parking.

It kills me every time I have to pay to park.

Maybe it's because I've lived in California and Florida where it didn't cost as much as Boston if it cost at all.

I remember going to watch the Red Sox play at Tampa and just about jumped for joy when the parking guy just waved us into the lot by the Trop, said enjoy the game and that was it.

When I worked at Disney, my favorite perk was free parking for cast members.

One time I drove circles around the Fenway area, waiting for someone to leave on the street.

I still smile when I think of the spot I ended up getting on the street less than a block away after someone pulled out when I was right behind.

I don't remember who won the game, but parking free, that I remember.

I cringe when I have to go into the city and see the ticket monkeys, (Ok, I just see those Wizard of Oz flying monkeys in parking enforcement uniforms) I mean meter maids zipping around writing tickets. I've always felt that that's just wrong.

Patriots quarterback Tom Brady signs autographs for fans at training camp a few years back. This, and other players signing is a common sight at training camp.

Just one person's opinion. I know they're just doing their job, but it does grate at me.

Well, enough with that.

The reason I started this whole rant was to talk about Patriots camp and the fact that I'm excited about heading over there on Saturday to watch some football, chck out some games and say hello to your neighbors from Scituate High School's team who will be helping out at the Patriots Experience.

Saturday's sessions are 9:30 a.m. to 11:15 a.m. for the morning, and 3:45 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. for the afternoon workouts.

That schedule is the same from July 30 through August 5.

The Patriots Experience is open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Schedules can change though, especially due to weather, so if you plan to go, check out www.patriots.com or call the training camp hotline 508-549-0001.

It's a great way to see players up close, get an idea of the type of work that goes into getting ready for a season, and of course for the kids, there's always the chance for autographs.

The team usually assigns a few players to stay after workouts to sign for a time, and other players, especially new guys often stick around as well.

I will say I'm a little down because one player I was hoping to see, Antwain Spann, who I coached in Little League years ago in California, was released the other day to make room for a newbie.

Hopefully he'll be back. Considering he's been up and down, practice squad, regular squad pretty regularly for three years now, that's my guess.

Still, it would have been fun.

Still, I've been there a few times and it has always been a lot of fun.

Enjoy.

Cohasset Soccer Club sends five Under-12 teams to the Coastal League playoffs

The Cohasset Soccer Club recently completed a great Coastal League Spring season with the Cohasset Under- 12 age group sending five teams to the Coastal League playoff. Playing strong competition against teams from throughout the South Shore, the GU12-2 and the GU12-3 teams and BU12-1, BU12-2 and BU12-3 teams successfully completed their regular season play and each moved into the playoffs. While the Cohasset teams did not obtain the eventual playoff titles, each team had a great season with Cohasset soccer positioned well for success into the future.

The Cohasset U12 team 2 completed their season 9-0-1 and made it into the 2nd round of the playoffs. The team played with great spirit and teamwork throughout the year. They were anchored by great goaltending by Alexander Raymond and a strong and stingy defense consisting of Caroline Prescott, Cassandra Lieberman, Audrey Hart, and Taylor Frederick. During the regular season this team only allowed 6 goals and Alex's goals against average was a measly 0.333.

The team emphasized teamwork and passing and this play was exemplified by the mid field play of Clara Baumgarten, Carly Gunderson, Meredith Corry, Sophie Matthews, Dulaney Bernstein, and Meghan Faherty. Their control, quick passes, and crosses kept the opposing defenses on their heals. The recipients of the mid field's hard work was the forwards. These players kept the heat on the opposing goaltenders with their quick strikes and drives to the net. Tallying up the goals were Sara Blackington, Emily Davis, Madison Hagearty, and Nikkie Federle. This team of mid fielders and forwards totaled 28 goals for the year and showed great teamwork.

The girls entered the playoffs facing a tough Scituate team. The girls played a hard fought game against a bigger Scituate team. Cohasset gained a 1-0 lead on Clara Baumgarten's free kick from 20 yards out in the first half. It looked like that lead would stand, due to the great defense and goaltending, but a rare miscue led to a Scituate break and a tying score with less than 5 minutes in regulation. That is how the score ended and Cohasset was then faced with overtime. Scituate and Cohasset played through two intense overtimes ending with a late flurry by Cohasset in front of the Scituate goal but were unable to punch one through.

The game then moved to sudden death penalty kicks. Clara Baumgarten started Cohasset off by scorching a shot off the crossbar for a near miss. The next three shots by Cohasset were by Madison Haegarty, Caroline Prescott, and Meghan Faherty. Each shot was well struck and the Scituate goalkeeper made tremendous saves. Scituate was having a tough time finding the net on the first four shots and although Cohasset was a bit unlucky, the score was still tied after four shooters. Cohasset's last shooter was the lefty Sara Blackington.

Sara's shot arced gracefully into the top right hand corner and she gave the Cohasset the lead with one Scituate player remaining to shoot. Alex Raymond dug in her heals as the Scituate player readied her shot. Although most of the previous shots were off the mark, this shot was right on the net to Alex's right. Just like the rest of the year, Alex coolly and calmly blocked the shot and snuffed out Scituate's last chance. A brief but loud celebration ensued on the field.

Cohasset's next opponent was an undefeated Plymouth team who had scored 68 goals for the season and let up a grand total of 0. Although the odds were against the girls in blue, they were up to the task. A hard fought first half ended with a 2-1 score and Plymouth's shutout streak ended. The Cohasset girls continued to have opportunities but just could not score on Plymouth and the game and season ended in a 4-1 loss.

The team celebrated the season with a trip to the Boston Breaker's game at Harvard Stadium. The Cohasset girls were selected to be ball girls on the field for the Breakers match against FC Gold Pride. they were able to watch Team USA stars Heather Mitts and Kristine Lilly up close. It was a fitting celebration to a season of hard work, teamwork, and fun.

The Cohasset U12-3 team completed an undefeated Coastal League record of 10-0 and moved into the League playoffs as the winner of their section. The team was composed of 13 5th graders, each adding their own personal touch to the games. The team scored a total of 53 goals during regular season play while letting in only 4 goals. Every player on the team scored at least one goal and the entire team helped to provide a fantastic defense in front of the multiple goalies, especially Sophie Wolfe, who all played superbly.

In the Coastal League playoffs the team faced a much higher seeded Hingham-3 team in the first round. After playing hard and completing regulation time with the score tied at 1-1, the Cohasset team came back in overtime to win the game on a great goal by Cam Rawson. Cohasset then played Middleboro's #1 team in the next round. Playing against a much larger and more experienced team, Cohasset eventually lost the game to the Middleboro team which then went on to play in the League finals. While the loss was their first of the season, the team played hard and never gave up through the entire game and should be commended for their great play.

With the success of this team and young age of each player, the future is bright for Cohasset girls soccer in the next few years.

Cohasset boys U12-1 team

The Cohasset BU12 turned in a very rewarding 6-4 season that easily could have been a more dominant sounding 8-2, if not for a 4-3 home opener loss to Marshfield and a 1-0 penalty kick loss to Hingham. The boys in blue turned in solid wins over Pembroke, Duxbury, Scituate, Hanover, and Halifax (twice) while coming up short twice in tough games against Norwell. Cam Steele, Charlie Surkovic, Cole Morrison, and Sam Morris provided the bulk of the team's 29 goals over 10 games, while Ben Buckley, Evan Canney, and Nathan Bumstead anchored the defense in front of netminders Pat Federle and Rennie Wescott. Defensive and offensive support was supplied by the ever so fleet of foot midfielders Alex Shanley, Ford Murphy, and Liam McHugh.

Although the BU12 Skippers only enjoyed one round of playoff competition, they sounded the highest note of the season in their very last game, a 4-2 loss to a very quick and talented Marshfield No. 1 team. Down 2-0 at the end of the first half, the Cohasset boys came out of halftime ready to send a message to Marshfield that they weren't going down without a fight. Strikes by Steele and Morris tied the game at 2-2 and Cohasset looked like they just might emerge with an upset victory. Injuries depleted Cohasset's reserves and Marshfield eventually scored the go ahead goal plus one in the waning minutes of the game. Nonetheless, it was an inspriational performance that left all parent spectators extremely proud of the collective and individual performances of their sons.

Cohasset boys U12-2 team

The Cohasset Boys U12-2 team made it to the playoffs with a 9 and 1 record. The 14, 4th and 5th graders used speed and team work to out play and out score their opponents throughout the season. Their only loss was to Norwell on a penalty kick late in the game. They really played up a notch during the season. Of the 14 man roster, they lost one player to an injury during the entire regular season, and then lost one of their tough defensive players with three games to go due to a family move. The team clinched their playoff with a win in the final game of the season, beating Plymouth 7 to 0. They finished 1st in the U12D division.

The team roster included, Noah Althuis, Ethan Avotins, Lukas Brown, Charlie DeVries, JD Dietrich, Levente Haber, Cole Joslin, Mathias Loft, Sean Mavilia, Michael McKelvey, Ben Moy, Nick Rosen, Ray Tolosko and Daniel Toomey. The team was coached by Kurt DeVries and AJ Althuis.

Cohasset boys U12-3 team

The Cohasset Boys U12-3 had a fantastic regular season going undefeated with a record of 9-0-1. The 12 player roster consisting of four 4th graders and eight 5th graders, regularly out played their opponents, who in many cases included 5th and 6th graders, through a great mixture of skill, team work and strong desire to compete. The team clinched their play-off spot by winning the U12G division.

In the first round of the play-offs' the team came up against a very strong Norwell team who had the advantage of size and strength, but the Cohasset players fought the entire game and narrowly lost by one goal 2-1. For such a young team to compete at this level can only be a huge positive going into next season.

Team Roster ; Matt Legge, Graham Schwandt, Max Whetstone, Matt Montefusco, Jack Coffmann, Dom Sestito, Eamon Osmanski, Michael Durkin, Thomas Durkin, Ryan Golz, Mark Bodner, Mitchell Buckley.

New cinema launched at Shipyard

Six-screen theater opens doors

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

"We're excited and relieved to finally be open, and we're pleased at the way it came out. It was a big undertaking."
— David Scott, Patriot Cinemas

The final building inspection was performed on Friday morning, July 24. "We opened our doors right after that," said David Scott, whose family has owned the Patriot Cinemas for many years. "We're thrilled to be the second business to open in 'The Launch' portion of the Shipyard." Bed Bath & Beyond was the first to open several weeks ago.

"We're excited and relieved to finally be open, and we're pleased at the way it came out. It was a big undertaking," Scott said with a smile. "Business is picking up every day as more people hear by word of mouth and through our website that the new theater complex is now open. We're hoping more and more people will come!"

Last Friday, the handsome red "Patriot Cinemas" sign had not yet been hoisted into place at the front of the building, but the friendly cinema staff – dressed in crisp black and white outfits — stood ready and waiting with big smiles for their first customers to arrive.

The historical photographs depicting the Shipyard during its heyday in the 1940s that decorate the lobby walls and the corridors leading to the auditoriums bring back memories for some older Hingham and other South Shore residents and other visitors and provide a short history lesson for others. The Cinema lobby will feature a continuously showing short film, "The History of the Hingham Shipyard."

The first week featured a wide variety of films, including "Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince"; "G Force"; "The Ugly Truth"; "Ice Age — Dawn of the Dinosaurs"; "The Hangover"; and "The Proposal."

Construction on the building began last fall. The 18,000-square-foot building features six auditoriums with roomy stadium seating, state-of-the-art projection, large screens, digital stereo surround-sound, plenty of free parking in front of the theater, and popcorn popped fresh every day. "The opening of our new theater will give moviegoers a new, convenient destination to visit to enjoy first-run films on the South Shore," Scott said.

Coming this Friday, July 31: "The Hurt Locker," a widely acclaimed independent film about the Iraq war; "Funny People," an adult film; and "Aliens in the Attic," a family movie.

"We're looking forward to the rest of the businesses and restaurants opening during the coming months, which will help make the Shipyard even more of a destination point," Scott said.

The new Shipyard theater complex is part of the cinema chain owned by the Philip Scott family of Hingham. Founded in 1964, Patriot Cinemas also operates the Loring Hall Theatre in Hingham Square; the Cameo Theatre in South Weymouth; the Hanover Mall Patriot Cinema 10; and the Scituate Patriot Cinema, as well as cinema complexes in Providence, RI, and Portland, Maine.

When the Shipyard cinema was first proposed for the Shipyard, many Hingham residents and town officials feared that Loring Hall might close as a result. However, Scott said recently that the Shipyard revenue flow will help support the smaller Patriot Cinema theaters and allow more offerings at those locations.

The Shipyard theater is open seven days a week. The first show is at noontime. The theater also offers a large, glassed-in room for private birthday parties before or after a movie.

For show schedules and further information, call (781) 749-8780 or visit www.patriotcinemas.com. Every Tuesday is Super Tuesday, when admission to all shows, daytime and nighttime, is $5. Daily bargain matinees are offered until 6 p.m.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 27, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your honesty is, as always, admirable. But you might want to be more tactful in discussing a sensitive issue with a family member. Remember: You can give advice without giving offense.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unexpected workplace snag should be handled quickly and efficiently so that it leaves you time for family get-togethers. Also, you might soon get that long-sought apology.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Aspects favor family matters, especially where children might be involved. Spending time with loved ones helps restore some much-needed balance to your typically busy schedule.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That seemingly clear-cut agreement might not be quite so straightforward after all. Recheck for language that could make you liable for hidden costs and other unpleasant surprises.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Careful, Kitty. Better to deal with someone with proven reliability than with a big talker who promises much but can't confirm that he or she will deliver. Your social life really zings this weekend.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your matchmaking skills are at peak performance levels both in helping to staff workplace teams for upcoming projects and for bringing people together on a more personal basis.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You're finally seeing some progress with your new venture. But be prepared for it to continue at a slower pace than you're used to. Meanwhile, a loved one could be preparing a surprise.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A family member's success pulls you into the spotlight as well. Enjoy it, but don't let it overshadow or otherwise obstruct what you're doing with your own creative projects.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Using what you already know might not be quite enough to get a proposed project off the ground. Look for any new information that might help tilt the scales in your favor.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Good news: While a changing workplace environment can be daunting for some, it could be the challenge you've been hoping for. If so, confront it with confidence and move on.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good time to recheck travel arrangements for any changes that could work to your advantage. Aspects also favor strengthening and restoring old, fraying relationships.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Using your intuitive reasoning helps you cut right through the double-talk and go straight to what's really going on around you. Stay the course until all your questions are answered.

'Jersey Boys' rocks Boston

By R. Scott Reedy

Director Des McNuff knew that if he wanted the story of Frankie Valli and The Four Seasons to hit all the right notes he would need real-life rock musicians on stage in "Jersey Boys," the Broadway musical mega-hit that just opened a 10-week run at Boston's Shubert Theatre. So McNuff, the former artistic director at San Diego's La Jolla Playhouse who has helped develop Broadway hits like "Big River" and "The Who's Tommy," turned to some rockers whose sound he knew best, his own band.

"Some years ago now, Des wanted to play in a rock band, so I put a group together called 'The Red Dirt Band,'" recalled singer and guitarist Steve Gouveia recently by telephone. "When he started working on 'Jersey Boys,' Des asked us to perform in the show. Six members of the band are still in the Broadway company. I was more of an actor, and had a little more theater training, so Des cast me in the small role of Hank on Broadway."

While playing that part, Gouveia soon also began understudying the role of Nick Massi, the original bass singer and bass guitarist for The Four Seasons, on Broadway. Five years later, with the 2006 Tony Award winner for Best Musical still playing to sold-out houses in New York, Gouveia is on national tour as Massi in the show about the legendary pop and rock group that soared to the top of the music business in the 1960s. It is a journey the California native says he never imagined he would take.

"I'm a San Diego actor so the idea that I would ever be on Broadway never even occurred to me. I didn't really know what to expect when I first got involved with this show at La Jolla. We rehearsed in the basement of the Science Building at the University of California at San Diego and people who saw what we were doing would say to me, 'Do you know what you've got here?' I'd just be honest and say, no, I'm not sure what we've got here."

What they had was a musical based on the life story of four young men who cut their teeth on the streets of working class New Jersey neighborhoods and who came together to form a legendary vocal group whose hits included "Sherry," "Big Girls Don't Cry," "Rag Doll," "Working My Way Back to You," "December, 1963 (Oh, What a Night)," and "Who Loves You." Hit records don't always lead to hit Broadway shows, but two original members of The Four Seasons, lead singer Frankie Valli and keyboardist, backing vocalist, and songwriter Bob Gaudio, believed that their catalogue just might spark anew with theater audiences.

"Frankie and Bob had seen 'Mamma Mia!' and, at first, decided they wanted to do something like that where their music would be used to create an original story. It wasn't until later that the decision was made to use their real stories in the show. Frankie and Bob waited to actually see the show until we were about a week into previews at La Jolla. They loved it and told us all, 'Let's go for it.' We've had their full support since then."

That move to non-fiction may have made all the difference, according to Gouveia.

"Over the years, there have been many jukebox musicals. Three others came into New York the same season that we did, 'Lennon,' 'Good Vibrations,' and 'All Shook Up,' and they were all terrible shows. They didn't last because they didn't have strong books. We had felt the interest in our show building almost every night during the San Diego run, but there was still no guarantee. We knew we had great music, of course, but what really made our show a hit, and makes it work every night for new audiences, is the book. The real life stories of Frankie Valli, Bob Gaudio, Tommy DeVito, and Nick Massi are what people respond to when they see this show. That's what makes 'Jersey Boys' a truly great show."

"Jersey Boys, The Story of Frankie Valli & The Four Seasons" will be at the Citi Performing Arts Center Shubert Theatre, 270 Tremont St., Boston, through Sept. 26. For tickets and information, visit the box office, or call 866-348-9738.

Director Des McNuff knew that if he wanted the story of Frankie Valli and The Four Seasons to hit all the right notes he would need real-life rock musicians on stage in "Jersey Boys," the Broadway musical mega-hit that just opened a 10-week run at Boston's Shubert Theatre. So McNuff, the former artistic director at San Diego's La Jolla Playhouse who has helped develop Broadway hits like "Big River" and "The Who's Tommy," turned to some rockers whose sound he knew best, his own band.

"Some years ago now, Des wanted to play in a rock band, so I put a group together called 'The Red Dirt Band,'" recalled singer and guitarist Steve Gouveia recently by telephone. "When he started working on 'Jersey Boys,' Des asked us to perform in the show. Six members of the band are still in the Broadway company. I was more of an actor, and had a little more theater training, so Des cast me in the small role of Hank on Broadway."

While playing that part, Gouveia soon also began understudying the role of Nick Massi, the original bass singer and bass guitarist for The Four Seasons, on Broadway. Five years later, with the 2006 Tony Award winner for Best Musical still playing to sold-out houses in New York, Gouveia is on national tour as Massi in the show about the legendary pop and rock group that soared to the top of the music business in the 1960s. It is a journey the California native says he never imagined he would take.

"I'm a San Diego actor so the idea that I would ever be on Broadway never even occurred to me. I didn't really know what to expect when I first got involved with this show at La Jolla. We rehearsed in the basement of the Science Building at the University of California at San Diego and people who saw what we were doing would say to me, 'Do you know what you've got here?' I'd just be honest and say, no, I'm not sure what we've got here."

What they had was a musical based on the life story of four young men who cut their teeth on the streets of working class New Jersey neighborhoods and who came together to form a legendary vocal group whose hits included "Sherry," "Big Girls Don't Cry," "Rag Doll," "Working My Way Back to You," "December, 1963 (Oh, What a Night)," and "Who Loves You." Hit records don't always lead to hit Broadway shows, but two original members of The Four Seasons, lead singer Frankie Valli and keyboardist, backing vocalist, and songwriter Bob Gaudio, believed that their catalogue just might spark anew with theater audiences.

"Frankie and Bob had seen 'Mamma Mia!' and, at first, decided they wanted to do something like that where their music would be used to create an original story. It wasn't until later that the decision was made to use their real stories in the show. Frankie and Bob waited to actually see the show until we were about a week into previews at La Jolla. They loved it and told us all, 'Let's go for it.' We've had their full support since then."

That move to non-fiction may have made all the difference, according to Gouveia.

"Over the years, there have been many jukebox musicals. Three others came into New York the same season that we did, 'Lennon,' 'Good Vibrations,' and 'All Shook Up,' and they were all terrible shows. They didn't last because they didn't have strong books. We had felt the interest in our show building almost every night during the San Diego run, but there was still no guarantee. We knew we had great music, of course, but what really made our show a hit, and makes it work every night for new audiences, is the book. The real life stories of Frankie Valli, Bob Gaudio, Tommy DeVito, and Nick Massi are what people respond to when they see this show. That's what makes 'Jersey Boys' a truly great show."

"Jersey Boys, The Story of Frankie Valli & The Four Seasons" will be at the Citi Performing Arts Center Shubert Theatre, 270 Tremont St., Boston, through Sept. 26. For tickets and information, visit the box office, or call 866-348-9738.

Coast Guard seeks takers for Minot Light

By Brian P. Nanos
BNANOS@CNC.COM

The U.S. Coast Guard is giving away lighthouses.

It tried to give away 12 in 2008 and plans to get rid of 11 this year, including Minot Light, off the northern coast of Scituate.

According to a notice of availability released July 31 by the United States General Services Administration, the 115-foot structure, which has guarded the rocks near Cohasset Harbor since 1860, is available to a not-for-profit, government or local agency free of charge. If no non-profit agency is found to take control of the light, the lighthouse, which is accessible only by boat, will be sold at public auction.

Local historian John Galluzzo said that because the lighthouse was built in Cohasset but sits in Scituate waters, both towns have, in the past, claimed it.

"It's an argument that's never going to die," he said.

Having only received the notice of availability that morning, Lynne DeGiacomo, executive director of Cohasset Historical Society, said Aug. 3 that her organization might be interested in acquiring the lighthouse.

"We're looking into it and we find it very intriguing," she said.

Field of Dreams

Eagle Scout project a boon to baseball

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At 18 years old, Paul Pozniak has already accomplished one of his major goals.

The Cohasset native and soon-to-be college freshman is also an Eagle Scout.

Paul's Eagle Scout project involved transforming the two dugouts on the baseball field at Milliken Field into freshly painted, refurbished and clean facilities; repainting and refurbishing the shed at the site; and installing railings along the steps from Bancroft Way. The rope railings are of a nautical nature and the blue dugouts reflect Cohasset High colors and the "Go Blue" school spirit. His project also involved cleaning the stairs and planting myrtle, a ground cover.

His project got the go-ahead from the Old Colony Boy Scout Council last October. Paul, along with a small army of volunteers under his leadership, started the project in March and finished on April 20 – just 10 days shy of Paul's 18th-birthday. An Eagle Scout candidate must complete his project before he turns 18.

Eagle Scout Paul Pozniak stands by one of the dugouts at Milliken Field.

The Proclamation stated in part: "the efforts of Paul Francis Pozniak not only reflect wonderfully on the Town of Cohasset and its facilities, but also reflect the importance of community service and community spirit to all those who live in this community."

Before Paul undertook his project he received the endorsement of Recreation Director Ted Carroll, Cohasset Middle-High School Athletic Director Ronald Ford, and CHS baseball coach Al Gallotta and authorization from Town Manager Bill Griffin. Paul also talked to abutters and received the endorsement of Lorraine Tarpey whose house is opposite the steps, he said.

Carroll, the recreation director, said the job Paul did cleaning and painting the dugouts and creating a safer staircase will benefit all and is a welcome

No tow zone?

Dormitzer balks at potential signage

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Selectmen are generally in agreement about traffic-related issues around town.

For example, no one questions the fact that the intersection of Clay Spring Road and Pond Street needs attention. Selectmen voted Monday to go ahead with improvements at that intersection that were suggested by abutters and endorsed by Cohasset police.

But when it comes to proposed "get tough" signs on Government Island that threaten parking violators with being towed – at least one selectman says such signage is not in keeping with Cohasset's character.

"I have a very different feeling about this town," Selectman Ralph Dormitzer told fellow board members during the discussion.

The topic was part of an overview of proposals from Cohasset police about traffic hotspots and worn out signage.

Parking availability on Government Island can reach the boiling point, as was the case over the Fourth of July weekend when a father-of-the-bride having his daughter's reception at the Lightkeepers wanted 40 cars towed to make room for wedding guests.

POLICE BEAT

Flimflam, car crashes and a dog that got away

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Flimflam

Police are reviewing videotapes of an incident at Dunkin' Donuts on King Street during which a customer apparently tricked the clerk into giving $60 in change back.

Police met with the manager on Friday (July 31) and the incident is under investigation, police said.

Suspicious activity

A concerned caller reported that at about 4 p.m. on Friday (July 31) her daughter and a couple of friends were riding their bikes on Sankey Road and were followed by a man in a black, older-model Honda. The man would pull into side streets and then when the girls rode by would follow them again. Chief James Hussey said police want to know right away when residents see this type of suspicious activity. "If you see a vehicle or person acting suspicious, give us a call," he said. Police put out a description of the car and operator in this incident but nothing has turned up, he said.

Roadside

A man, whom a concerned caller reported was lying on the side of North Main Street near Rocky Lane last Monday (July 27) at about 5:14 a.m., was transported by ambulance to South Shore Hospital for evaluation, police said.

Police said the man provided different names but did not appear to be intoxicated. However, he did appear to be disoriented and warranted evaluation. Police think he may have gotten off the train.

House sitter

A concerned house sitter called police last Monday (July 27) at about 2 p.m. to report that a highly intoxicated man came to the door to speak to the resident, then fell while walking back to his car and drove off. Police put out a description of the vehicle to area towns but there were no further sightings.

Dog got away

A terrier caused some excitement in Shaw's Plaza last Wednesday afternoon (July 29) when its owner reported the dog had been stolen. However, the dog apparently jumped out of the car. Someone at Strecker Eye Care found the dog and took it to All Four Paws off Route 3A. The dog and owner were later reunited.

Police said the windows to the owner's vehicle were open wide enough for the dog to jump out.

Pocketbook found

Police talked to the out-of-state owner of a pocketbook found behind Dependable Cleaners on Sunday (Aug. 2). Police were correct when they surmised the woman was a guest at the Red Lion Inn. As it turned out she had been looking through the inn for her pocketbook Police said $12 in cash and a camera were missing. The incident is being investigated.

MV crashes

• On Monday (July 27) at 6:06 p.m., on King Street, a 2004 Mazda, operated by a Seekonk man, that was waiting to pull out onto the highway, was hit by a 2001 Dodge that had swerved to avoid being hit by a 2003 Pontiac that was making a left in front of the Dodge and failed to yield. The Mazda was waiting to pull out of a parking lot and make a right onto King Street (3A) when the accident happened. Police said the Dodge was headed north and the Pontiac, which was operated by a Scituate man, was headed south when it started to turn into the same parking lot that the Mazda was pulling out of. The Dodge swerved to avoid hitting the Pontiac and hit the Mazda, police said. No one was transported; the Dodge had to be towed; and the Scituate man (in the Pontiac) was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

• On Tuesday (July 28) at 12:17 p.m., several 911 callers reported an accident at the intersection of CJC Hwy (3A) and Beechwood Street. Police said a 2005 Subaru, operated by a Cohasset man, was in the southbound lane waiting to turn left onto Beechwood Street (by the Gulf station). A white SUV was waiting in the northbound lane to make a left onto Beechwood (by Shaw's). The driver of the Subaru started to turn left but could not see a 2005 Honda, operated by a Norwell man, that was headed north in the right-hand lane. The Subaru collided with the Honda. The Cohasset man driving the Subaru, whose view was blocked, was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic. Both cars were towed; no one was transported.

• On Thursday (July 30) at 9:31 a.m. a caller reported she had been in a very minor accident in the parking lot on Brook Street by the Village Deli. The Hanson woman was driving a 2003 Chevrolet and was backing up when her car was struck BY a 2004 Lexus, operated by a Cohasset man, that was pulling into the parking lot. There were no injuries; damage was minor, police said. Neither driver was cited, police said.

• On Friday (July 31) at 4:28 p.m., a 911 caller reported her 2008 Toyota had been struck by another car that took off in the parking lot at Bank of America at Shaw's Plaza. A witness was able to provide the plate number of the other car that had backed into the Toyota and police are trying to determine who was driving the car that fled the scene.

• On Saturday (Aug. 1) at 1:20 p.m., a 2006 Kia, operated by a Scituate woman on King Street (3A), struck the back of a 2009 Honda, operated by a Quincy woman, that had made a sudden stop to turn left. Both cars were headed north. There were no apparent injuries and neither car was towed. The operator of the Kia was cited for following too closely.

• On Sunday (Aug. 2) at 8:39 a.m., the owner of a 2004 Ford pickup truck reported that his truck had been vandalized. As it turned out, the truck was parked on Bancroft Road when it was hit by a 1971 Chevrolet that was making a right off of Bancroft. The two operators know each other; the driver of the Chevrolet came forward; the men exchanged papers and the matter is being handled by their insurance companies, police said. There was some damage to the front passenger side of the pickup.

Verbal threats

A man is being summonsed to court for making threats over the phone to a Cohasset resident. The two people know one-another and the dispute involves a relationship and money, police said. The reporting party played a message back for police who, based on that message, are summonsing the man to court for threats to commit a crime.

Altercation

Two dog walkers in Wompatuck State Park got into a verbal and then a physical altercation after the unleashed dog came after the leashed dog and was allegedly kicked by the walker with the leashed dog, police said. The incident was reported at 6:38 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 2). Police have documented the incident and explained that the dog walkers could seek criminal complaints in Quincy District Court if they cannot put the matter behind them.

Police did not witness the altercation.

Gas can

Police are investigating the apparent theft of a red plastic gas can with more than 8 gallons of gas inside from a residence on Jerusalem Road. The incident was reported on Monday (July 27) and occurred sometime over the prior weekend, the resident reported. The incident is under investigation.

Beware of ticks

Prime season for Lyme disease

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Now that the clouds and the rain of early July seemed to have moved on, more and more residents will be spending time outside.

For those enjoying their backyards, the wooded trails of Whitney Thayer Woods or Wheelwright Park, ticks are a year round public health concern.

Public Health nurse Mary Goodwin has been monitoring a small increase in reported cases of Lyme disease over the last year.

"It could be that there are more reported cases because more people are aware of the symptoms and are visiting the doctor," Goodwin said. The state keeps track of the number of reported cases of Lyme disease in Cohasset and Goodwin receives copies of the confirmed Lyme disease cases.

Lyme disease is caused by bacteria spread by tiny, infected deer ticks.

"Year round we are getting reports of Lyme disease," Goodwin said. The movement of deer throughout Cohasset has likely contributed to the increase in ticks and Lyme disease.

"There are deer all over town, so you certainly can get a deer tick in your own yard," Goodwin said. Master hitchhikers, ticks will grab onto anything that brushes past them.

While ticks can be searching for a host anytime the weather is above freezing, they are especially active in the warmer weather months, coinciding with the time of the year when more people are outside.

According the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, typically within days or weeks of being infected people begin to show symptoms. The most common early symptom is a rash where the tick was attached. It often, but not always, starts as a small red area that spreads outward, clearing up in the center so it looks like a donut. Flu-like symptoms, such as fever, headache, stiff neck, sore and aching muscles and joints, fatigue and swollen glands may also occur.

Even though early stage symptoms may go away by themselves, without medical treatment, some people will get the rash again in other places on their bodies, and many will experience more serious problems. Treatment during the early stage prevents later, more serious problems. Later stage symptoms, which can occur in weeks or years, most commonly affect the joints, nervous symptom and heart.

"The most important thing is people need to check themselves, their kids and their pets," Goodwin said.

When outside the recommendation is to wear long sleeves and long pants tucked into socks, which isn't always practical in the summer, Goodwin said. That makes the post-outside tick check all the more essential.

Light clothing is suggested to make it easy to spot the black ticks and bug spray with DEET can ward off the insects.

Preventing exposure:

• Use insect repellent approved for ticks (products containing 20-30 percent DEET are most effective) on all exposed skin whenever you spend time outdoors.

• Wear white or light-colored clothing when hiking or gardening, so the ticks can be easily spotted.

• Wear long pants and tuck them into socks.

• Following outdoor activity, immediately put your clothes into a hot dryer for 10 minutes, inspect your body carefully and shower with a scrub brush.

Is towing un-Cohasset?

Selectmen were in agreement this week that safety improvements are needed at the intersection of Clay Spring Road and Pond Street.

Parking tickets issued in 2009

- January: 48 parking tickets issued totaling $1,650 in fines.
- February: 30 parking tickets issued totaling $975 in fines.
- March: 25 parking tickets issued totaling $800 in fines.
- April: 29 parking tickets issued totaling $775 in fines.
- May: 56 parking tickets issued totaling $1,600 in fines.
- June: 111 parking tickets in June issued totaling $3,025 in fines.

Figures for July were not immediately available. The tickets were issued at various locations around town.

police are suggesting adding nine signs on Government Island (three in the lower lot and six in the upper lot by the Lightkeepers) that state "Parking by Permit Only – Tow Zone."

The number of signs and the threat of being towed got Dormitzer's attention.

Dormitzer asked if the signage indeed meant the town intended to tow away parking violators.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said that in the case of a car blocking handicap access, for example, that the town should at least have the ability to tow.

Griffin explained that to avoid future parking conflicts, the Selectmen's Office was working with the Lightkeepers Corporation, which rents out Bancroft Hall in the Lightkeepers Residence, with a placard system for cars belonging to out-of-towners, who are attending events held there such as weddings.

Selectman Karen Quigley said she had met with Harbormaster Lorrie Gibbons, Police Lt. William Quigley and Chief James Hussey about parking on Government Island and the issue is critical. She explained kayakers, Bassing Beach goers, and bridge jumpers often consume the available spaces.

> "I have a very different feeling about this town."
> — Selectman Ralph Dormitzer

Quigley said signage alone that indicates: "parking by permit only" doesn't "cut it." She stressed that the $25 fine is not a deterrent and that is critical that parking be available for Cohasset residents who are paying taxes. She said she advocated the threat of towing.

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said he said he had no problem with a tow zone.

But Dormitzer said he wants more information about the number of violators before making a decision.

Jennifer Oram, administrative assistant to the Town Manager, said there were at least 10 tickets issued on Government Island alone over the past weekend.

Discussion also included raising the parking fine from $25 to $50 (fines are $50 at Sandy Beach).

Griffin said he would like to check with Chief Hussey to make sure that such a parking fine would pass legal muster.

The discussion also included village signage where conflicting parking signs need to be addressed.

Dormitzer is also opposed making four 15-minute-only spaces available in front of Tedeschi's in the village, as police have suggested. He said that number was excessive.

Carlson said a minimum of at least two was needed.

Selectmen took under advisement all of the recommendations of the police regarding signage unless it was simply to replace signs such as the ones at Sandy Beach.

Griffin will review the comments of the Board with Chief Hussey and return with any information selectmen sought and any recommendations of the chief.

Griffin said he would also check with DPW Supt. Carl Sestito about the cost of the new signs.

Clay Spring

Selectmen heartily endorsed plans proposed by abutters to enhance traffic and pedestrian safety in the Clay Spring Road area.

Changes include:

- Repainting the stop line and stenciling the world "STOP" across the southbound lane of Clay Spring Road at the intersection of Pond Street;
- Moving the stop sign on Clay Spring closer to the actual intersection;
- Repainting the crosswalk on Pond Street that is just east of Clay Spring and adding crosswalk signs to the area;
- And increased traffic enforcement.

A child was almost hit by a car in that area about 18 months ago during school release time.

"The above measures definitely make good sense and should increase driver awareness," Lt. Quigley wrote in a memo to Chief Hussey, who concurred with recommendations.

Lauren and Joe Curley, Betsy and Tim Toomey, and Kerrin and Mark Ryan, all of Pond Street, stated in a May 18 letter to Town Manager Griffin that excessive speed, decreased visibility of pedestrians and poor signage contributed to a lack of safety at the intersection that is just down the street from Cohasset High School.

Selectman Quigley said she lived on Clay Spring Road and has seen first-hand the speeding and traffic. Quigley also pointed out the stonewall makes it difficult to see and suggested the new stop line on Clay Spring be far enough out to allow for good visibility.

When the possibility of obtaining the lighthouse was brought up at the Aug. 4 Scituate selectmen's meeting, board member John Danehey warned that over time, the light would prove expensive to whichever organization obtained it.

"It's going to be a huge cost to maintain and keep up," he said.

The lighthouse giveaway is part of the National Historic Lighthouse Act of 2000, which began the process of taking historic lighthouses off of the national ledger.

"The article was passed because the Coast Guard, they didn't have the resources and the wherewithal to manage them all," said Paula M. Santangelo, spokeswoman for the General Services Administration, which she described as the "landlord for the federal government."

Interested parties are asked to send the National Parks Service a letter of interest, which should include the name of the organization, the name of the property, a point of contact's e-mail, phone and address. Any not-for-profit agency must also include a copy of its state-certified articles of incorporation.

Agencies will be mailed applications by the U.S. Department of the Interior, and those applications will be inspected by the National Parks Service to see which are capable of maintaining the historic structure, Santangelo said.

"That could take a few months," she said. "There's really no set timeline for that."

According to the notice of availability, the light could be used for educational, park, recreational, cultural or historic preservation purposes. Santangelo said that the Coast Guard would continue to maintain the foghorn and actual light, which serves as a navigational aid by flashing in a 1-4-3 pattern that can be visible from within 15 miles.

Minot's 1-4-3 sequence has been the subject of local lore. Some stories tell of a lovelorn light keeper sending a message back to his wife on shore. According to those stories, 1-4-3 referred to the number of letters in the words "I love you." The supposedly symbolic sequence of numbers lead to the lighthouse being called, "the lovers light."

However, the 1-4-3 sequence, Galluzzo said, is actually just a "random assignment of numbers that it happened to get."

Although the law allows for the lighthouse to be sold if no not-for-profit or government agency is interested, Santangelo said that rarely happens.

"We have had a few sales in the New England area in the past years, but generally speaking, there is always someone interested from the non-profit arena," she said.

According to the National Historic Lighthouse Act of 2000's Web page, three of the 13 lighthouses given up by the federal government in 2008 are scheduled for auction.

According to information provided by the GSA, Minot's Ledge Light was built in 1850, on an outcropping of rocks known as "Cohasset Rocks." The original structure collapsed a year later in a gale.

The current structure, a 114-foot high granite tower, was built in 1860. The light is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and is an American Society of Civil Engineers landmark.

Alice Coyle contributed to this story.

Garden can make a difference

Hope In Bloom helps breast cancer patients

By Becca Shuman
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

To say Cohasset resident Jean O'Halloran's life in the past few years has been a whirlwind is an understatement. She was living in California with her fiancé when she was accepted at Harvard's graduate school of education. They packed up and returned to Massachusetts, were married and O'Halloran finished school. She gave birth to a son and a daughter. She was working as a book editor. Her family had just moved into their new home in Cohasset. Life was good. O'Halloran's mother, Joanne Hopkinson of Weymouth, who was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2007, was responding well to treatment. O'Halloran's life was turned upside down in the summer of 2008 when she felt a lump and learned she had the same type of breast cancer as her mother. She was 32 years old. Her son was three and her daughter was nine months old.

O'Halloran picked up a Hope in Bloom postcard at Cohasset Village Day last fall. She contacted the Dedham based nonprofit, which plants indoor, patio and outdoor gardens free of charge at the homes of Massachusetts' breast cancer patients. O'Halloran asked if the organization could spruce up her mother's garden. O'Halloran saw this as a way to thank her mom, who cared for Sean and Abby every day for six weeks while O'Halloran received her radiation treatments. Knowing her children were in good hands while she was at the hospital gave O'Halloran peace of mind. When Hope In Bloom learned O'Halloran was also a breast cancer patient, she too was asked if she would like a garden.

Since Massachusetts has such a short growing season and O'Halloran requested a vegetable garden, hers was planted before her mom's. Normally, Hope in Bloom gardens are funded solely by private contributions but Chris Kennedy, who owns Kennedy's Country Gardens of Scituate and recently moved to Cohasset with his family, offered to help make O'Halloran's and Hopkinson's gardens possible. He donated the designs as well as the vegetables and plants. A few weeks ago, Kennedy arrived at O'Halloran's house with a truck filled with all the supplies for her garden. O'Halloran's son, Sean, armed with his plastic shovel was all set to plant and waited for the action to begin. Once Roy, their Golden Retriever, saw what was going on, he happily joined in the digging. The chickens that live next door stopped by to see what was happening. Kennedy oversaw the installation and worked alongside Hope in Bloom volunteers Greer Underwood of Hingham and Michele Tasiopoulos of Norwell. Hopkinson and her husband, Fred, were there too to lend a hand and keep everyone hydrated with cold drinks.

When Kennedy was asked why he chose to become involved, he said: "I know what a difference a garden can make for someone. I am always willing to help a neighbor." By the end of the summer, he will have donated his time and materials for five South Shore gardens this season.

O'Halloran chose the same Massachusetts' General Hospital caregivers as her mother. She wasn't scared because she had watched her mother sail through treatment. At one point, they received chemotherapy at the same time and sat together with their husbands during the procedure. Both women want to commend everyone on their medical team for their compassion and hands on care.

Word of O'Halloran's diagnosis traveled fast. The Cohasset community embraced her and helped her family through the ordeal. O'Halloran said, "My cancer brought out the best in everyone." Strangers have now become friends. When her son started pre-school in the fall of 2008, fellow mothers at the Carriage House Nursery School got wind of O'Halloran's situation and sprang into action. They set up a committee of parents and neighbors to provide and deliver meals to the O'Halloran household. Doug Bennet, owner of the Body Studio, met her at 6 a.m. every Friday before her chemo for personal training sessions that kept her strong during treatment. Jessica Fitzpatrick of Jo's Angels surprised her with a gift certificate for yoga classes at Balance Studio in the Village. Children at their church, First Parish of Cohasset, made her a gift basket filled with get-well cards. A CCD class of teenagers showed up at their house on a Saturday morning to rake leaves.

Her husband Brian's coworkers pitched in with a year's worth of housecleaning services. They also formed a team to run the Race for the Cure last September. In fact, O'Halloran plans on running it this fall and Hopkinson is thinking about walking the route.

Hopkinson, a nurse's assistant, has lived and gardened in Weymouth for almost four decades. She worked out a novel way to add flowers to her yard when she was undergoing treatment. Fred dug the holes and she would plant. It kept her involved, allowed her to sneak in some exercise and gave her a sense of accomplishment. This month Fred can sit back and watch when Hopkinson's garden is enhanced compliments of Kennedy's Country Gardens of Scituate.

Hope in Bloom founder Roberta Hershon said the gardens reduce stress and anxiety, lower blood pressure, and increase serotonin levels in the body. Because of these factors, patients are more receptive to medical intervention. O'Halloran remarked, "It's fun to wonder where the original vegetable garden was when the house was built in the early 1800s. All I know is almost 200 years later, history repeats itself as we grow pesticide free food. I'm looking forward to learning more about organic gardening." A few days after the garden was planted, O'Halloran shared the fact Abby now wakes up in the morning and excitedly shouts from her crib, "Go see garden!" Abby's favorite fruit is watermelon, and she likes to check the yard to see if theirs is growing. Sean has his eye on the tomatoes while Brian is eagerly anticipating the hot chili peppers. "As O'Halloran and Hopkinson stood in O'Halloran's kitchen admiring the garden, Hopkinson said, "Sharing breast cancer is one mother daughter experience I don't recommend. She went on to say "I am pleased we are both thriving and can compare notes as we watch our gardens do the same."

Sticker shock?

Local businesses gauge impact of sales tax hike

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Did your receipts this week seem to be a little bit higher than usual? Probably — thanks to a 1.25 percent Massachusetts sales tax increase effective last Saturday, August 1.

Not only did the state sales tax increase from 5 percent to 6-1/4 percent, but also the state added the charge to previously exempt alcohol as well.

In the weeks leading up to the sales tax increase there were some advertisements encouraging customers to come in before the tax hike, particularly for larger ticket items, like furniture and cars.

For some shoppers, it was enough motivation to get them out to the marketplace. At Cohasset Imports, owner Peter Capozzoli said the last four or five days of the month were busy.

"It was people already thinking of buying a car, but may have waited another month or so had it not been for the tax increase," said Capozzoli.

He said a widespread campaign or concerted effort by local business to alert the public of the sales tax increase was not done on a large scale, Capozzoli said, and many people (even those purchasing cars this month) were unaware of the impending increase effective August 1.

Capozzoli doesn't expect the tax increase to greatly affect his business, which he said has been holding steady in spite of the down economy. For that he credits a loyal customer base and the fact the business has been very well established in the community and at the same location since 1984.

"It's more of the same. The question is when are Massachusetts citizens going to say enough is enough?"
— Rick Curtis, Curtis Liquors

"I don't think it's enough (of an increase) to really deter buyers," said Capozzoli said. However, he said he wished the state had thought more carefully about the businesses.

"If it were my state, I would have a long time ago dropped the state sales tax to 2 percent and generate business that way," Capozzoli said. "As far as I'm concerned they did it all wrong."

In addition to the items already subject to the sales tax facing an increase, liquor store and bar owners will be subject to the tax for the first time as the legislation repealed the existing exemption for alcohol.

Last Friday (July 31), the last day before the 6.25 percent was tacked onto alcohol purchases, Curtis Liquors owner Rick Curtis said the store was "like the week before Christmas" and sales were up 20 percent for July.

But, he was quick to temper the good news, "next week might be very slow as a result," Curtis said.

At A Taste for Wine & Spirits at the Stop & Shop Plaza there were some customers coming in to stock up.

"There's been a slight up tick in last minute purchases," owner Bruce Sinclaire said last Friday on the eve of the increase. He said several customers with birthday parties, weddings or other upcoming celebrations later in August came into stock up their bar ahead of time and take advantage of the "savings."

Both Curtis and Sinclaire noted that while liquor has previously been exempt from the state sales tax, it has always had federal and state taxes built into its sale price. Curtis said 40 percent of the cost of alcohol is taxes.

"It's more of the same. The question is when are Massachusetts citizens going to say enough is enough," Curtis said, who owns a package store in Weymouth in addition to the one on Route 3A.

Curtis said there is some movement afoot to place a question on the November ballot to request a repeal of the sales tax on liquor.

Meanwhile, shoppers will face the increase for at least the next few months.

"I think they'll be some sticker shock (this) week…as you might imagine any customer that buys an item regularly and always pays the same price, that's when they'll be a little head snapping," Sinclaire said. "I hope people keep it in perspective.

When an additional excise tax was tacked on to cigarettes in July, Sinclaire took a "fairly dramatic" decline in cigarettes sales.

"We're holding out high hopes we don't have the same decrease in the sale of alcohol," Sinclaire said.

Mixed messages

Parking is an issue that all motorists face whether seeking to spend a day at the beach, going out to a restaurant or driving to the airport or City of Boston.

Among the frustrations in life, lack of available parking has to number among the top.

Insufficient parking has been known to kill businesses – especially those that are not "destination" spots but "drive-bys." In other words, you need a bottle of milk but there is no available parking so you may keep going. If there had been a space, you would have bought the milk and maybe picked up some other items, such as a newspaper, lottery tickets, or snacks.

This week selectmen had an initial discussion about parking problems in town, mainly on Government Island and in the Village. Parking issues also exist near the Border Street and Cunningham bridges, at Sandy Beach, and other locations.

Years ago, the fine at Sandy Beach for parking violators was raised to $50 after selectmen determined that a car full of people splitting the cost of a $25 fine was cheap money for a day at the beach.

Some of the issues now at hand are whether to raise the parking fine at Government Island; whether to put the threat of being towed on signs; and how many short-term parking spaces should be designated downtown.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer wants more facts before getting on board with tougher signage on Government Island and more short-term spaces downtown.

We have to admit, we enjoyed listening to the conversation at Monday's meeting. We often boast about Cohasset and what makes it unique. Where else in the world would unfriendly signage even come up?

In a related matter, during a quick drive around looking at various signs – we were surprised at how many are faded and almost unreadable. Old, worn-out signs reflect badly on Cohasset – almost like litter – they indicate a lack of civic pride and inattention to the importance of looking shipshape. We are glad that replacing those signs is now on the horizon. Some signs, especially in the village, are confusing and send mixed messages. They also need to be addressed.

New rugs for the library

TO THE EDITOR:

The library has a new look! Attractive and highly practical floor covering has been installed at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The original carpets, installed when the old Osgood School was renovated, had become stained, rippled and potentially dangerous.

The new carpeting looks like a large area rug. It is a pleasing blend of colors that complement the cherry wood throughout the library, and the large Oriental rug in the Reference Room. In fact, however, the floor covering is made up of nearly "invisible" three-foot squares, without adhesive backing. This modular carpet is made by Milliken & Co. of ES (engineered for sustainability) recycled content. Milliken is well-known for its ecological achievements and all of its products are PVC-free, chlorine-free and 100 percent recyclable. The best thing about the carpet squares is, should any become stained or worn, it can be easily removed and replaced with a clean, fresh square.

Cohasset is grateful to the almost 400 Cohasset families that contributed to the Cohasset Library Building Fund between 2000 and 2003 for these new floor coverings. After the old Osgood School had been completely renovated for Cohasset's new library, about $140,000 remained in the Building Fund, which was merged into the Cohasset Library Trust Inc. in 2007. The very necessary replacement carpeting cost about $35,000.

Almost all of the remainder of the Building Fund will be used to pay for a new Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) system for the library. This system automates routine tasks, freeing the staff to attend to the more complex needs of library users. RFID is cutting-edge technology that libraries are incorporating into their building plans. RFID wasn't well-developed when Cohasset renovated the Osgood School for a library, so it's wonderful that the Building Fund permits Cohasset to have RFID six years later.

Paving, roadwork still the hot topic

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Paving, Paving and More Paving – This week the big topic is paving, as you might guess. If you have driven in the area of the Common or North Main Street up to Jerusalem Road you couldn't miss the roadwork that has been underway in preparation for finally paving the first coat on these roads. We've spoken several times about the reclamation work that was used to prepare the Common area to receive its base coat of asphalt. As a matter of interest, several Common area residents asked if we could keep the road in its pre-paved state because it really slowed the traffic down. We are quite sure they were not serious, especially when you consider the dust and dirt that were kicked up this past week.

The last step in the grading operation is "fine grading." This is the most critical part of the paving preparation work. The photo shows a laser level (on a tripod). This is used to set "grade stakes," one of which can barely be seen just to the right of the laser level. The grade stakes are set every 50 feet on either side of the road being graded. Each stake has a horizontal line marked on it that is used as a reference point. While the final grading is being done, a string is stretched between grade stakes on either side of the road. This string lets the grading crew easily measure the actual profile of the road from side to side for accuracy.

Proper road profiling is critical in making sure that road drainage will be correct and storm water will be directed to catch basins. What ever level the grading operation sets on the road surface will be mirrored in the final road surface. Bad grading will yield bad paving with poor drainage. In fact, between Joy Place on North Main Street and Jerusalem Road, we discovered that storm water would not flow properly unless we add a new catch basin. So, we are presently working on a design to add a new catch basin after the base coat of asphalt is laid, but before the topcoat. This is not an ideal time to add a new drainage structure, but it is substantially better than living with poor drainage.

The base coat paving is underway as we write this column on Wednesday, Aug. 5th. It is planned that all of the paving around the Common and North Main Street from Depot Court to just past Jerusalem Road will be completed in one day. We have a new asphalt paving contractor doing the work. In the past, Aggregate Industries had won the South Shore Consortium bid for asphalt road paving, but this year, T. L. Edwards of Avon, Mass. was the successful bidder. So, they are the contractor doing our paving. In fact, T. L. Edwards will be doing most of the road paving for the Little Harbor Project as we go forward.

The Paver Gobbles Another Truck-Full.

COURTESY PHOTOS

To put the current paving project in perspective, just the paving will take about 2400 tons of asphalt. That's about 70 to 80 trucks of asphalt, depending on the size of the truck.

To put the current paving project in perspective, just the paving described above will take about 2400 tons of asphalt. That's about 70 to 80 trucks of asphalt, depending on the size of the truck. T. L. Edwards appears to be quite professional and doesn't dilly-dally when it comes to laying paving. At times they had six to eight trucks of asphalt waiting for their turn to dump their load into the paving machine.

What's Next? – In the immediate future, we will be working in two distinct areas of the Little Harbor Project. Next week we plan to begin adjusting the in-the-road structures (manholes, water shut-offs, etc.) around the Common and on North Main Street to their final topcoat height. This adjustment is not simple as it sounds. In some cases the underground structure may need to be rebuilt necessitating substantial spot excavations. Keep in mind that in this Common - N. Main St. area there are about 90 of these buried structures to be adjusted. So, this may take a while. When all is said and done, the in-the-road structure tops will be raised about two inches above the base paving. Please note that the raised structures, although they will be marked with paint, could be hazardous to tires, particularly if you go too fast. Slow, alert and careful are the by-words for drivers. The topcoat paving will follow shortly, as soon as we can work it into the schedule.

During the week of August 10th, we will be putting the final paving coat on Nichols Road and all of its side roads. The in-the-road structures on Nichols Road will also be adjusted to their final height before the paving can take place. But, there are only about 16 structures on Nichols, many fewer than on North Main Street, mentioned above.

Please note that access will be very limited during the Nichols topcoat paving operation. When base coat is laid (as was done on Nichols last year) the paving operation is a bit forgiving. In some instances, drivers could pass over relatively freshly paved base coated sections. Not so for the topcoat. Since this is to be the final surface that residents will see and use for years to come, it is a bit fussier. We must make certain that the asphalt has cooled sufficiently before we can allow traffic to resume on it. Otherwise, residents will be living with ruts and imperfections for years to come. So please plan on very limited access when final paving is being done. If there are any special transportation needs, please contact our office at the numbers shown at the end of this article. We will be glad to work with you to meet special needs.

Napoleon Bonaparte - Emperor in Exile

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

He was born on an island (Corsica) in 1769, and he died on an island (St. Helena) in 1821. In between was glory, grandeur, then devastating defeat. For a time, 83 million people, half the population of Europe, were under his rule. At the end, five loyal friends and a few servants followed him into exile on a desolate island in the South Atlantic.

May 15, 1796: Napoleon Bonaparte, age 27, enters Milan at the head of an army and shows the world that after so many centuries, there is a successor to Caesar. Success follows success. In 1799, the monarchy overthrown, he establishes a new regime in France, the Consulate, and proclaims himself First Consul.

Feb. 19, 1800: Napoleon, his family, and aides, arrive at his new home, the Tuileries Palace in Paris. It is a pompous procession with 3,000 troops, generals on horseback, ministers in carriages, and the First Consul himself in a coach drawn by six white horses. Later he writes, "In the army simplicity is proper; but in a great city - the Chief of the Government must attract attention in every possible way."

In 1804 Napoleon Bonaparte was crowned Emperor of France. More precisely, he took the crown and set it on his own head. In the next few years, he placed his three brothers on the thrones of Holland, Spain and the kingdom of Naples.

Then came 1812 and the disastrous retreat from Moscow. Exiled to the island of Elba, he escaped and returned in triumph to Paris. Then came 1815 and the humiliating defeat at Waterloo.

The deposed Emperor petitioned the English government for permission to settle in a country village, or even, perhaps, immigrate to the United States. The English, "that nation of shopkeepers" as he once scorned them, refused his request.

Oct. 14, 1815: Not in a coach but on the English ship Northumberland, Napoleon arrives at his last home, a maritime fortress on the black cliffs of St. Helena. Looking at the coast through a telescope as they approach, he comments, "It's not a very appealing abode; I would have done better to stay in Egypt. By now I would be emperor of the entire Orient."

In his new home, respectfully addressed as General, Napoleon won victory daily, playing chess at a wooden table. He wrote that he was bored because no one dared defeat him.

In his new home, respectfully addressed as General, Napoleon won victory daily, playing chess at a wooden table. He wrote that he was bored because no one dared defeat him. Once he had ranged a continent, from Spain to Russia. On St. Helena, he could roam a radius of 5 miles from his farmhouse-prison. One luxury remained the same: every evening he dined on Sevres porcelain with cutlery of gold. Instead of royal guests at his table, however, families of rats scurried around the floor.

One loyal aide later wrote, "He spent most of his days alone in his room - It was easy to see that he no longer had any preoccupation with the future, did not reflect on the past, nor care for the present."

It took less than 20 years after his death (probably from stomach cancer) for the French once again to acknowledge him. Among the people, slowly at first, the demand rose to a roar "Bring him home!" In 1840 his remains arrived for burial at the church of the Hotel des Invalides. Prince Francois addressed his father King Louis XVIII, "Sire, I present to you the body of the Emperor of France." The king answered, "I receive it in the name of France."

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

Charles, Thomae scholarship recipients

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

JIM CONTIS

The Sandy Beach Association initiated a scholarship two years ago to be given to a senior student or students who have demonstrated an interest in Cohasset's environment, and excelled in academics. Marcus Charles and Jean Thomae were chosen for these achievements and their leadership abilities for 2009.

Trustee Kari O'Donnell made the presentation at Class Night and said: "On behalf of the trustees of the Sandy Beach Association I would like to congratulate Marcus Charles and Jean Thomae as the recipients of the 2009 Sandy Beach Coastal Environmental Sciences Scholarship. We are blessed in this beautiful town to have miles of sandy beaches and coastal waterways. One of the missions of the Sandy Beach Association is to preserve the beach for the enjoyment of Cohasset citizens. Measuring and testing coastal waters is vital to help keep our beach clean and safe for our families. The two students receiving Sandy Beach grants contributed to our understanding the problems facing our seashore community. Both spent many hours taking water samples and testing for pollution problems.

Marcus explained that, "this year, I was the only student to volunteer to monitor the water quality of Cohasset's beaches through Enterococci testing. Each week, for 10 weeks, Health Inspector Tara Tradd and I would collect samples from Cohasset's six beaches: the area off the docks of the Sailing Club and the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Little Harbor, Sandy Beach, and Black Rock Beach. I not only found this service project to be incredibly interesting, but I was thrilled to partake in a venture that had such an immediate impact on the community."

Jean Thomae also attended CSCR and led a team studying water samples on the Cohasset shore. In Jean's words: "...Also my experiences at CSCR entailed student teaching in the Parker Ave Cut group and working as an active member of the CSCR Staff, becoming the Facility Manager. Last but certainly not least, my CSCR career has allowed me to partner with August Oddleifson and as juniors in high school, we applied and received a $3,000 grant to execute hypothesis-based, marine studies in our local harbor. This research was specifically Biofilm and Enterococcus analysis. We began the process with intensive proposal writing followed by an oral presentation to the foundation." Jean and partner August Oddleifson were awarded a Certificate of Excellence from the Commonwealth on April 24, 2009, signed by Ian A Bowles, Secretary of Energy and Environmental Affairs: "In recognition for your dedication, commitment and contribution to energy and environmental education for Research on the Role of Biofilm and Enterococcus Bacteria in Cohasset Harbor."

These two recent CHS graduates are terrific examples of students who take an active interest in preserving our precious coastal waterways. Cohasset's coastal location provides students in our community a unique outdoor classroom. Jean and Marcus took advantage of these opportunities and not only did they learn environmental sciences but we all benefit from their research.

On behalf of the Sandy Beach Association, the people of Cohasset and all users of our waters – we thank you Jean and Marcus for your terrific research and help! We look forward to rewarding next years future environmental scientists with another Sandy Beach Association scholarship!

Cohasset Day is almost here

Mark the calendar for Sept. 12

"Everything that worked last year is coming back."
— Peter Brown, chairman of the Economic Development Committee.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Last September, hundreds came out to enjoy Cohasset Village. The success of the first annual Cohasset Day — that included food, community, shopping, games and classic cars — made it a must to hold the event again this year.

Cohasset Day is set for Saturday, Sept. 12 (rain date is Sunday, Sept. 13) and will feature nearly the same events that made last year's celebration so well attended.

The event to celebrate all things Cohasset is an initiative of the Economic Development Committee in partnership with the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. Cohasset Day was designed to celebrate the town and bring together its townspeople, while inviting those from the all over the South Shore to come see what this seaside community has to offer.

By having a day where the spotlight is on Cohasset and its many assets, the goal is to re-connect the residents with their community and introduce out-of-towners to Cohasset. The EDC hopes the ultimate effect of the event is a more prosperous economic community.

The Cohasset Day festivities begin at 12:30p.m. with a concert from the Cohasset Carillon. From then on – until 6p.m. – the Village and Common will be in a constant state of activity.

"Everything that worked last year is coming back," said Peter Brown, chairman of the Economic Development Committee.

The afternoon will have games, a mini-triathlon (run-bike-run) and decorated dog and bike parades geared toward Cohasset's youngest residents. Several non-profit organizations have expressed interest in building a float for the parade.

"Any non-profit that wants to participate is welcome," Brown said. In addition, a mini-Farmer's Market will be on the Common during the afternoon hours.

One of the favorite features of last year's Cohasset Day was the Classic Car Concours and, Brown said, it will of course be back again this year.

"We have some new entrants this year that are just striking," Brown said. Last year, 20 rare automobiles from a 1928 Ford Model A Speedster to a 1992 Ferrari 348 TS made their way through the village and were on display at the Hajj gas and service station.

Music will be a key part of the lively atmosphere the organizers want to create. The EDC has tapped local musicians, The Jackson Wetherbee Band, to play the event.

The crowning event of the evening is the "Fine Food Galore," where samples from local eateries are distributed from tables lined up on South Main Street.

Most of the day's activities are free, but tickets are required for the Fine Food Galore portion of Cohasset Development Day. But, ticket holders can get their fill from more than 20 restaurants and food purveyors.

"It's a mix, there are representatives from downtown and 3A," Brown said. They have recruited a few restaurants from Hingham to participate.

The feast will happen between 4 to 7p.m.

The EDC is in the process of gathering sponsors and contributions to make Cohasset Day possible.

"Because of the economy we're not expecting to get all our $1000 sponsors back, but we're confident we'll have the support we need," Brown said. A request for sponsorships went out in early July and the committee is actively seeking businesses and individuals to contribute to the day's events. "We're building this inch by inch."

WANTED: Volunteer organizers for Cohasset Day

To pull off such a large event with a variety of activities, the Economic Development Committee needs all the help they can get. They are currently in need of someone to organize the decorated bike parade and/or the pet parade. The EDC is also looking for someone to help with the public relations and marketing of the event.

Reality TV

Town Hall cable studio closer to fruition

"This is an opportunity to work together cooperatively."
— Lisa Pratt, Cohasset Dramatic Club

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Local cable-TV production enthusiasts are going to love the plan for a control room right in Cohasset Town Hall.

Plans are afoot to build a control room in a corner of the auditorium to the right as one enters the front door.

Selectmen took a walking tour during their Monday meeting accompanied by Pat Martin and James Morrison of the Cable Advisory Committee and architect Clark Brewer. Town Clerk Marion Douglas and Lisa Pratt, president of the Cohasset Dramatic Club were also on hand.

Douglas was invited to help determine if the control room would interfere with town elections that are held in the auditorium. The control room will be about 130 square feet, about the size of a small office. It will also have glass windows that look out into the auditorium so local producers can keep an eye on any sets and TV productions going on in the hall.

Pratt was enthusiastic, as was Martin, about the potential of sharing equipment. The dramatic club, whose home base is the auditorium, puts on several productions a year.

"This is an opportunity to work together cooperatively," Pratt said.

Martin is also a producer and co-host of Our Town, a local program focused on local issues, people and politics.

Douglas, the Town Clerk, said while some poll observers use that corner, other accommodations for them could be made.

Selectmen voted to approve the location of the control room. Town Manager Bill Griffin will now seek bids for construction. Previously published reports estimate the cost to enclose the space and install a control booth at $18,000.

Viewers are picking up the tab through a surcharge on their Comcast bills that is expected to raise about $100,000 annually.

The money goes into a Public Access Corporation, governed by a Board of Directors, appointed by selectmen. The money can only be used to provide public access television to residents of Cohasset. The money will be used initially for equipment at Town Hall but down the road, plans include upgrading equipment at the high school to enhance programming and coverage of sports and other events.

Martin explained that Comcast has always charged a franchise fee since it began providing service in Cohasset. The difference is, prior to the new contract, the collected fees went to pay for the Norwell studio, its equipment and the personnel. Now the collected fees will be turned over to the town to use on the "cable TV related needs of the community."

The new contract, which took effect in April, does not say per se that the fee will decrease over the life of the contract, but it is an option the Cable Advisory Committee has within the contract should it choose to do so, Martin said.

Startup costs include a major piece of equipment dubbed "tightrope system," an all inclusive program broadcaster and digital storage solution with remote access scheduling software. The estimated cost is $23,000. The system enables the town to broadcast 24/7 informational bulletins and other programming on both community channels. Local programming is viewed on channels 10 and 22.

Another major purchase in the first few months is to purchase and install new camera equipment for the Selectmen's Office at a cost of $20,000 and another $30,000 to equip the studio.

An annual $3000 insurance policy will cover insurance for the equipment and liability, including content liability.

The Cable Advisory Committee still exists although the Public Access Corporation (now called Cohasset Community TV or CCTV) was formed and approved by the selectmen on July 6. The members of both groups are the same: Martin (chairman), Selectman Paul Carlson, Mike Zotos and James Morrison. Rob Hillman is the group's advising attorney with background in this area of law.

Comcast notified area towns that it planned to close its Norwell studio on June 30. Therefore, in order to continue public access programming, Cohasset needs to create its own facility.

'Food' movie is an eye-opener

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Food Inc. mentions the link between high fructose diets used in junk foods, soft drinks and the obesity crisis in the US...

There's an important new movie out Food Inc. which reveals the present state of our knowledge of what we eat, how it's grown and prepared; who controls its purity and safety, how the Government regulates it and shows graphically the way large companies like Monsanto, a chemical company and Tyson, a fast food distributor, control the production of most of the food produced in America today. It is a movie that may be destined to become another Silent Spring, a book by Rachel Carson that galvanized the public into an awareness of the dangers of pesticides. That book spurred a reversal in national pesticide policy leading to a ban on many pesticides and a grassroots beginning to the environmental movement. Questioning the logic of releasing large amounts of chemicals into the environment without fully understanding their effects on ecology or human health, the book; suggested that DDT and other pesticides may cause cancer and that their agricultural use was a threat.

Similarly, Food Inc. questions the advisability of developing a food supply system now in the hands of a few large conglomerates which control growth, manufacture, processing, distribution, handling and quality control including regulatory oversight of virtually every food product used by individuals in the U.S.

Crop farming in the US has changed from hundreds of farms growing a diversity of crops into few large farms of thousands of acres which, instead of practicing diversity as used in natural farming with crop rotation to restore nutrients in the soil, have largely converted to growing corn using vast amounts of chemical fertilizers. Corn oil provides the high fructose corn syrup for the great diversity of sweeteners consumed by soft drink industry including those advertised to be calorie free. High fructose corn syrup is the primary staple of the fast food/soft drink industry. It makes up about 95 percent of the volume of every soft drink and much of the fast food consumed in America.

Large companies such as Monsanto and Tyson, which control the vast majority of American food production, have the resources and lobbyists necessary to quickly develop new variations of chemical compounds including those used in food products. They also have the resources and lobbyists to slow down the governmental oversight of such chemicals and any research aimed at determining the health and safety of the end products. More egregious, however is their ability to darken the findings of such research by the technique of mounting contrarian publicity campaigns casting doubt on unfavorable research findings.

Food Inc. mentions the link between high fructose diets used in junk foods, soft drinks and the obesity crisis in the US and shows pictures of the principal offending products without giving names, but the packaging is familiar to anyone who's ever walked down the shopping aisle of a supermarket.

Similarly, the connection between obesity and type 2 diabetes is mentioned but research has been insufficient to adequately link the two. Particularly disturbing is the discouraging performance of regulatory involvement in providing funding for medical research which might more accurately assess the root cause of poor eating habits resulting in chronic obesity and ailments such as type 2 diabetes, which is epidemic in our society but which has been the object of relatively negligible research since 2000. The burden of obesity has not always been carried by those with low income. Historically, diets of the rural poor consisted of vegetable products, originally grown domestically but now grown in foreign countries and imported by large conglomerates. They now appear in supermarket shelves as expensive luxuries leaving the poor to consume fast foods high in calories but lacking essential nutrients.

A critical need exists for adequate research to meet the nation's obesity problem and Diabetes epidemic. In 2007, on Radio Station WCPN, 90.3 in Cleveland Ohio, Eric Wellman asked Rose Kubitosi Klug whether she's seeing children being diagnosed with diabetes younger and younger and reported: " doctors say the funding to support diabetes research lags far behind the scale of the problem.," quoting Dr. Gubitosi-Klug, of Case Western Reserve University and Rainbow Babies and Children's Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio.

The obesity epidemic continues fueled by big business with only casual oversight by too many of our nations most influential leaders who ought to be more vigilant, interested and informed. You can help by becoming familiar with and understanding the label of whatever you eat.

Scoutmaster Rich Quebec said fewer than 3 percent of all Scouts reach Eagle.

"Paul demonstrated the traits and characteristics required of all Eagle Scouts blended with his own personality and spirit," Quebec said. "Paul was able to attain this significant achievement while participating in school and community sport programs and while attending to his school work and holding a part-time job. His achievement is well earned and I congratulate him for it."

The cost of the project was $600, which Paul raised by reaching out to local clubs and organizations.

Paul, who graduated from Cohasset High in June and works at Dunkin' Donuts, is enrolled at the University of Massachusetts Lowell where he plans to study mechanical engineering. Paul, who is the son of Paula and Frank Pozniak, lives on North Main Street. He has two younger sisters, Claire and Grace.

Paul plans to stay involved in scouting and encourage other scouts to become Eagles.

"I plan to stay involved with the troop," he said. "I want to show them leadership – the same thing I saw."

Eagle Scout rank is the highest honor a Boy Scout can attain. It is a performance-based achievement that requires qualifying for a minimum of 21 merit badges and undertaking a project that will benefit the community. Cohasset Troop 28 has had 75 Eagle Scouts in its 92-year history, including recent Eagles, Paul Pozniak and Graham Sinclaire. The Eagle Scout rank will officially be bestowed upon Paul and Graham at the Court of Honor on Aug. 19.

Graham's project was signage and recycling at the RTF including advertising the benefits of recycling and a brochure about the use of the RTF. Paul and Graham join Eagle Scout August Oddleifson, also a member of the Class of 2009, who thoroughly mapped the trails at Wheelwright Park, cut some new trails and published trail maps for walkers and hikers.

Flibotte to play lacrosse at National champion Northwestern

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

Flibotte was recruited by the defending Women's National Champions in lacrosse, Northwestern, coached by former Thayer Academy star Kelly Amonte Hillier.

Gabrielle Flibotte wants to major in either business or economics in college.

Flibotte of Cohasset was all business in her athletic career at Groton Academy and she is hoping to cash in on the dividends in her collegiate career.

"I just had fun and worked hard," said Flibotte about her career at Groton Academy.

Flibotte worked hard and was successful in her high school career at Groton. She was an outstanding athlete at the school as she was a captain in three sports, soccer, basketball and lacrosse.

However, of the three sports, lacrosse was her best sport. She was a center/midfielder, who scored over 60 goals this year and it earned her special recognition.

Flibotte was recruited by the defending Women's National Champions in lacrosse, Northwestern, coached by former Thayer Academy star Kelly Amonte Hillier. The Wildcats rolled past North Carolina, 21-7 in the Div. 1 National Championship game in 2009.

Northwestern's roster has a big time South Shore flavor to it with a number of players from the area.

She decided that Northwestern was the place for her to attend college.

The school was love at first sight and the program was one that she found special.

"When Coach Hillier calls you," said Flibotte. "It is great and it also grabs your attention. My club team (Mass Elite) coached by Leslie Frazier has had some girls the last few years recruited by Northwestern. I couldn't believe that they wanted to recruit me. I was deciding between Harvard and Northwestern. I went out to Northwestern and I liked being around the team. They love what

This turned out to be a day-long adventure because firstly, I wasn't sure how long the team was going to be there, so I tried to get there in the morning.

Secondly, my family decided they would like to join me, and considering that the Patriots Experience is geared for kids and

Sapovits is at home on the range

By Mike Hardman
MHARDMAN@CNC.COM

Pardon the metaphor, but for Jay Sapovits, a golf club is sort of like a life preserver.

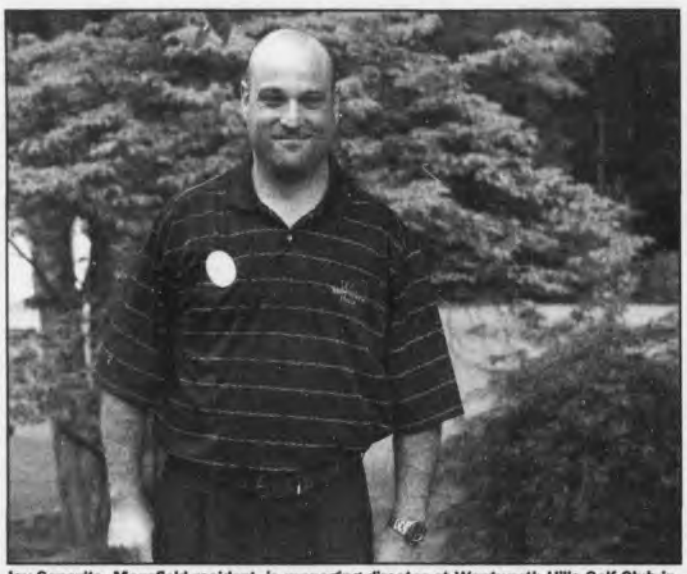
When he needs a change in his life, the Mansfield resident and managing director at Wentworth Hills Golf Club in Plainville finds himself back on the golf course.

First, he was 23 years old, a rising star in the sports talk show business with a nightly gig on WIP, Philadelphia's version of WEEI.

He sat courtside at the Philadelphia games, including covering all the home games of the 13-win 76er season.

"I sat with Pat Croce," he said. "That was before he bought the team and he was getting his business started."

In fact, it was his passion, well lack of it, that got him into the golf business in the first place.



After being born in Philadelphia, Sapovits moved out to the more affluent suburbs where his dad was a high school teacher, baseball coach and public address announcer.

"As a public address announcer, you have to get to the games early so you get all the names right," Sapovits said. "I went with my father all the time to his games when I was a little kid."

Even though there were golf courses in the area of Chadds Ford, Penn., Sapovits never picked up a club.

The same thing was true during the six years he spent in Las Vegas, going to the University of Nevada-Las Vegas and living there.

It wasn't until he was doing radio in Philadelphia that he got into golf.

"I was only working four hours at night and I had to find something to do the rest of the time," Sapovits said.

Like he has done with all the businesses he's been in, Sapovits approached golf with zeal, playing and learning as much as he could.

In the meantime, radio lost its appeal.

"I just fell out of love with it," Sapovits said. "I was at a crossroads in my life."

At that time, golf was something he could see himself doing. He liked being around the course and enjoyed the sport.

"I cold-called the manager of the club," he said.

The only thing they had was working in the bag drop area, one of the lowest jobs on the golf totem pole. This was the time when golf courses were going from metal to soft spikes, so shoes had to be changed.

"I must have changed 1,000 of them," he said. He did that for very little pay, but he learned and listened.

Sapovits developed ideas to improve the golf course and quickly moved into a management position. Developing a friendship with professional golfer Jim Furyk, he developed a skins game concept, the Exelon Invitational, hosted by Furyk and that led to more opportunities in golf.

His talents also caught the attention of Marquis Jet, a private jet company, where he was a vice president. He left the golf course for the friendly skies, but still kept his passion for the sport.

"I love Marquis Jet and my time there," Sapovits said. "I still wear my Marquis Jet hat when I'm playing. I'm still part of the family.

"I had the run of a lifetime with them."

He was still involved in golf as the players of the PGA Tour were part of the client base.

Sapovits wanted to break out on his own and that's how One Key was developed with him as the founder and CEO. One Key was a luxury rental company.

After that was shutdown, golf re-entered with Wentworth Hills as owner David Rosenberg called to offer him a management opportunity and another challenge on Feb. 9.

He's lived in Mansfield since 2002 and is developing roots in the community with his young family. Sapovits is also the host of a local cable show on Mansfield Cable.

"I love the game, I love the business, I love the people and I love to have fun," he said. "This is a dream come true."

He's been there since February, but knew the course long before that. In fact, at one point, he wanted to own the place.

"I was right over there in the rain," Sapovitz said, pulling his golf chart up to a space between two holes on the course. "I had done the research on the course and I prepared myself. I had the financing ready to go."

When he saw Rosenberg in the crowd as the course was being auctioned off, he knew his chances of getting the property were slim.

"I had known David before," Sapovitz said with a smile. "I had the money, but that was old money."

Instead, he congratulated his friend and went off to another project.

After One Key closed, golf re-entered Sapovits' life with Wentworth Hills back in the picture. Rosenberg called to offer him a management opportunity and another challenge, which he started on Feb. 9.

On an overcast Friday morning, Sapovits zips around the golf course, talking with the staff, and golfers. He makes it a point to know the regulars' names and ask them what they think of the new practice hole or the conditions of the greens.

He quickly stops the cart after watching a female golfer hit a terrific tee-shot.

After congratulating her, Sapovits offers her a free round if she can birdie the hole.

"You want to make it a memorable experience for them," he said.

Wentworth Hills is in a stretch of beautiful woods in Plainville and was once the home to Wentworth Institute of Technology.

"That's why I call it the campus," Sapovits said with a laugh.

He describes Wentworth as a community golf course, a place where Sapovits wants golfers to come and have a good time with their friends and families. He has a golf program for stay-at-home moms and dads that provides daycare at the course, a strong junior and instruction programs.

Calef leads qualifiers

Two local golfers will be headed to Southern Hills Country Club in Tulsa, Okla., to compete in the US Amateur Championship Aug. 24-30.

Mike Calef, the reinstated amateur out of Brockton Country Club fashioned a 36-hole score of 6-under 138 on July 28 at Maplegate Country Club in Bellingham to earn medalist honors. Calef carded a 66 in the morning round and followed it with an even par 72 in the afternoon, five shots better than his nearest competitor, Andrew Diramio of Duxbury, who plays out of North Hills Golf Club. Diramio shot a 1-under 71 in the morning and an even par 72 in the afternoon for a 143.

Ponky a state of mind

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Ponkapoag Golf Course has been much maligned over the years.

Some call it a gem in the rough.

Others look back to its glory years when it was a signature course for public golf.

PONKAPOAG GOLF COURSE

But more than anything, Ponky has been a political football.

So many groups, everyone from the town of Canton, to private contractors, lust for control of the facility because it is perfectly located (near route 128 and 95, and easy access from Boston) and could be a huge moneymaker.

No matter, every few years there is a push to change everything, blow it up and restore it to its potential elegance as a world-class municipal facility.

But then when they figure what it will cost for such a renovation, all efforts screech to a half.

Despite all this, Ponky is special.

It is not just turf, sand and wetlands. It is a state of mind.

Most of all, it is where most of us took our first swings.

Like so many, we went there on a late Sunday morning, put our ball in the rack and waited forever. We finished in the dark.

It has been the subject of a novel by noted columnist Rick Reilly, "Missing Links," and this joint has even been proposed as a network television situation comedy.

But truth is stranger than fiction and Ponky, over the years has had more unique characters than all the Fox shows put together.

Oh, they also play golf here. It has a past. The Donald Ross designed 18 was special, among one of his best designs.

"A few years ago, we had two important officials from the United State Golf Association up here to look at the course," said club manager David Gianferante.

"They were amazed. They examined the layout, were impressed with the design of the par-3s, and when they were through, they said if Ponky was ever restored, the golf course would be better than Bethpage, where they held the US Open this year," said Gianferante.

Because of draining problems that most likely will never be resolved, the No. 1 course is terminal, dying a slow death. It is only nine surviving holes.

During its heyday, Ponkapoag did not have any drainage problems. But that's when it was surrounded by wetlands. Although no one will verify it, since the construction of an abutting housing complex and a regional high school, the water table changed and that was essentially the beginning of the end for this great golf course.

Nevertheless, Ponky lives on.

Today head professional Michael Fleming is a dedicated leader in junior golf. He has more than 500 youngsters involved in a learning program there every summer.

Some 60,000 rounds are played there. The price is right – $27 on weekdays and $30 on weekends – so that those not in a position to pay $10,000 private club initiation fees and $5,000 annual fees at private clubs, have a place to enjoy the game.

And you can bet they are just as happy walking off the 18th hole as anyone else at a pricy private club.

Pats trip turns into all-day adventure

my older daughter enjoyed it the last time we went, I thought it would be fun.

It really was a good time, but it was also very, very hot.

We got there about 11, found a pretty good parking spot and headed into the Experience, where we found the team helping out with all the different games, which were football themed, like kicking, throwing, obstacle courses and my kids' favorite, a slide.

Then the heat took over.

By about 1:00, the girls were starting to get tired and hungry and thirsty.

We decided to check out Patriots Place and found Five Guys Burgers and Fries, which was great, because I had been craving some of those fries for weeks.

Still, the second practice session of the day didn't start until 3:45.

A drive around led us to Bass Shops on the other side of the stadium, and the pro shop at Gillette.

The girls decided they wanted to try a nature hike in back of the store.

But by that time, they were getting hotter and my wife was starting to look like a lobster.

To add to it, it was getting close to practice time.

We'll put that on the list for next time.

We headed back to the practice, parked again, this time not so close, visited the Scituate team as they looked to get a VIP view. They did.

Then we walked down to the practice fields to get a look at the Patriots – at least I did.

About halfway down the road to the stands, the kids and my wife decided it was too crowded and hot and that they would go and wait in the car, expecting I'd be back in about 20 minutes.

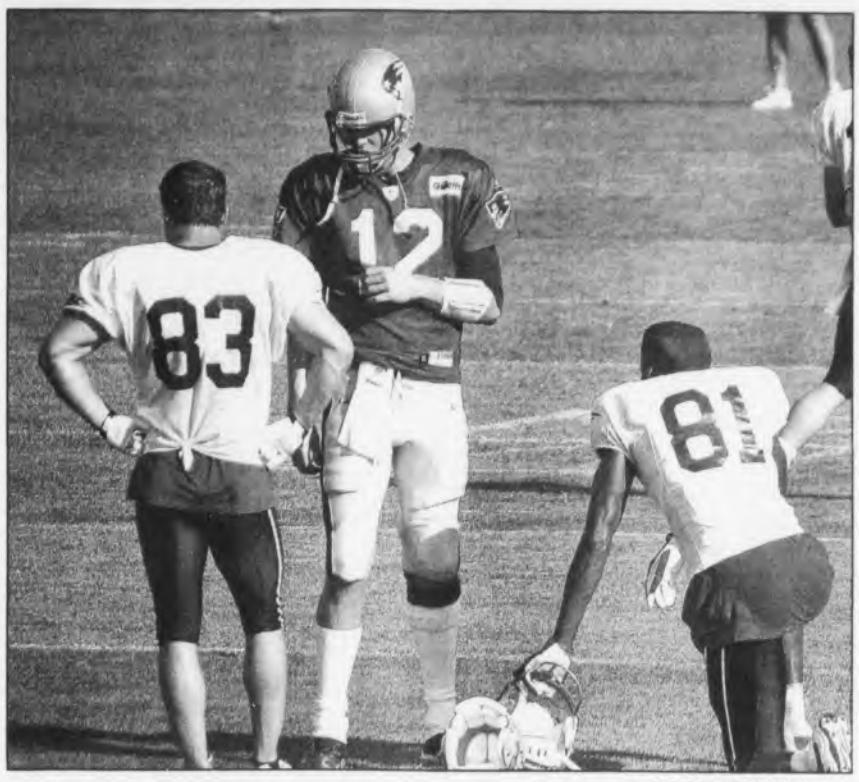
I don't know about you, but I can't remember a practice going 20 minutes.

I said maybe an hour and staked out a spot kind of far out on the lawn.

It didn't take too long before I spotted an empty seat in the corner of the end zone and sat down to relax a bit.

It turned out to be fun to watch.

Randy Moss made a few highlight one-handed, two fisted catches.



Brady looked pretty sharp and the defense was looking pretty good.

Of course all the while my phone was ringing, with the family asking where I was.

I told them I was heading back, but then Brady and his group came to my little corner and I couldn't bring myself to leave, especially during a two-minute drill.

Finally, as the practice was about to end, and I had no kids looking for autographs, I decided to take off as a swarm descended to the sidelines.

I heard Randy Moss stayed out signing autographs for quite a time.

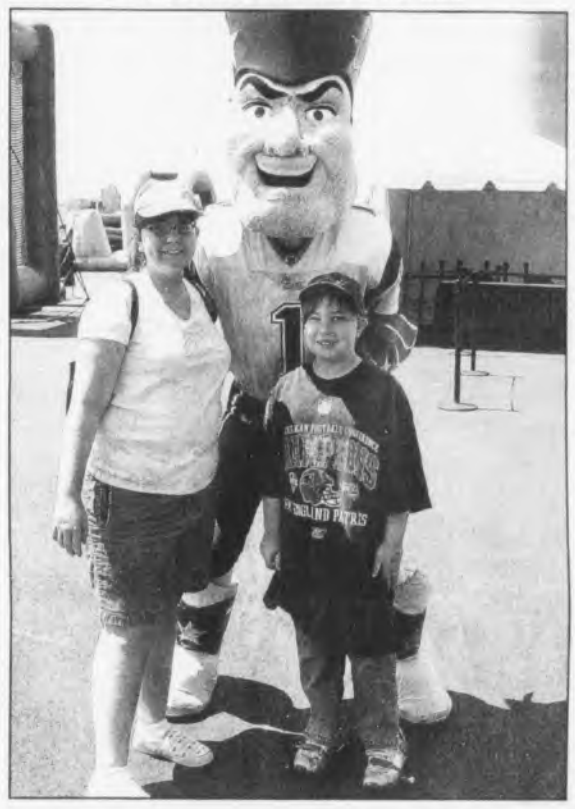
Patriots quarterback Tom Brady chats with receivers Wes Welker and Randy Moss at training camp on Sunday. The open practices, as you can se here, give fans a chance to get close to their team.



The last time I was there, my older daughter got a boatload of autographs, and when it was still in Rhode Island, I met Tedy Bruschi.

Yes, I've been on the field and in locker rooms, but the atmosphere is infectious, and having the team at home has turned a simple practice into a nice way to see the team without spending all the money on tickets, if you can get them.

To be fair, the family were good sports and brought the car right to the exit when I was leaving to keep me from walking, and the kids did have fun, met Pat Patriot and got his autograph, on my Patriots hat that the litte one confiscated, and even got their faces painted – all-in-all a good day.

Patriots camp and the Patriots experience are free and easy to get to right at the stadium. Parking is free as well.

For more information, visit www.patriots.com.

they do and if you go to a Div. I school and they love what they do that is great."

Flibotte loves to play lacrosse and has enjoyed the game since she started in the fourth-grade.

"I played boys lacrosse when I was in the fourth grade," Flibotte said. "I then played in a girls program after that."

It did not hurt either that her brother Mark, who is a sophomore at Bowdoin gave her someone to compete with.

"I always wanted to beat my brother in our backyard lacrosse games," said Flibotte. "It was not easy, he is a lot bigger."

She did however had success competing against her opponents on the field throughout her career. Flibotte had nearly 90 points as a freshman, when she played at Cohasset.

"I figured that I had a chance to meet new people," said Flibotte about transferring to Groton from Cohasset. "Transferring to Groton gave me that opportunity."

This year at Groton, Flibotte had some big games. She had seven goals, including the game-winner with 43 seconds left in overtime in Groton's 17-16 win over Buckingham, Browne and Nichols and six goals and won most of the faceoffs in an 18-10 win over Dana Hall.

Flibotte had three goals in a 7-5 comeback win over Lawrence Academy and scored seven goals and added three assists in a 20-18 loss to St. George's.

"I was just able to kind of able to get the job done," said Flibotte. "We played a lot of very good teams."

As for Northwestern, Flibotte is taking a wait and see approach.

"It hasn't hit me yet," said Flibotte. "I leave to go to the school in September and it probably won't hit me until I am there."

Lemon Lime is hairstylist for the stars

For a band that got its name from a hairdo, it's not much of a surprise that the B-52s' hairstyles can help provide a boost to the local economy when they're here.

That's exactly what happened when the new wave band roamed through Southeastern Massachusetts over the past weekend. Local stylists were tapped to prep vocalists Kate Pierson and Cindy Wilson before shows at the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Cohasset.

Fortunately for Adrian Morris, the owner of Lemon Lime salon in Cohasset, the ladies of the B-52s weren't looking to recreate the signature beehive look that they made famous during the band's heyday.

"When I got their contract, I was sweating," Morris says. "I don't have enough hair spray in the salon to keep that hair up."

Instead, Morris says Pierson and Wilson were looking to get some extension work and some curls (and, it turns out, they apparently wore beehive wigs.

Morris says the benefits to his business go beyond just the extra work for the night. The job provides an important validation for his salon and, in particular, the two stylists he sent to work with the B-52s. It also helps illustrate the important ways that business from local entertainment venues can ripple throughout the neighboring area's economy.

Stylists at Lemon Lime salon found the singers to be down-to-earth and approachable while they worked on their hair at the Music Circus before the show. No word, though, on how many folks were lining up outside just to get down.

'Art of Young Collectors' on exhibit

August 14 – 23, the FOCUS Gallery in Cohasset will feature a unique exhibit of photographs of interest to kids of all ages. The "Art for Young Collectors" exhibit will feature fine art prints by a number of gallery artists and several guest photographers in a variety of subjects including sea life and zoo animals, frogs and insects, sports, and brightly colored contemporary photos. The Paint Exchange in Scituate is participating in the exhibit by showcasing custom-painted furniture for children's rooms and providing consultation on painted wall finishes.

The idea of the exhibit came when FOCUS Gallery owner, Cindy Vallino, and her staff started to notice that parents were purchasing photographs from the gallery to decorate their kid's bedrooms, playrooms, and family rooms. "We've also had a number of young clients use their own savings to buy a favorite photo, and sometimes several prints by the same artist. It's been great seeing the excitement of kids when they come into the gallery."

One of the guest photographers featured in the show, Patrick Zephyr, specializes in highly detailed photographs of New England amphibians and insects. According to Vallino, "Patrick's photographs are not only stunning in their detail and color, they also show the wide variety of species in our local area." Photographs of penguins from Antartica by gallery artist, Onne van der Wal and sea animals from the Galapagos by photographer, Leah Cornwell, will also be featured.

The Gallery will host a Kids Preview Day on Friday, August 14 from 10 a.m. – 6 p.m. with a hands-on art activity in the gallery, snacks, and special discounts on print purchases. Framed and unframed photographs in various sizes and price ranges will be available. The FOCUS Gallery is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sundays from 12-5 p.m.. For further details, call the gallery at 781.383.0663 or visit their website: www.thefocus-gallery.com.

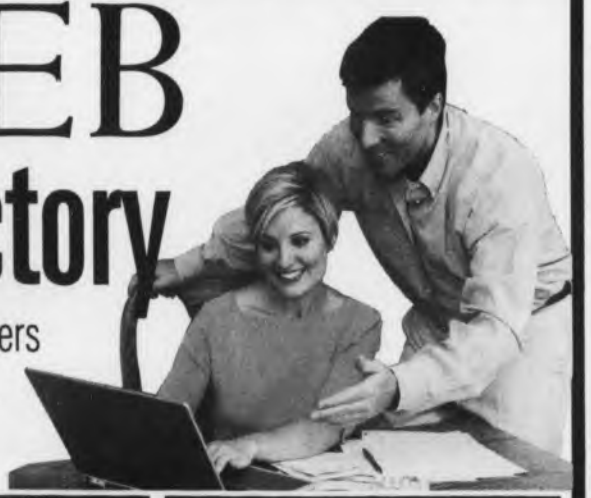
Cyclists encouraged to use helmets

Cohasset Police Department encourages all bicyclists, skateboarders and scooter riders to use helmets while riding. Helmets are mandated for all children 16 and younger. According to the National Transportation Safety Board, bicycle helmet use can reduce the risk of head injury by 85 percent and brain injury by 88 percent. Children and adolescents between 11-14 are least likely to use a helmet, and are five times more likely to sustain injuries in a bicycle related crash than any other age group – an 11 percent compliance rate.



Cohasset Police have bike helmets that are available at no charge to residents and their families. For information, ask at the front window of police headquarters.

No child under 1 year of age may be carried on a bicycle

Children between 1 and 4 years old are required to be in a baby seat that protects the child's feet and hands.

National Grid performing gas main work

National Grid recently began construction work on its natural gas infrastructure between numbers 38 and 184 Atlantic Avenue in Cohasset. Construction, which started July 20, will continue through the first week in September.

As part of National Grid's ongoing infrastructure upgrade, approximately 1,860 feet of gas main will be installed. This upgrade project, which will improve system reliability and safety, is part of the company's overall plan to invest more than $200 million in gas main replacements across its service area through March 2010.

National Grid's contractor will perform the work between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Streets will remain open for the duration of the project.

The company will make every effort to minimize disruption to homes and businesses along the route and will employ traffic management plans and police details as appropriate. The required work will be conducted in close coordination with town officials and public safety representatives.

Customers can expect a brief service interruption upon completion of the work, as homes and businesses are connected to the new main. Residents will be notified prior to any necessary construction on private property.

Hiring of new Elder Affairs director

The town is in the process of hiring a new director of Elder Affairs.

Linda Elworthy, who had served as director for the past three years, passed away unexpectedly in late May.

Town Manager Bill Griffin, who has the authority to hire the director, received 35 applications for the position.

The applicants were recently narrowed by the Council on Elder Affairs nad interviews are proceeding.

Depending on the availability of the chosen candidate, a new director could be on board by mid- to late-September, said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

The continued public hearing for the 17-unit condominium development proposed for 8 James Lane will not be discussed in detail at the scheduled Wed. July 29 Planning Board meeting. The Planning Board will open the public hearing only to continue it to Wed. August 19 at 8p.m.

The extra time will allow the applicant more time to put together the plans and other information previously requested by the Planning Board.

The Stoughton-based South Coastal Development Group has put forth for an application for a special permit under the relatively new village zoning regulations passed at the November 2008 Town Meeting.

The 26,000 square foot building will have three floors, an elevator and an underground parking garage in the basement. The property abuts the MBTA commuter rail tracks and fronts on James Lane.

Rain barrels

North and South Rivers Watershed Association has joined with The New England Rain Barrel Co. to provide New Englander rain barrels to area residents at the discounted price of $79.95, almost 30 percent off the retail price of $119.95.

Orders may be placed through Aug.7, and the rain barrel may be picked up at the NSRWA office, 214 South St., Norwell, on Tuesday, Aug. 11 from 4 to 7 pm. Those who can't make the pick-up time, can have the rain barrel stored for pickup at a later date. To order a rain barrel, call New England Rain Barrel Co. at 877-977-3135 or order online at nerainbarrel.com.

The Winsor Doll Company – A 20th century cottage industry in Cohasset

For numerous years in the mid 20th century, a cottage industry flourished in Cohasset. Local owner, Marion Winsor, had been a puppeteer who became a maker of dolls. The Winsor Doll Co. run from her home in Cohasset produced literally thousands of dolls of about 5-1/2 inches in height. Pipe cleaners and cotton were used for bodies; shoes and feet were cast of metal. Heads were of wood, with painted features.

Family members and local Cohasset people helped in creating, sewing clothing or painting the finished dolls, working on a piecework basis. Numerous characters were crafted: adults, children, fishermen, brides and grooms, carol singers, angels and were sold individually or in sets. Her dioramas showed larger groups, such as a Pilgrim home, and a schoolhouse.

The Cohasset Historical Society's collection includes a diorama of a "1734 one room schoolhouse", made for a Cohasset Carnival diorama contest and populated by Winsor dolls including a small boy standing in the corner wearing a pointed cap bearing the word "Dunce". Winsor dolls had a large clientele that included Plymouth Plantation. In later years larger dolls were produced, of clay and ceramics. The Winsor Doll Company, Cohasset's own cottage industry, remained active until 1972.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
AUG. 17, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A chaotic atmosphere taxes the patience of the Aries Lamb, who prefers to deal with a more orderly environment. Best advice: Stay out of the situation until things settle.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Tension runs high in both personal and workplace relationships. This can make it difficult to get your message across. Best to wait until you have a more receptive audience.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) This is a good time to take a break from your busy schedule to plan for some well-deserved socializing. You could get news about an important personal matter by the week's end.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An offer of help could come just when you seem to need it. But be careful about saying yes to anything that might have conditions attached that could cause problems down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Sometimes a workplace colleague can't be charmed into supporting the Lion's position. That's when it's time to shift tactics and overwhelm the doubter with the facts.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You continue to earn respect for your efforts to help someone close to you stand up to a bully. But be careful that in pushing this matter you don't start to do some bullying yourself.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Don't ask others if they think you're up to a new responsibility. Having faith in your own abilities is the key to dealing with a challenge. P.S.: That "private" matter needs your attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to use that Scorpian creativity to come up with something special that will help get your derailed career plans back on track and headed in the right direction.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While change is favored, it could be a good idea to carefully weigh the possible fallout as well as the benefits of any moves before you make them.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Goat continues to create a stir by following his or her own path. Just be sure you keep your focus straight and avoid any distractions that could cause you to make a misstep.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A colleague's demands seem out of line. But before reacting one way or another, talk things out and see how you might resolve the problem and avoid future misunderstandings.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A personal matter appears to be making more demands on your time than you feel you're ready to give. See if some compromise can be reached before things get too dicey.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're able to communicate feelings better than most people. Have you considered a career in the pulpit or in politics?

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

TOWN COMMONS

What's happening on the South Shore

AUGUST 6-14, 2009

These unsigned artworks will be included in the upcoming OTB: Outside the Box silent auction.

Who art thou by?

Top-secret auction to feature works by Carell, Brega, and more

By Jennifer H. McInerney

How much would you pay to take home an original piece of artwork created by trompe l'oeil master David Brega or actor Steve Carell, star of "The Office" and "The 40-Year-Old Virgin?"

If you would like to bid on these and more than 200 other one-of-a-kind pieces, stop by "OTB: Outside the Box," an exhibit and silent auction presented by the North River Arts Society. Bidding starts at $25 and will be ongoing at the G.A.R. Hall on Old Main Street in Marshfield Hills from Aug. 8 through Sept. 4. A bidding number costs $10.

But here's the twist: the exhibit will be anonymous. Every 8-inch by 8-inch piece of artwork will be unsigned and otherwise unlabeled until after the bidding ends.

"We thought it would be a lot of fun to let people follow their instincts and bid on the pieces they liked, rather than be influenced by the name of the artist," observes Mary Curran, co-chair of the event.

She explains that the impetus behind "OTB: Outside the Box" was to offer a fun summertime event that would provide the general public with the opportunity to own a piece of original artwork for a low starting bid of $25.

In addition to celebrity artwork, the exhibit will feature pieces by nationally and internationally acclaimed artists and photographers, including Sergio Roffo, Liz Haywood-Sullivan, Ted Polomis, Donna Rossetti-Bailey, Dorit Flowers, Lance Keimig, and Mike Sleeper. All anonymously, of course.

"It's also an opportunity for the artists to experiment with a different medium, to deviate from their signature style," Curran adds. "In this sense, the pieces in the OTB exhibit will truly be unique."

Bidding will begin at the "OTB: Outside the Box" opening reception on Aug. 8 and continue through Sept. 4. On Sept. 8, the exhibit will reopen with the artists' names revealed, but the auction winners' names will be kept secret until the closing reception on Sept. 11.

"The top bidders will be notified that they have won something, but they won't know exactly what they've won until the closing party," Curran continues. "We're really looking forward to both of these climactic moments—first, when the artists' names are added to the exhibit, and then, when the winners find out which piece or pieces they'll be taking home."

So bid early and often at the G.A.R. Hall, Aug. 8-Sept. 4, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon, and on Sundays Aug. 16, 23, and 30 only from 1 to 4 p.m.

All proceeds will support the North River Arts Society, a grassroots nonprofit organization that has been providing arts education, programming, exhibits, and events to people of all ages throughout the region for 40 years. The G.A.R. Hall is located at 157 Old Main St. in Marshfield Hills off Route 3A. The event is sponsored by The Frame Center of Hanover. For additional information and to view images of the unsigned artwork online, visit www.northriverarts.org/exhibits.html.

The laughs keep coming

'America's Dad' pays a visit to Music Circus

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Like the many young comics he inspires, and who thank him publicly every chance they get, Bill Cosby – who comes to the South Shore Music Circus for two shows Saturday – is quick to give credit to the people who were with him from the very beginning of his career.

"Robert Culp, my co-star on my first series, 'I Spy,' has been one of my best friends ever since. His integrity and his warm, welcoming behavior toward me from the very beginning are just some of the reasons that I cherish Bob's friendship."

Another reason may be the shared experience that Culp and Cosby had with Sheldon Leonard, producer of the groundbreaking NBC-TV series, which ran from 1965 to 1968, about a pair of international secret agents posing as a professional tennis player and his trainer.

"Sheldon Leonard was one of the first men of true honesty, integrity, and warmth whom I met in this business," said Cosby recently by telephone from Philadelphia, of the man who hired him to be the first African-American actor to star in a dramatic series, in a role which would win the young performer three consecutive Emmy Awards as Best Actor in a Drama. "Sheldon was a true giant of television. He was an actor first, and then a writer, director, and producer responsible for 'The Andy Griffith Show,' 'The Dick Van Dyke Show,' 'The Danny Thomas Show,' and, of course, 'I Spy.' We filmed that series on location, everywhere from Japan to Spain, and Sheldon always put my wife, Camille, and I up in the very best hotels. He made sure we had first-class experiences all over the world. Sheldon had a great deal of well-deserved success and he shared it like he shared everything he had."

Twenty years after they first worked together, Cosby invited his old boss to check out the new sitcom he was doing for NBC.

"Sheldon came to a taping of 'The Cosby Show' and afterward he came back to my dressing room and said, 'You can do this show as long as you want.'"

Once again, Leonard gave his friend some good advice. With Cosby as star and co-creator of the show, along with Ed Weinberger and Michael J. Leeson, and producers Marcy Carsey and Tom Werner – now chairman of the Boston Red Sox – at the helm, "The Cosby Show," which ran 1984 to 1992, stayed on top of the Nielsen ratings for eight seasons and brought situation comedies back from the brink of extinction.

Bill Cosby will be at the South Shore Music Circus for two shows at 4 and 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 8.

"The show came from the monologues I did in my act, which Brandon Tartikoff, then president of NBC, saw and thought might make a good sitcom. At the time, sitcoms were thought to be dead. It was Brandon who revived them by bringing Tom, Marcy, and me together," recalls Cosby of the show that became the highest-rated sitcom of all time.

A believer in family-oriented comedy, Cosby – who graduated from Temple University and holds an Ed.D. from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst – was involved in every aspect of the series, which taped in New York at his request. The show had similarities to Cosby's real-life family life. Lead characters Cliff and Claire Huxtable, like Bill and Camille Cosby, were college educated and financially successful, and had five children. Although it could be described as following in the path of many wholesome family comedies before it, "The Cosby Show" was also the first series to present an African-American family that was both well-adjusted and comfortably upper-middle class.

Cosby wanted to ensure that there was a message amidst the laughs so he turned to Dr. Alvin F. Poussaint, a faculty member at Harvard Medical School and a renowned expert in the raising of African-American children.

"Alvin Poussaint went over every script. He made enormously important contributions to our show. I thank him to this day," says Cosby, 72, of his co-author on the 2007 book, "Come On People: On the Path from Victims to Victors," which looks at the black experience in America.

Mindful of the good his pairing with Culp had done for his earlier TV stint, Cosby – who has recorded some 40 comedy albums - made sure the right person was also cast to play his television wife.

"Phylicia Rashad can cut you with her eyes. Her eyes speak to you before she even opens her mouth. In Phylicia's hands, Clair Huxtable became the perfect match of character to actress. Hers was by no means a sitcom performance."

With Rashad, who would also play Cosby's wife on "Cosby" for CBS-TV from 1996 to 2000, at his side – and a cast that included Sabrina LeBeauf, Lisa Bonet, Malcolm-Jamal Warner, Tempestt Bledsoe, and Keshia Knight Pulliam as children Sondra, Denise, Theo, Vanessa and Rudy – the creator of the long-running animated series "Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids" earned a moniker that he says now he was reluctant to embrace.

"I never accepted being called 'America's Father' because of 'The Cosby Show.' I always believed that Cliff was a man who was not always right. He's a lot like most dads who think to themselves at the dinner table, 'If I wasn't working to support these people, they would probably have me killed,'" explains Cosby with a laugh. "I've had from all backgrounds –from as far away as Korea - tell me, 'You remind me of my father,' though, and I always enjoy that very much."

There are also a few performers whom Cosby – who began his stand-up career as one of a generation of other future legends including Lenny Bruce, Jonathan Winters, and Richard Pryor – enjoys very much among the contemporary crop of stand-up comedians.

"Stephen Wright and Sinbad do some great material. Their humor, like mine, comes from observations they make of their own lives. I think they're both very clever."

Bill Cosby will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, for two shows at 4 and 7 p.m. on Aug. 8. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-745-3000, or go online at themusiccircus.org.

WATER SPORT

Cohasset Maritime Institute instructors David Gomez, left, and Evan Cutler, lift the Joseph Antoine onto the boat rest Tuesday afternoon at CMI's launch.

CMI nurtures young rowers

High school program flourishing

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Here we let people pick their own level of skill and hopefully they continue with the sport at whatever level they are comfortable with."
— John Liffman, CMI coach

Each summer afternoon, the Cohasset Maritime Institute Boathouse, tucked in between the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) and the Cohasset Sailing Club at the end of Parker Avenue, fills with middle school and high school students ready to grab oars and stroke their way out of the harbor.

This summer about 40 students are participating in the afternoon program and about 50 adults are regular attendees in the evening and weekends.

The Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) had humble beginnings. According to longtime coach John Liffmann, its first boat was a big wooden boat — a rower's version of a clunker. When Liffmann found out about several older rowing boats basically rotting on the Charles River things started taking off.

"We fixed them up and started going and one thing led to another," Liffmann says, who worked closely with Jack Buckley to lay the foundation of the program. "People had fun and they told their friends, our growth has mostly been by word of mouth."

The high school rowing program has grown exponentially from those early days in the late 1990s. Many CMI graduates have gone on to participate at the collegiate level.

"It's amazing the [race] times they would be able to rack up, the ability they are able to attain — many of them are really competitive," says Lisa Hewitt Dick, one of CMI's Board of Directors.

The inherent teamwork of the sport is an attraction for many of the young rowers.

"It's different than every other sport, there's a lot of emphasis on your own technique but it is not about just one individual scoring goals. Everyone has to be good in order to succeed," says Emily Toomey, a junior at Cohasset High who has been rowing since she was in sixth grade.

"You can't have one person pulling a four person boat," Ashley Howard, another Cohasset High junior, chimes in.

Both Ashley and Emily name the fact the sport is on the water as one of the reasons they enjoy participating, especially in the summertime.

The philosophy of CMI, which permeates through every aspect of the program, is everyone is supposed to have fun and enjoy the sport of rowing.

"A lot of rowing programs are solely geared toward competition," Liffmann says. "Here we let people pick their own level of skill and hopefully they continue with the sport at whatever level they are comfortable with."

One of the instructors says it is partly about uncovering a respect for the sport and the ocean.

"We try to steer a course halfway between having fun and facing up to challenges," Liffmann says.

First step toward a 'green community'

Selectmen send in application for state grant

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Overall my perception is it is a step in the right direction."
— Selectman Ted Carr

Cohasset is taking the first step toward becoming a "green community," at least by state standards.

On Monday night, the Board of Selectmen voted to apply to the state to be considered for a $25,000 technical assistance grant. The grant would provide a consultant to get the town on track to completing the Green Community application.

One of the initiatives of the Patrick administration, the Green Communities Act establishes a mechanism for communities to receive grant funding for "green initiatives" from energy efficiency projects in municipal buildings to renewable energy and other innovative projects.

For about an hour the Selectmen discussed the benefits and detriments of taking this first step toward becoming a Green Community. The discussion was a continuation of its Aug. 3 overview of the Green Communities Act. Following that initial discussion, the Selectmen sought the advice of town counsel on a couple of points.

Primarily, the Selectmen wanted to know what kind of liability the town would have if it did apply for and receive the $25,000 technical assistance grant. Specifically, they wanted to know if they received $25,000 grant and did not complete the requirements of becoming a green community, whether the town would have to return the grant funds or be forced to comply with the mandates.

In a memo, town counsel advised the Green Communities Act fails to provide express guidance in this matter.

However, Town Manager Bill Griffin communicated via telephone with the Mark Sylvia, Director of the Green Communities Program, who indicated towns applying for the initial technical assistance grant would not be penalized — monetarily or forced to comply with

Police Beat

Bike accident at N. Main St. crossing

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A Norwell woman was taken to the hospital following a bicycle mishap at the North Main Street grade crossing by Woodside Cemetery at 3:20 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 9). Police said it appears that she did not use the "jug handle" that directs cyclists around so they do not cross the tracks at a right angle.

The woman's bike tire got stuck in the tracks and she fell off her bike. Upon arrival police found the woman on her back in the middle of the northbound lane of North Main just past the grade crossing. She was complaining of pain in her left upper arm and her head. The MBTA stopped the train for a period of time.

Her fellow cyclist told police they were traveling in the north bound lane of North Main when they went across the grade crossing and her tire became trapped in the gap between the rail and the road. He stated she was thrown to the ground, landing on her left shoulder and her head. Both bicycles were taken to the station and held for safekeeping until they could be picked up.

Before changes were made at the grade crossing, there had been a rash of bicycle accidents at the site.

Marijuana

At just before 11 p.m. on Monday (Aug 3), an officer was driving in the area of Atlantic Avenue and Beach Street when he saw five teens walking along the side of the roadway. The officer was familiar with one of the boys who had a beer in his hand and tossed it aside when he saw the police.

The officer pulled up and could smell a strong odor of marijuana. Further investigation revealed that one of the teens had three small plastic bags of marijuana that were in excess of one ounce in his backpack. The 18-year-old Cohasset teen was arrested for illegal possession of Class D. (Massachusetts has decriminalized the penalty for possession of marijuana of less than one ounce).

No one showed signs of intoxication and there was no more beer, police said. The parents of the boy seen tossing the beer were notified.

Grabbed

Police are summonsing a 35-year-old Brockton man to court on charges of indecent assault and battery on a person over 15 for allegedly grabbing a woman in the buttocks on Depot Court last Thursday at about 6:55 p.m.

Police received a call from the alleged victim. An officer was dispatched to Depot Court where the woman explained that a man with two young children came up behind her, grabbed her in the backside, and walked away. She said she turned and made eye contact and told police he said, "excuse me" and kept on walking. She shared the incident with two friends who urged her to call the police. Police checked the area and located the man who was now with his wife and two children. He denied the allegations and denied the incident took place. Chief James Hussey said, however, after gathering information, police will be seeking a criminal complaint in court. He said the allegations are serious.

Hussey explained that based on the totality of the circumstances at the time, police decided to summons the man to court rather than arrest him.

Flagged down

An operator of a car that had been damaged by a bike flagged down an officer at a few minutes before 7:30 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 8). The motorist explained that a child on a bicycle had come up between some parked cars, lost control on his bike, and hit the left quarter panel of his car causing some damage. The man asked the child if his parents were around and made contact with the child's father. Police arrived and all appeared to be OK with the matter to be handled by the father's homeowner's insurance policy.

However, a short time later, the operator of the car flagged down police again to report that after police left a heated exchange between the two men ensued with the father of the boy on the bike making statements of a threatening nature. The motorist did not want to press charges. Police located the father of the boy and determined that he was intoxicated and placed him in protective custody.

House sitter

A 22-year-old Scituate woman was so intoxicated when police went to the door of the Church Street home that police took her into protective custody. Police said she was "house-sitting" for the residents when she threw a party at the house that resulted in police being called with noise complaints. When police arrived after 3 a.m. on Sunday (Aug. 9), they saw different people drinking outside on the back deck. Chief Hussey said a very intoxicated woman came to the door and explained that she was house-sitting. There were about 20-25 people at the party and police determined all were of age. They told the woman to shut the party down but she became confrontational, police said. Based on police observations, she was placed into protective custody.

Another party-goer, a 21-year-old man, who was highly intoxicated, was transported to South Shore Hospital, police said. A few of the partygoers who were not intoxicated were allowed to drive away, the others stayed at the house.

A neighbor offered to watch the house and the dog, police said.

MV crashes

• At 4:43 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 5), police received a 9-1-1 call about a motor vehicle that had flipped over into the woods. Police said the 2000 Ford that was headed south on North Main Street near Cedar Street went off the road and through a couple of cement posts, snapped a utility pole and rolled over in the woods, not far from the railroad tracks. The operator, a Cohasset resident, told police he had been counting money when the mishap occurred. There were no apparent injuries, the Ford was towed, and the operator was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes.

• At 4:07 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 7), a 2002 Ford, operated by a Cohasset man, was backing out of a parking space in a lot off King Street, when it crashed into a 2005 Dodge, operated by a Scituate woman, who was going straight through the lane. There was minor damage to the Dodge. The Cohasset man in the Ford was cited for failure to use care while backing up. He was also fined $500 for operating after license suspension. There were no apparent injuries and neither car was towed, police said.

• At 11 a.m. on Saturday (Aug. 8), police received three 911 calls about a motor vehicle accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A). Police said a 2005 Acura, operated by a Scituate man, was headed south when it stopped to make a left. A 2001 Chrysler, also operated by a Scituate man, struck the right rear of the Acura then veered off the road striking some ceramic pots in front of Cohasset Greenery. The operator of the Chrysler was cited for following too closely and for marked lanes violation. His car was towed. There were no apparent injuries, police said.

Fence damage

Police are not sure if damaged fence panels and broken gate lock at a house on Otis Avenue were the result of an incident of pool hopping of which there had been previous reports recently around town. Police responded to the residence at about 4:10 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 4). The perpetrators had also thrown tennis rackets and toys into the pool, police said.

Police canvassed the area for witnesses and the incident remains under investigation.

Dog bite

The mother of a 6-year-old boy took her son to the hospital after the boy was bitten on the face by a dog on Highland Court on Tuesday (Aug. 4). Police said the dog was on its owner's property with its owner and her friend when children came into the yard and startled the dog. The dog, which is up to date on its shots, has been quarantined for 10 days, police said.

Beer stolen

Police are investigating a break-in to an outdoor cooler at the Red Lion Inn that was reported at about 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 5) and had occurred sometime overnight. The lock was cut and two cases of beer were missing, police said. The larceny is under investigation.

Purse theft

A walker in Wheelwright Park discovered that her pocketbook that she had tucked under the driver's seat was missing when she returned to her unlocked car. The incident was reported at 6:30 p.m. p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 9). Inside the pocketbook were $60 in cash, a driver's license and credit cards. The victim cancelled her credit cards and was able to provide police with some observations about the parking lot when she first arrived. She described someone sitting in a car who may have seen her put her pocketbook under the front seat. Police are investigating but encourage all motorists to lock valuables in the trunk or leave them at home.

Stolen bike

Police are investigating the theft of a royal blue Columbia 10-speed mountain bike taken from the lawn of a house where the bike owner was spending the night with a friend. The mother went to the police station at 2:05 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 9) to report her son's bike was missing.

Solicitor

An unregistered magazine solicitor was sent on his way after several reports about a white man with brown hair and wearing an orange Polo shirt walking through backyards on Forest Avenue and Spindrift Lane on Saturday (Aug. 8) at about 2:20 p.m. One caller reported that the man was intoxicated but police said that was not the case. Cohasset has a bylaw that requires door-to-door solicitors to register with the police and wear identification.

Before
"In the short time since joining Get In Shape For Women I have gotten amazing results. At my last weigh in I found out that I have lost over 45 pounds and 22 inches off of my body! I can't believe the difference in my before and after photos! I used to always think that I wasn't that fat and overweight. But now when I look at my old photos I can really see that I was that bad and overweight. I still have some more weight to lose, but joining Get In Shape For Women has helped get me back on track with watching what I eat and exercising. I know with the encouragement of my trainers I will meet my goals!"

Dormitzer worried about 'green' strings attached

the Green Community requirements — if they did not complete all the requirements outlined in the Green Communities Act.

Despite the verbal assurances of the director of the Green Communities Program, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer had serious reservations about getting the town involved in an initiative where many of the details were not spelled out in black and white.

"I could not in good conscience sign the town up for something so vague, so ill-defined…I cannot do that do this community," Dormitzer said.

There are five requirements outlined by the Green Communities Act that towns need to adopt in order to be considered for additional grant funding. Dormitzer said three out of the five may be doable and palpable for the town, but two of the requirements were "highly unlikely" to pass at a Town Meeting.

The first is providing for the "as-of-right" siting of renewable or alternative energy generating facilities; renewable or alternative energy research and development facilities; or renewable alternative energy manufacturing facilities in designated locations.

"It takes [the authority] out of the hands of the town," Dormitzer said. "It's an extraordinary thing," and likened the requirement to the state's Chapter 40-B affordable housing mandate.

Dormitzer also expressed concerns about the act's requirement for all new residential construction over 3,000 square feet and all new commercial and industrial real estate construction to minimize, to the extent feasible, the lifecycle cost of the facility through energy efficiency, water conservation and other renewable or alternative energy technologies.

The phrase "to the extent feasible" was particularly concerning to Dormitzer because he said it was limitless. Dormitzer said he believed the bylaw changes would have a hard time getting a two-thirds approval vote at Town Meeting. "I do not think this town is ready for this."

While the other Selectmen echoed concerns about the current state of ambiguity of the program, some also saw it as a possible learning experience and a chance to take a leadership role in energy alternatives and efficiency.

Selectman Fred Koed saw the first step — the $25,000 technical assistance grant — as just that, the first step.

"It is a no-obligation $25,000 to look at probably the most critical areas we need to look at [energy conservation and alternatives]…Town Meeting will have a chance to say no to it," Koed said.

Selectmen Ted Carr has similar thoughts.

"Overall my perception is it is a step in the right direction," Carr said, but added he was hesitant to enter into something that was not fully fleshed out. "The intent of what trying to do is pretty admirable."

Clark Brewer, a member of the Planning Board who is leading the application process, said this initial step had minimal risk, but great potential benefit.

"There are a lot of questions…this is a new program. But, I think, right now the potential benefits outweigh the risks right now," Brewer said.

Ultimately, the Board voted 4-1 (Dormitzer was the dissenting vote) to submit the application for a technical assistance grant. If the town receives the technical assistance grant then a grant agreement will have to be signed by the Selectmen.

Briefly

Minot Light

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said the undertaking of taking ownership of Minot Light might be too big for anyone group, but if several groups got together it might work.

The United States General Services Administration recently said the lighthouse is available to a not-for-profit, government or local agency free of charge. If no non-profit agency is found to take control of the light, the lighthouse, which is accessible only by boat, will be sold at public auction.

"I think we need to find out what costs are associated with the maintenance and upkeep of the lighthouse," Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said. While Minot under went a restoration within the last few years, he was concerned about the cost down the line, "what sort of liability are we creating?"

Charlie Higginson of Lothrop Lane encouraged the Board of Selectmen to get involved in the process and at least put in a letter of interest. Higginson said there might be a possibility of the Cohasset and Scituate historical societies working together to keep Minot Light.

"It could be a win-win to set up an ad-hoc group and see who in Cohasset is interested and who in Scituate is interested," Higginson said.

Carlson said the issue would be an agenda item at their next scheduled meeting on Monday, August 24.

The deadline to send a letter of interest is Sept. 30.

Treat's Pond

During the Selectmen comment period, vice chair Karen Quigley raised the issue of the ongoing discussions regarding the Treat's Pond easement.

"It was way back in April that we last discussed the easement," Quigley said, who requested an update at some point from the sub-committee working on the easement negotiations.

"As of today there hasn't been anything new," Selectmen chairman Paul Carlson said. Carlson said there have been ongoing discussions between the two sides, but no concrete progress.

Quigley asked about the nature of the discussions/negotiations.

"It's endless quibbling about the various pieces of language," Carlson said. Quigley asked when the selectmen would consider how long they were going to quibble.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who has recused himself from all Treat's Pond discussions, interrupted with a point of order. He felt the selectmen comment period should be left to comments and any in-depth discussions should be posted and the involved parties be noticed.

As a conclusion, Carlson said it was his desire to get the easement done as fast as possible and would report to the rest of the Selectmen when it was appropriate.

Bottle bill supported

The state is considering updating the "bottle bill" to include plastic and other beverage containers currently not redeemable. Right now, beer and soda containers are refundable, but other non-carbonated beverages (water, juice, sport drinks, etc). Much of the littler comes from the currently non-refundable containers. It is hoped a financial incentive will increase recycling and proper disposal of drink containers.

The South Shore Recycling Cooperative requested the Board of Selectmen to consider sending a letter of support for the bottle bill. After a brief discussion the Selectmen unanimously voted to support the bill.

Please follow Little Harbor rules

To all boaters and residents of Little Harbor, as you are aware, Little Harbor is very special and hopefully always will be. However, the harbor will need the cooperation of all to keep it that way.

The following bylaws were voted at town meeting so that the people who like to swim, sail, kayak, canoe and enjoy other water activities, without the concern of fast operating powerboats, could enjoy the harbor.

- Article 7, section 32 states: "Jet skis, surf jets, and water bikes stall not be operated at a speed in excess of twelve miles per hour while in the confines of the harbor."
- Article 9, section 5 states: "No person shall operate a boat in Little Harbor white towing a water skier, aqua plane or other similar device except on even numbered days." An easy reminder is even: fast and odd: slow.

In addition, Little Harbor has a wide variety of birdlife, many of whom nest on the islands and rocks. Recently, the terns have resumed nesting in the harbor, which is a very welcome sight after many years of absence. It is important to their species that these nests are not disturbed.

And lastly, in spring and late summer many shore birds find Little Harbor's sand flats a vital feeding ground on their long migration as far as Central and South America. Dogs running and chasing them, although fun for the dog, interrupt their ability to build the necessary fat and energy reserves to continue migrating. Please respect their need to feed and rest in order to prepare for the long trip south.

Lunch struggles

Schools to share food service director with Hingham

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The area of primary concern is the low school lunch participation numbers.

Despite changes and cutbacks in the Cohasset school lunch program students are still not buying lunch in the numbers needed to run a successful operation.

Primarily because of significant staff cutbacks made about halfway through the year, the school lunch program ended the fiscal year in the black with a balance $17,800. With the cost of food, salaries and paper goods expected to go up, school administration has been looking for ways to reduce costs by partnering with other school districts.

At the School Committee meeting last Wednesday, the school administration unveiled a proposal to partner with the Hingham schools district to share a food service director position. The two towns would equally split the cost of the position (salary and benefits) and the director would split his or her time equally between the two districts.

According to a memo from school business manager Dave DeGennaro, the partnership with Hingham will allow for operating efficiencies such as combined purchasing, inventory control, menu planning and improvement, nutritional values and marketing.

The director would oversee the lunch program in the nine schools between the two districts, which educate a total of 5,500 students.

The current Cohasset food service director position would morph into a district-wide site supervisor. Responsibilities would include daily supervision of staff, assignment of daily duties, and overseeing the day-to-day operation in all buildings. The position would be reduced from a 207- to 185-day position.

According to DeGennaro's memo, the candidate for the shared position between Hingham and Cohasset will be responsible for menu planning, purchasing of foods and supplies, evaluating performance of staff, arranging work schedules, and the preparation of federal and state reports.

The area of primary concern is the low school lunch participation numbers. At the elementary schools, participation hovers between 40 and 50 percent of the school population. The participation numbers take a sharp downturn at the Middle High School. On average about 25 percent of the Middle High School population buys lunch.

As a result, the shared food service director will strive to increase participation through an improved menu, improved nutrition and marketing to the parents, according to the memo.

The school lunch program has been a concern of the administration and the School Committee for over a year. When the School Department closed the books on fiscal 2008, the food services budget ran a deficit of approximately $40,000. It was the first year where the food service budget, which is typically a self-sufficient operation or even a profit maker, ended the year significantly in the red.

The School Committee and administration began to combat the problem last spring by hiring a food service consultant to do an extensive operational review to help the fledgling school lunch program. The consultant's primary goal was to suggest improvements to strengthen the fiscal integrity of the lunch program.

The food service department has implemented a majority of the items she suggested; yet there has been no significant change in participation numbers. The aim for most school districts was 50 percent participation.

In a survey of other area school districts that use an outside contracted vendor, participation rates were generally higher. At Rockland Public Schools, which contracts with Chartwells, the current participation rate is 75 percent. Yet, Cohasset is not alone in running a deficit. According to the survey, the four public school districts have had to bail out the program after it ran a deficit this year and in recent years.

Public schools must provide a lunch program to students according to federal law.

His students are forthright about Liffmann's role in keeping them coming back to CMI. His unique mixture of tough love and humor lets them know what they need to improve on but makes them laugh at the same time. An easy rapport of mutual ribbing is apparent when Liffmann is in the room with his students.

"It's pretty intense when [Liffmann] gets into the boat," Emily says, recalling the first time she rowed under his supervision. "I thought I was pretty good, but he made me realize pretty quickly I had a lot of stuff to work on."

Yet, she says the experience has helped her improve her technique and realize her potential.

"John [Liffmann] pushes the kids to heights that they wouldn't have event thought of achieving…he really has a tremendous gift to relate, to coach and to inspire," Hewitt Dick says.

Backing up Liffmann, who got his start in rowing through the Hull rowing program in the mid-1980s, is a talented and seasoned group of instructors, most of which have competed competitively at top-level colleges. Most of them return summer after summer and for many of them there talent and love for the sport was nurtured at CMI.

Evan Cutler joined the program as an instructor about five years ago. He rowed in both high school and college.

"I love the sport of rowing and it feels really great to give back to the sport and the youth in the community," Cutler says, adding there is only a small percentage of the population that has the ocean and resources to truly take advantage of the sport. He hopes to bring a more competitive angle to the program for those who are interested in pursuing it. Cutler is gathering athletes to participate in an upcoming 15-mile race, the Jamestown Counter Revolution in Rhode Island.

"I think we've become a real serious program and an accepted, vibrant part of the community," says Liffmann, who lives in Hull.

CMI is looking to get a skulling program off the ground and returning to its building's early roots by creating a boat building program.

"We give people a chance to explore the area and learn about themselves by learning about other things," Liffmann says.

CMI Head Coach John Liffmann waits for assistance to bring in one of the 26-foot, sliding-seat 4-man boats used in an earlier class.

Cohasset Maritime Institute students head out into Bailey's Creek. This summer about 40 students are participating in the afternoon program and about 50 adults are regular attendees in the evening and weekends.

Blackburn Challenge

This year, CMI sent two four-person crews and two double crews to the Blackburn Challenge in Gloucester on Saturday, July 18. The 20-plus mile circumnavigation of Cape Ann allows a wide variety of water conditions, testing the rower's physical fitness and knowledge of weather conditions and its affects on a boat.

The youngest member of the crews was Tara Goodwin, who just finished her sophomore year at Cohasset High. She started rowing with CMI when in middle school.

"It was the hardest physical thing I've ever done, but it was also the best feeling when I finished," Goodwin said. Her crew completed the course in three hours and two minutes, a time that gave them first place in their class.

Preparing for the Blackburn Challenge involved many early morning practices ("which are always fun during summer vacation," Tara adds with a smile) where the crew would travel to Nantasket Beach or around Minot Light as training.

She jumped aboard the Blackburn crew to become a better rower and just to do the Blackburn. Tara aims to continue rowing into college.

"It's quite an achievement for someone who just completed their sophomore year," said Coach Liffmann. Tara was one of three high school student participants on the crew. Natalie Glines, a recent graduate of Notre Dame Academy, and Jackson Dean, a Cohasset High student entering his senior year. CMI instructor and Blackburn Challenge veteran Alice Bellone completed the crew.

Matt Coates and Evan Cutler were awarded bronze medals in the Sliding Seat Touring Double class with an official time of 3:07.38. Don Trisler and Skip Besse in a newly built wherry finished sixth place in the touring double class with a time of 3:31:54. Dan Allen, Mike Pecca, George Bushnell, Rick Lyons, and Doug McLellan took silver in the sliding seat multi rowing class for finishing with a time of 3:11:42.

Single mom loses 17 pounds in 12 weeks!

I can't begin to tell you how Get In Shape for Women has changed my entire life. I was at the end of my rope and almost gave up on losing weight. I'm a single mom at 28 and had little time to focus on myself. There was a drawing on 98.5 and this is where my transformation began.

I lost 17 pounds in 12 weeks. Never in my life did I think that was possible. My trainers told me what to eat, drink and showed me correct workouts to reach the goals I set for myself. They were always there for encouragement, accountability and support. This opportunity has given me a new start at living the healthy lifestyle I've always wanted. I can't begin to think where I would be if I was never paired with Get In Shape for Women. I've worked hard but it was worth every minute.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Putting pen to paper

"A friend is the best mirror," English poet George Herbert once wrote.

A mirror is a true reflection.

A mirror tells it like it is.

As your hometown newspaper, we want to hear you "tell it like it is."

In your mailbox, on the newsstand and online, your hometown paper is all about you: your interests, your kids, your business, your pets, your clubs, your town boards, and your representatives on Beacon Hill.

We're here to be a sounding board for your ideas, a forum for your thoughts, and your PR person when you want to publicize an achievement or event.

We're here for you to "Sound Off" when you're hopping mad or wildly enthusiastic.

It's all about your opinions.

Do you have a fundraiser coming up?

Is there something in your neighborhood or town you think should change?

Do you have an idea on how to make things better?

Do you belong to an organization that just doesn't get the attention it deserves?

Do you have a quiet worry that won't go away, an issue that you think others should be aware of?

Why not write a letter to the editor?

Will we or everyone else in town always agree with you?

Chances are, no.

But remember these words by our Founding Father Patrick Henry, some of the most thrilling and fiery words of the American Revolution:

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

We're dedicated to the democratic ideal of equal access to communication.

It's our job to make sure you have the means to make yourself heard.

This is quite a mission.

How are we doing?

We always welcome feedback.

If you haven't sent a letter to the editor or posted a comment online, we urge you to consider doing so.

As the classic pop tune goes:

"Deliver de letter, de sooner de better."

We want to hear your reflections.

Please email your letters to editor Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com; please include your name and address.

Traffic islands add to town's beauty

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to express my appreciation to all the citizens of Cohasset who have commented to me on the traffic island we are maintaining on King Street (after the RR crossing) in memory of Joey. The flowers are finally coming to bloom and the beautiful David Hassan sign really adds to the island.

All the "traffic islands" in town that are being maintained by volunteers really add to the beauty of our town, thank you to everyone for your efforts.

HEALTH NOTES

H1N1 vaccine targeted to certain groups

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

When F.D.R. at the beginning of WW2 gave his speech saying: "we have nothing to fear but fear itself," he was voicing an ancient mantra that nothing is as bad as it at first seems. The difference is that now the world has changed, some say developed, some progressed, whatever. It's a fact that we have many more tools for communicating to many more people and there are many more people who will interpret the news using outdated information. Hence, when we say that flu killed 40 million people worldwide in the 1918 flu epidemic, a flu virus suspiciously like the H1N1, the world population was 1.8 billion. Now the world population is 6.777 billion; about 15 percent more than the necessary food supply. And when the media receives the early data and begins to compare it to past flu events, many reports will scare us silly.

On Wednesday (Aug. 12), the Board of Health issued to all churches, elder affairs groups, the Community center and selected other community organizations the following statement:

"We continue to see influenza like illness activity at higher levels than we would normally see at this time of year. With this in mind local public health officials have been busy planning for the fall flu season."
— Cohasset Board of Health

"We continue to see influenza like illness activity at higher levels than we would normally see at this time of year. With this in mind local public health officials have been busy planning for the fall flu season. The CDC is continuing to develop and test a vaccine for H1N1 flu and has indicated that an H1N1 vaccine may be available in large quantities starting in October.

"Even if the H1N1 vaccine is ready by then, it will likely not be delivered all at once. All states will likely receive an initial allocation and then regular shipments after that. With this in mind the provisional priority groups are: pregnant women, new parents, household contacts of children less than 6 months of age, students and staff associated with schools, children 6 months through 4 years of age, child-care workers, health-care workers and emergency personnel, and non-elderly adults (age< 65 years) with medical conditions that increase the risk of complications of influenza. At this time it appears that persons greater than 65 years of age seem to have some immunity to the H1N1 virus and will not need the H1N1 vaccine."

Simple precautions to help stop the spread of Flu include:

- Wash your hands frequently with soap and warm water or use alcohol based hand sanitizer.
- Cover your cough with a tissue or cough into your inner elbow and not into your hands.
- If you are sick stay home from work and if your child is sick keep them home for 7 days, or 24 hours after your symptoms go away – whichever is longer.
- Stay informed about the latest developments on the H1N1 flu by visiting www.mass.gov/dph.

As information develops, the Board will pass on the latest information to those who will be working the problem, such as schools, public health personnel, nurses and emergency health organizations.

By all means make up your own list of precautions and find the best information for protecting your self and family. Some groups such as pregnant women are highly susceptible and such information is already available on the Mass Department of Public Health web site and at the National Center for Disease Control. If a citation does not work on whatever device you use to get information, try your favorite search procedure and use MADPH, just DPH, CDC and FLU as key words.

All beaches open this week

This week, all Cohasset beaches are open for swimming. All six sampling locations and recreational swimming areas came back with results well within the state limits.

The Board of Heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming. If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water beaches are closed or a geometric mean over 35 colonies of enterococci spread over a five week period.

Bassing Beach, the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach and Black Rock beach are tested weekly during the summer. The results are posted on the Department of Public Health's website. Testing results for all sampling stations are available on the Department of Public Health website dating back to the summer of 2002.

In an effort to improve communication about beach closures the Board of Health will be using a flag system as well as updating the office's voicemail with the results of the water testing each Wednesday afternoon.

A yellow flag flown in the harbor and a red flag with a crossed out swimmer will be posted at Sandy Beach will indicate no swimming.

The most common health effects related to swimming in polluted waters could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastro-intestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers swallowing water.

For more information on beach closures, please contact the board of health at (781) 383-4116.

Quarterly real estate activity report

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the quarter period from April, 2009 through June, 2009 stood at $976 million. This represents a 29 percent decline from the comparable period last year. The total number of 3,641 deeds recorded during the period was down 6 percent from the previous year's April to June quarter. The average sale price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) fell to $469,131, a 16 percent decrease from the same quarter in 2008. This decline reflects the lower prices generated by the foreclosure sale market as well as the result of fewer higher end commercial transaction closings.

Total mortgage value for the quarter stood at just over $14.4 billion, over twice the value reported for the same quarter of 2008. It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Journal promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Is towing 'un-Cohasset?'

Selectmen are looking at parking restrictions and signage. At least one selectman, Ralph Dormitzer, thinks that the threat of towing is "un-Cohasset-like." Here is what some of our readers think. This sign is on Border Street by the lobster pound.

So be it

As with so many things, this kind of public decision should not be subject to personal preference.

Cohasset is very special, and friendly, but not above the law. If illegal parking needs a towing sanction, so be it.

— Agnes McCann

Line has to be drawn

I think you need to distinguish between strict parking rules and the enforcement of those rules from how the town welcomes tourists and visitors.

Parking is a convenience and a safety issue. Unfortunately, many will take advantage as long as they can get away with it. This violates the rights of those who abide by the rules and in many cases creates traffic safety issues. I do not think that a strict enforcement of rules reflects on how the town respects residents or tourists — in fact, I feel the law-abiding citizens respect such an approach. Strict enforcement is best for everyone and assures safety in our town. As long as there is ample parking for law-abiding citizens, towing and other enforcement methods I feel are fair and acceptable. In addition, there are certain rights that residents of this town should have. Parking at Sandy Beach, Government Island and Parker Avenue are allowed with a resident parking sticker and should be enforced as such. Otherwise, those who pay for permits and taxes in this town will be excluded from parking by those who are not and are violating town laws.

Because many take advantage, a line has to be drawn as to how permissive we can be.

— Roger Crafts

Tow or fine

I don't believe parking signage is unfriendly at all. How else are people going to know about parking restrictions? I think we should tow or a fine the same as Sandy Beach for cars that don't have a sticker or a card for the Lightkeepers parking.

Townspeople have to buy a sticker to use the towns parking areas. Why should outsiders get away free?

— Merle Brown

Towing is OK

Appropriate parking control throughout Cohasset should have towing of illegally parked cars as an essential element — particularly where such illegal parking poses a hindrance to the access of emergency vehicles, such as firefighting vehicles, police, rescue, etc. to the area in question. Towing plus a $50 fine appropriate.

For areas such as Sandy Beach, Government Island and similar, especially where parking is restricted to Town residents who have paid for permitted parking, the violation fines should be significant enough to be an effective deterrent — such as $50. Revenues from illegal parking fines should be sufficient to cover the cost of enforcement.

One change from existing parking permits that should be considered would recognize that most residents have two vehicles and should not have to pay twice to get both vehicles permitted. Current practice often causes nagging, "un-Cohasset like" inconveniences re availability of a permitted vehicle for going to the beach or the trash transfer station.

— Richard E. Brooks

Just ticket

Tow if the space is badly needed for legitimate parkers, as often at Ed Young parking lot, otherwise just ticket.

— Murray Campbell

Thinking ahead

Whatever decision is made on this issue, it should be made not only to take care of the present needs but even more so to anticipate on what is likely to happen going forward so as to offer a sustainable solution to the problem. With all efforts now being deployed to attract visitors and new businesses to Cohasset, it is reasonable to assume that the parking problems all over town are going to be exacerbated rather than diminish, so it seems only prudent and smart to go ahead and implement limited parking measures and tow-away zones before the situation gets worse.

I cherish the quaint and friendly atmosphere of the village and I think that such policies would not only not change the atmosphere of Cohasset but preserve it.

— Alain Pinel

Handicap spots

I feel strongly that the strong enforcement of the no parking without permit in handicapped spots (and the striped spots next to the handicapped spots) should be a priority.

Regarding other no parking issues.... Many people seem to demonstrate that no parking signs are for others, not them.

— Marty Grassie

Town-wide

Parking all over Cohasset is a problem, but I feel that there are only so many spaces. If there is a parking violation the car should be towed. Last week a number of spaces were taken up by people jumping off the bridge. I also disagree with parking on side walks or the two merchants who park in front of there stores on South Main, the parking is for the customers no the merchants!

— Roger Q. Hill

Last resort

Towing is a very drastic measure and I would be opposed to it except as a last resort. Perhaps the fine of $25 is insufficient and the increase to $50 may be inadequate. If not illegal, a substantially larger fine of perhaps $100 with proper posting as such and the further threat of towing also on the sign may be sufficient deterrent. In years past, I recall the need to park in that area when my boat was moored in the harbor or winter stored in the boat yard.

I do not understand the issue of function parking but the placard referred to in the article makes sense when it comes to enforcement by Town Police.

— Donald E Enos

Stiff fine

I think illegally parked cars at Sandy Beach, Cunningham Bridge, Government Island and anyone parked on a sidewalk should be towed. It may well be "unfriendly", but it's either that or a really stiff parking fine.

— Jim Contis

Whatever it takes

What? Is requiring Cohasset residents and visitors to obey the law "UNFRIENDLY"?

If we have these parking problems, we need to clean them up! I agree with Karen (Quigley) and the Chief. Ralph (Dormitzer) is being soft on this, and I can't understand why. Perhaps a little "unfriendliness" would keep some of the riff-raff day-trippers out of Cohasset.

Access to the Lightkeeper's House parking area should be limited to guests at events taking place there. If there is no scheduled event, I don't know what the rules are, or should be. Good question.

Border Street bridge jumpers should have NO access to parking in the area PERIOD! They are breaking the law to begin with. Tow them, ticket them, fine them.

Whatever it takes. They are a menace to themselves and everyone else who drives on Border Street.

— Nancy Garrison

Safety first

There are areas of Cohasset where it is hazardous to park a car. I think it is very "Cohasset" to respect public safety and tow any car that endangers the public.

— Doug Mclellan

Eco-friendly

Some eco-solutions — in order of preference and depending on one's physical mobility — include: walking, biking, carpooling, a town shuttle, and if we must drive our own cars, so be it. I would make a stronger attempt to bike to work at First Parish UU if I could be confident that I would not encounter so many drivers who still think they can drive and talk on their cell phones at the same time. The tempo of Cohasset as distinct from my previous tempo of New York City is slowly teaching me NOT to multi-task. It's a lesson worth sharing and one that can save lives.

I'm hoping for the day when our problem is where to park all the bikes…

— Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull

Excessive

I tend to agree with Mr. Dormitzer, seems a little excessive.... I agree, the Lightkeepers Hall probably needs some parking protocol but I don't think we need a bunch of signs tarnishing our small town New England charm... Perhaps replacing the old, worn out signs would make sense but lets not get carried away with the rest....

— Joanne Nardo

Positive signage

• If we have not already done this, I recommend that we find out a broad array of creative strategies and solutions that other tourist towns have used to solve this problem. Surely there are some really good ones, out there!

• Some research was done, within the last two or three years, by one of the wilderness advocacy programs (perhaps the Appalachian Mountain Club? not sure...) that proved that people's behavior is most positive when you post POSITIVE signage rather than the negative. For example, "Please park in marked spaces only," rather than "Don't park here or you will be towed." Perhaps we need to make clearer what the alternatives are, when there are no obvious parking spaces left. This may sound weak to some readers, yet the research shows that positive messaging gets better results.

• Town Selectman and Sustainable Cohasset member, Clark Brewer tried long and hard to get the Town interested in a shuttle bus service. If summer parking on Government Island (and perhaps other popular summer attractions in Cohasset) is a problem, then maybe we need a shuttle bus that can quickly and easily transport residents and visitors from appropriate parking spaces to desirable destinations with little or no parking. An investment in (at least seasonal) shuttle service would pay off in reduced need for police officers to cover "problem" areas and to deal with irate (if sometimes guilty) people who got their cars towed.

— Kathryn Earle

Effective signage

Because so many people think "the rules" just don't apply to them strong effective signage should be placed where necessary.

Deteriorated mortar in Sailing Club wall

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

An Interesting Diversion – Let's make quick change of topics from paving to something entirely different. In the summer of 2007 the Town engaged a contractor to repair the harbor wall from the Veteran's Memorial to Lawrence Wharf and in front of the Cohasset Sailing Club. The repairs have passed the test of time for all areas except for the wall in front of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

At this location the mortar that held the cap stones in place had completely deteriorated. (A cap stone is a stone in top row of stones on a wall.) The mortar that should have held the granite blocks in place became soft and crumbly and was almost all washed out by the action of the seawater. On Tuesday of this week the masonry subcontractors from Rockport came back to re-mortar the capstones.

We spoke with the masonry contractor to find out why the mortar crumbled so quickly. One theory is that the sand that was used to mix the mortal for this small section of wall may have been road sand which has salt in it, as opposed to mason's sand. Salt may substantially reduce the strength of mortar. Just to be safe, we made sure that the new mortar was made with clean sand. We plan to keep a watch on the new work to see how well it holds up over time.

Now About Paving – Last week we said that Nichols Road was next on the list to be paved and that it would be done this week. Well, guess what? That was not to be. The paving contractor's crew started on Monday raising the structures on the one side of Nichols Road. They are scheduled to return Wednesday to continue raising the structures. Then, they must raise the structures on all of the side roads on Nichols. All in all, there are a lot of structures to be raised before Nichols can be paved. The paving contractor is unwilling to commit to a precise schedule until everything (and we mean everything) is ready for paving. They don't want to be put into the position where they can't work at their maximum paving efficiency once they arrive.

Similarly, the structures around the Common and on North Main Street are being raised by the contractor who did the road grinding. This in moving along, but is a bit tedious and will probably take most of this week. Again like on Nichols, we can't get a firm paving schedule until the road is absolutely ready for paving. Our goal is to get both Nichols and Main Street paved as soon as we possibly can.

Now, let's talk a bit more about how the structures are raised. If you remember, all of the structures (manholes, water and sewer shutoffs, etc.) were removed from the road so that the road could be ground. The holes below the structures were covered with steel plates before grinding and base paving. Also remember, that the location of all of the plated over holes were marked with stakes just beyond the edge of the road. Field crews then transferred those marks to the roadway to show where the buried structures area as shown in the photo.

Salt may substantially reduce the strength of mortar. Just to be safe, we made sure that the new mortar was made with clean sand.

The marked areas are excavated and the top covers are reinstalled at the height of the final paving as shown in the accompanying photos. These raised structures have been spray painted in a vibrant color to make them stand out. Once again, until the final paving is done, the road surface will be an obstacle course. The utmost care should be taken when driving on any road with raised structures.

Celebrity dreams and revenge fantasies

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

The other night I dreamed I was at a party chatting with Steve Carell, because apparently the two of us were buddies. This is what I love about dreams. A major celebrity starts hanging around with you, and you don't think, "Wait, I've never met Kevin Youkilis. Why would he be here in Tedeschi's asking me for hitting advice?" You just totally roll with it.

"You're staying patient at the plate," you say, "but I think you have to give away the outside strike and just pull the ball till you're out of this slump." Kevin is nodding thoughtfully as he pours his coffee, and in the back of your mind you're wondering how in the world you got into this conversation but you don't let on, because the fact is that with your extensive Little League background you really know what you're talking about, and Kevin can see that. The situation is not that crazy.

"We should go pick up Madonna," he says. "It's getting late."

"No duh," you say, because you just remembered that Madonna is your sister.

I wish I could be so calm and unfazed by insanity in real life. In dreams you never call a time out to regroup or to question a premise, even when it involves swimming up into the air or snogging Jordan's Queen Noor. You're living the moment — acting in the scene and watching safely from the audience at the same time, as fascinated as anyone else to hear what will come out of your mouth next. It's what I imagine being Joe Biden is like.

When conscious, though, it doesn't take much to send me off the rails. For example I usually run at night, because during the day I'm either working or at the dump or busy napping. The down side is that I can't see a thing, because apparently Cohasset's street lamp budget is about $15 annually. Lights are sprinkled randomly around town like stars in an especially dim constellation, and they often go dark when you get near them, as if they can sense your approach. So I'll be running along on the pitch black sidewalk, wondering with every stride whether my foot will again find solid ground, and some prankster will get the hilarious idea to let out a primal scream at me as he drives past. It's a surprisingly common thing, yet just infrequent enough to make me wet my running shorts every time.

The prank phone call is yet another fun childhood activity completely ruined by technology.

In those few seconds of red-hot anger I have these elaborate revenge fantasies. I'm too nice to really hurt someone of course, even in my mind, so all I do is shoot out their rear tires using an imaginary shotgun. The car then weaves out of control, flips over and over and over, hits a tree and bursts into flames, which is unfortunate but hardly my fault, because had the driver been wearing his seatbelt and not cackling at me he never would have lost control like that. When the police and fire trucks arrive I explain exactly what happened, being careful to leave out any mention of the imaginary shotgun, and then I wait impatiently for Friday so I can read all about it in the Mariner-Voyeur. They get a few of the details wrong, naturally, because the reporter interviewed a handsome but unreliable, vengeful witness at the scene. For instance the hapless driver wasn't actually well known for his nudism and communist sympathies. Not even close. But that's the sorry state of small-town journalism for you.

The truth is that every time a mischievous youth's unexpected scream causes me to soil myself, it's the karma train pulling into the station. As kids, my friend Davy and I were the kings of prank phone calls. And just like Richard Nixon we somehow lacked the presence of mind to not go out of our way to record our misdeeds, so that we could be entertained by them for hours later. Not surprisingly these tapes were discovered at some point and we were threatened with impeachment and hard spankings with the back of a hairbrush, but it had been an amazingly prolific run.

The prank phone call is yet another fun childhood activity completely ruined by technology. Some try to keep the practice alive in the caller ID era, but I have to say these kids make Davy and me look like a couple of brilliant criminal minds. Some day the anonymous drive-by scream may be a thing of the past as well. In the meantime, guys, beware my neutronium-powered laser cannon.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. He once read that his life may simply be the dream of some higher being of incomprehensible intelligence, but if that were the case he's convinced he'd be better at chess.

Three contractor cleanups so far

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

KARI O'DONNELL

These never-ending storms brought unusual wind patterns and sea conditions resulting in excessive seaweed and flotsam washing up on Sandy Beach.

June and July not only felt cool and wet – they were record setting Miserable! June and July 2009, were the coolest June/July combo since 1903! July '09 was the sixth wettest July on record with over 10 inches of rain. Boston did not experience one day in June or July over 90 degrees. This is an extremely rare phenomenon — it has happened just five times since 1881.*

These never-ending storms brought unusual wind patterns and sea conditions resulting in excessive seaweed and flotsam washing up on Sandy Beach.

The Trustees and employees of the Sandy Beach Association work tirelessly throughout the spring and summer to clean and maintain the beach for everyone to enjoy throughout the summer. Every spring our one-time annual beach clean up brings our beach back to its sandy splendor through raking, burying and removing the accumulated seaweed from the winter (approved by the Conservation Commission.) This removed seaweed is recycled in Scituate at The Green Connection and processed into organic compost. In addition, our young Beach Maintenance Workers rake the beach daily for trash and seaweed.

The unusual weather patterns of summer 2009 required the Sandy Beach Association to clean the beach using contractors and heavy equipment three times versus our budgeted one time. The Sandy Beach Association receives no funds from taxes or all-facility stickers. The funds used to clean, maintain and staff the beach are sourced through private fundraising in our annual spring mailing.

Traditionally, the citizens of Cohasset are generous and supportive of this cause. We see donations of all levels and are grateful for every dollar! Thank you all who have donated already! However, due to the economy we have seen a decline in giving for the 2009 season — which to a certain level was expected. However, our three contractor clean-ups wasn't expected!

We simply ask if you have enjoyed the beach this summer — taken a swim, enjoyed a picnic, used the bathhouse, read a book – you consider a donation to the Sandy Beach Association. We will run an ad in the Mariner the week after Labor Day thanking all of our contributors for this summer. Please consider adding your name to our donor list. Contributions can be sent to SBA, PO Box 285, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Thank you to all! Lets enjoy some August sunshine!

The Cohasset Historical Society is looking into reproducing the Cohasset bicentennial flag to sell as a fundraiser for the society. The flag was adopted by the Board of Selectmen in October 1969 and the town retains the right to its reproduction.

Flying high

Town flag could make a comeback

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Above the seal is a scroll with the word "Cohasset." Underneath is the year 1770, the year Cohasset broke from Hingham and became its own town, as well as two anchors.

Cohasset may not have an official town bird or flower or cookie. But, it does have an official town flag.

Designed and manufactured as nearly 40 years ago as part of the town's Bicentennial Celebration, the town flag could be making a comeback.

The Cohasset Historical Society is looking into reproducing the flag to sell as a fundraiser for the society. In a letter to the Board of Selectmen, Historical Society President Kathy O'Malley requests permission from the town to replicate the Town Flag.

Adopted by the Board of Selectmen in October 1969 the town retains the right to its reproduction.

The flag has a blue design on a white background. The central portion is a reproduction of the Cohasset town seal. Above the seal is a scroll with the word "Cohasset." Underneath is the year 1770, the year Cohasset broke from Hingham and became its own town, as well as two anchors. The two anchors at either side of the seal symbolize the hope of the future, according to published reports from late 1969.

According to newspaper clippings from the era archived at the Historical Society, the official flag was flown for the first time on Jan. 1, 1970 at the opening of the yearlong bicentennial celebration and was flown at subsequent bicentennial events throughout the year as well as other special town events in later years.

The fact that there even was a Town Flag was brought to the attention of the Historical Society through a Mariner letter to the editor in November from Marjorie Ritter, who co-chaired the effort for the Bicentennial Executive Committee.

"[The flag] is quite handsome," O'Malley said. The Historical Society has two flags, one that has been kept at the Maritime Museum and one on loan from A.J. Antoine, who was the vice chairman of the Bicentennial Committee.

According to a Boston Globe article from early November 1969, Bicentennial Executive Committee chairman Burt Pratt said the official town flag was selected from sketches, submitted by several artists and is a composite design of the best features from the sketches.

The Historical Society has slowly been putting the pieces together to launch the fundraiser. The original manufacturer of the flags, Heritage Flag Co. of Hingham is out of business, but O'Malley said they aim to team up with Cohasset-based Eagle Flag.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said there will be an agenda item on the Town Flag at the Board of Selectmen's meeting scheduled for Monday, Aug. 24.

About the Town Seal

The scene with its ledges and breakers illustrates the meaning of the word Cohasset — "A long rocky place." Minot Lighthouse and White Head are shown with two old fishing schooners at the entrance of the harbor. The three buildings, Town Hall, original Osgood School (once located where the police and fire stations are today), and First Parish Meeting House, symbolize the three functions of town life — the municipal, the educational, and the religious.

Town seal became a statutory requirement under Chapter 389 of the Acts of 1898. The official seal was to be provided for the use of the Town Clerk and was to include the name of the town, the date of incorporation and a general design approved by the Selectmen.

Generally, the raised town seal is used on papers that need to be certified as true copies of official records. In the clerk's office, the most common of these would be copies of birth, death and marriage records, copies of town meeting votes, copies of Board of Appeals decisions and other required documents. However, the town seal is not used on regular correspondence or memos.

The town seal adds security and prestige to the community. The Cohasset town seal was adopted Nov. 5, 1898.

The Town Clerk's office has to be careful with whom it gives permission to use the town seal because any publication which bears the town seal has the possibility to be considered by the public as being sponsored by the town. However, complete control is difficult as there is no guarantee that the person receiving correspondence will not reproduce the seal from the letterhead.

National Grid performing gas main work

National Grid recently began construction work on its natural gas infrastructure between numbers 38 and 184 Atlantic Ave. Construction will continue through the first week in September.

As part of National Grid's ongoing infrastructure upgrade, approximately 1,860 feet of gas main will be installed. This upgrade project, which will improve system reliability and safety, is part of the company's overall plan to invest more than $200 million in gas main replacements across its service area through March 2010.

National Grid's contractor will perform the work between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Streets will remain open for the duration of the project.

The company will make every effort to minimize disruption to homes and businesses along the route and will employ traffic management plans and police details as appropriate. The required work will be conducted in close coordination with town officials and public safety representatives.

Customers can expect a brief service interruption upon completion of the work, as homes and businesses are connected to the new main. Residents will be notified prior to any necessary construction on private property.

Cohasset biker ninth in National Championship road race

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Talk about a trip.

Cohasset's Emerson Oronte certainly can.

Oronte, a sophomore at the University of Colorado, Boulder, recently trekked from Cohasset to Bend, Oregon to compete in the U-23 Road Race National Championships.

Along with five teammates from his Independent Fabrication/Lionettes team, Oronte drove across the nation in a 1997 Suburban, toting a trailer behind.

"Six of us drove out," Oronte said. "I must have missed something, because only two of us drove home. There are things that are more enjoyable than driving six straight days. You get that road hypnosis driving through the cornfields in Kansas. I made it home safe and sound."

"It was brutal out there, a race of attrition. It was about 105 degrees. After five laps at least half the riders had stopped riding."

Still, Oronte performed well in the race, finishing ninth of 118 riders, despite stifling conditions that shortened the race. Only 44 of the starters finished.

"It was a 17-mile course with seven laps," Oronte said. "It was brutal out there, a race of attrition. It was about 105 degrees. After five laps at least half the riders had stopped riding, so the race official decided to cut it to 103 miles. He felt you couldn't finish a race with no riders."

Oronte was glad to finish.

"My goal going into the day was to finish," he said. "In the first lap I got into a group of 20 guys. We pushed the tempo for about 90 miles. On the last lap of the course everything blew up."

During the race, Oronte did everything he could to stay hydrated.

"On every lap there's a feed zone where teammates can give you food and water," he said. "Every lap I took a bottle to drink and dumped water on my head. Some teammates had bags of ice. I just nodded at them with a blank stare (and took them). When it was over I know I had

Late nights a new sport - again

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Recently I've picked up on a new sport that's pretty famous around these parts.

This is new for this season anyway.

After being away in Florida for a few years, I only had a select number of games to watch, including the playoffs, when I expect to be up late.

I did have the Rays available, and went to see them play, which was a great experience at the time, when you consider four tickets and food cost about as much as parking at Fenway, but when I went to the Rays, it was to see the Sox. Oh yeah, parking was free too.

I wonder how much things have changed there now that the Rays are good.

It was the same with the Angels before they started getting good.

You could actually buy $4 seats in a family section at one time, and there were always more Red Sox fans than Angels fans.

I'm pretty sure success has changed that as well.

But back to the problem here.

I have been trying to change my schedule and go to bed earlier than I used to.

Normally I am a night person.

Honestly, I hate mornings.

There's nothing on TV, morning drive time radio annoys me, and in the winter, well lets not go there.

The past week was just a killer though.

Two really late extra-inning games in three nights was tough, especially the pacing around when the pitching grew thin later in the games.

I think I also found I might be psychic.

Right when A-Rod came to bat in the 15th of that 2-0 loss, I said to my wife that I had a bad feeling, and we all know how that turned out (if you don't, just guess what the worst would be and you'd be right).

The carpet is worn down pretty good from the pacing.

I also predicted a win Monday night, even saying that the Sox would get to Detroit's Edwin Jackson.

They did. They won, although it was closer than it should have been.

See I'm psychic.

With that in mind, I am hereby

The solid, perfect shot lures us to this game

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Why do we play golf? There are probably as many answers as there are golfers.

We come in all sizes, shapes, ages and colors.

We all chase that elusive birdie. We stride for that sweet swing and perfect drive. We chase that rarity, the hole-in-one, and every time we tee it up we feel this could be the day we shoot our best round ever, breaking 100, or 90, or 80 and, for some, even 70.

And during this single-minded pursuit we become our own worst enemies; we are self-loathing and never satisfied.

Even when we post our best score ever, we think about the record and focus on the shots we did not execute and forget about those magnificent pars and birdies we made.

As Bagger Vance said, "Golf is a game you can't win, you can only play."

The fun of golf is not the destination, walking off the 18th green with a good round. It is the journey. The tee shot over water, the impossible chip, the unstoppable downhill putt and the buried lie in the bunker. These are the thrills of this game.

Every course you play, there is a shot you remember, one that you savor or one you re-play in your head time and time again.

Here are a few of our favorites:

At this week's Course of the Week, it is the ninth hole at Green Harbor Golf Club in Marshfield. It's a short par-4, only 318 yards. However what fronts the green and that putting surface looks razor thin when you're lining up your approach shot. You live and die with this swing.

At South Shore Country Club in Hingham, my favor shot is the approach to the 12th hole, a moderate par-4. I usually have between 140 and 170 in depending on my drive. It is all carry. Many times an approach shot will hit the front of the green and spin back down a huge hill and usually come to rest in a divot of some other unfortunate golfer who had the same misfortune. To make matters worse, many times you can't even see the flagstick for your next shot.

Widow's Walk has so many live-or-die shots. It's like playing Russian roulette. At least one of these many heroic shots, if executed improperly, will lead to a huge number on the scorecard. My favorite here is the approach to the 13th hole. There is a bailout area down the right side and you can get up and down for a par, or bogey at worse. But the shot over water is a test of courage.

The third hole at Easton Country Club is another that gets in my head. This par-4 is only 270 yards, but there is water fronting the green. The smart play is an iron off the tee, but how close do you want to play to the wetlands? Oh, I'll second-guess myself for the remaining 15 holes whether I did the right thing off the tee.

The 16th hole at the Jones Course at The Pinehills in Plymouth is another that haunts us. It's a dogleg to the right. If you miss it right, your ball disappears in an abyss of trouble. You can be unmanly and play it safe, but the gambler in me wants to bite off as much of the dogleg as I dare, the perfect risk and reward shot.

Another Plymouth hole that gives me trouble is the eighth on the Bob Jones nine at Crosswinds. It's 187 yards over water and then over sand to a putting green. It's a hole you never tire of playing.

When I'm fortunate enough to play LaBaron Hills in Lakeville, I simply stand on the second tee and offer a prayer. There is water to the left and high fescue to the right. There is plenty of fairway, you just can't see it. Plus, if you don't hit a good drive, forget about making par here.

How many times when you play Pembroke you got off to a good start on the par-5 first hole and the short par-4 second hole. Then you stand on the third tee feeling pretty good. But they you set up. You see water fronting the green and to the left. To the right is more trouble. You have a better chance hitting the Lottery than hitting this green.

There is plenty of room for your tee shot on No. 15 at Atlantic Country Club in Plymouth. But the approach looks simple, just a short iron. But you know there is no room for error and you are done if you hit it thin or fat. So you take a deep breathe, think about the best iron you ever hit and prepare to fire.

That feeling you have in the pit of your stomach is why we play golf.

Call it 'hooked on golf'

Former Red Sox pitchers on the 1975 AL pennant winning squad, Luis Tiant and Bill Lee, were reunited last Wednesday for a round of golf at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy.

They were there to play with the two highest bidding groups from the "Swing For Diabetes" Tournament.

"As you can imagine, Bill Lee was at his best with stories about anything and everything including a running monologue with comments such as; seeing his partner duck-hook a drive into the thick rough saying, 'If I had a curve ball like that, I would have won every game I pitched,'" said one observer following the group.

Tee to Green

Turning pro

Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea Golf Club is turning professional.

Parziale told MGA officials that he wouldn't be available for any Massachusetts team events this fall because he is headed south on Sunday to prepare to play in two Tarheel Tour events, one in North Carolina and another in Georgia.

There were plenty of winner's at last week's Junior Golf Extravaganza at Widow's Walk Golf Course in Scituate. Director of Golf Bob Sanderson and his staff did a remarkable job introducing the game to several youngsters.

In the Introductory Junior Golf contest, the winners, by categories, were: Driving, Sean Tobin, Ben Klingler, Emily Whelan, Lauren Knight. Iron Play, Jim Grozier and Jane Meyrick. Pitch Shots, Sean Tobin and Michael Rosen, Lag Putting: Ben Klingler and Jane Meyrick, Putting Accuracy, Sean Tobin and Michael Rosen, Chipping: Teddy Good and Emily Whelan.

In the Intermediate Division, the winners were Stephen DeMatteo, Colin Devin for Driving; Greg Hunnefeld and Colin Devin for Iron Play, Louis Benoit, Greg Hunnefeld and Billy Russell for Pitch Shots; Jonathan Rufino and Colin Devin for Lag Putting, Louis Benoit and Shannon Murphy for Putting Accuracy, and Stephen DeMatteo and Colin Devin for Chipping.

A walk in the park

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

If you have never teed it up at Green Harbor Golf Club in Marshfield, it's your loss.

GREEN HARBOR GOLF CLUB

It is not the greatest golf course you'll even play, meaning it's not a championship caliber course such as TPC Boston in Norton or Pleasant Valley in Sutton. But it is special is so many ways.

First of all, it is probably the only legitimate 18-hole course in New England that does not allow drive carts.

You can walk and carry your clubs or you can take a pull cart. But forget about those noisy gas guzzling carts that ruin courses with nasty cart paths, ubiquitous signs informing ignorant golfers that they can't drive their carts two feet away from the putting greens.

Also absent are those bare spots near greens where spinning golf cart wheels tore away nice green turf from around the greens.

And the greens, you can play all over the world and never putt on greens that you find at this hidden jewel.

It's called Vesper Velvet bent grass, developed by the late Manny Francis, a hall of fame green keeper who created this special grass in his turf farm.

The Francis family purchased the property in the mid-1960s and built this golf course in 1971 and it has been one of the most popular tracks on the South Shore since then.

What makes Green Harbor so enjoyable is that the beginning golfer is not overwhelmed and prepared to give up the game after a round here. The fairways are wide and the landing areas are generous.

Yes, there are water hazards to negotiate, but they are not so difficult that only the most skilled golfers can succeed.

The advanced golfers will be tested here as well as the seaside breezes play havoc with lofting approaches to the putting surfaces. Over the years, no one has beat up this course. The standing course record is only a 4-under 67.

For many years it has been the site for the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association's Girls' High School Championship.

You begin with four par-4s. The first is a solid par-4, a strong 375-yarder from the blue tees with fairway bunkers on the right side and green side bunkers left and right of the putting surface. The second is 320 yards without too much trouble and then the third is 350 yards with water fronting the green. The fourth is a neat hole, a sharp dogleg that measures 300 yards from the blue tees, but long hitters can go for broke and aim for the green.

The toughest hole on the front is the seventh, a 537-yard par 5 that offers plenty of fairway.

The back nine begins with a very difficult par-4 that is 350-yards from the blue tees. It demands an accurate drive and a precise approach. Trouble lurks everywhere.

Our favorite hole on the back nine is the aptly numbered 13th. It is only 280 yards from the blue tees and you just want to kill it off the tee, but often times, this hole kills you.

Oronte ninth in National Championship road race

heat exhaustion. I was cramped until midnight. I couldn't eat anything and could barely drink."

One thing that had Oronte thinking was the quality of some of the riders in the race.

"There's a big jump in talent from the juniors to the U-23," he said. "You start getting kids who have decided this is their career. I know one kid rides on a European pro team and could be riding the Tour-De-France next year. I see that and think, this will be fun. I went out thinking, cross the line and it will be fun."

Oronte was familiar with some of the competition, and knew he had to be on his game.

"When you're in a group of riders, guys I've read about in magazines, I know I always have to be on my toes," he said. "One crash and the race is over. If you forget to eat or drink, you're done. When you're riding you can have a feeling of feeling good, but you have to keep your head on."

Before the final stop in Oregon, the team stopped and raced a few days in Chicago and also did a stage race in Bend.

According to Cohasset's Trish Morse, who was there with her son Nate, who rode in the junior division and finished fourth in the criterion race there, Oronte's performance was an inspiration.

"Emerson had an amazing race," Morse said. "It was heroic and amazing. I was excited to be able to watch him. I saw him in the feed zone and was so happy to see him in there. He beat a lot of guys who were really good national racers. Ninth doesn't sound fabulous, but it really was. There was a heat wave in the Northwest and coming from the Northeast with the cool weather we've had and the altitude, it was incredible. Those were the best young guys in the country."

For Nate Morse, he'll be back in action at the end of August when the Cyclocross season begins.

He's already been recruited to a big-name team for this year and is looking forward to the new equipment and uniforms, and of course the sport that brings together road, dirt and obstacles in one race.

predicting the Red Sox will make the playoffs this year. They're in with the wildcard and then, well I'll make that prediction later.

If you're looking for something fun, keep in mind there's the NFL Punt, Pass and Kick contest on Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon at Hingham's Lynch Field.

If you go, bring a birth certificate and a parent.

The contest is free, and winners can go a long way.

Speaking of the NFL, why is it that it always feels like the season just jumps on you. I flipped channels the other night and there were the Bills and Titans.

I knew they were playing, but it still just shocked the system to see football on TV again.

Now all I have to do is try to remember the next few Pats games don't count when I'm getting that late night feeling. I have a feeling tonight might be a late one.

Nah, I think I'll just stay up and enjoy.

Ovarian Cancer walk

Join Sheila Sullivan for her inaugural Changing The Tide On Ovarian Cancer walk in Cohasset, a 4-mile fundraiser walk to help raise awareness, remember someone you may have lost, or support someone who is battling this cancer. Seventy percent of the women, who are diagnosed with ovarian cancer, are diagnosed too late for effective treatment. Be a part of changing this statistic, because it's not about statistics; it's about women's lives.

The walk takes place Sunday, Sept. 13, at Cohasset Town Hall with registration at 11 a.m. and the walk begins at 1 p.m. Entry fee is $30 in advance or $35 on day of event. Participants, who raise or donate $100 or more by Sept. 1, will receive an official T-shirt.

All proceeds will benefit Ovations for the Cure's Research, Education and Outreach Initiatives

For further information e-mail Sheila at sheilasullivan1@yahoo.com or contact Charlie Roberts by phone at 508-655-5412 or email at charlie@ovatinsforthecure.org.

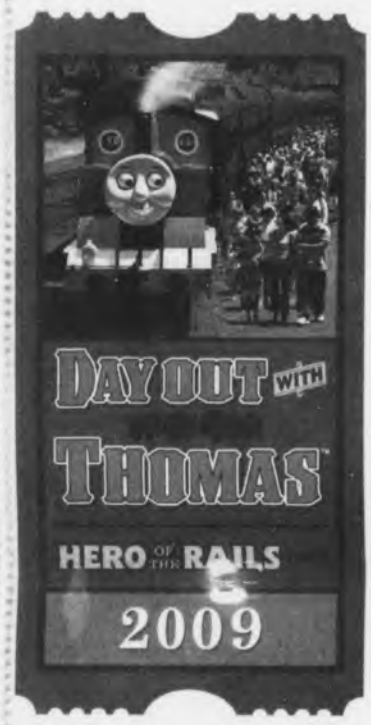
New rabbi, family move to area

Rabbi Shmuel and Shevy Bronstein, and their three children, have recently arrived in Hingham to establish a Chabad Center serving the entire Jewish community.

Rabbi Shmuel and Shevy have been living in Quincy and have recently moved to Hingham to attract the unaffiliated Jews of the South Shore through outreach work for the community. Hingham will be a central base for the surrounding towns of Scituate, Cohasset, Hull and Norwell.

Both Rabbi and Mrs. Bronstein have been involved in community outreach around the globe, from Europe to South Africa, before choosing the South Shore as their new home. They both have extensive experience in educational and religious activities.

The Bronsteins are available for classes, Friday Night dinners as well as holiday programs for children and the elderly throughout the year. Rabbi Shmuel and his wife Shevy offer authentic Judaism with love and warmth for every Jew.



They can be reached at 617- 850-5935, or via email at Rabbi@HQChabad.com

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
AUG. 24, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Despite your Aries penchant for wanting to tackle a problem head-on, you might want to take a little more time to see how a current situation develops. It could surprise you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Taking on the role of peacemaker in a disruptive environment is a challenge. But you can do it. Just continue to have the same faith in yourself that so many others have in you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although your work schedule keeps you busy, you should make time to start preparing for that important upcoming family event you'll want to celebrate in a special way.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Home is where the Moon Child wants to be early in the week. But by week's end, a chance to travel raises her or his excitement level, and that of the lucky person who gets to go along.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be careful not to be a copycat when dealing with someone who uses unfair or even unkind methods to reach a goal. As always, do the right thing the right way, and you'll win in the end.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An offer could have many good things attached to it that are not apparent at first glance, including a chance to move into another career area. You might want to check out its possibilities.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) With responsibilities surging both in the workplace and in the home, it's important to prioritize how you deal with them. Be patient. Pressures will begin to ease starting early next week.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A difficult workplace situation begins to ease, but there are still matters that need to be dealt with before it's fully resolved. There's also a more positive turn in domestic relationships.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fil! each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Bowzer speaks the 'Truth'

Do wop fans get ready for Music Circus party

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

There will be a Sha Na Na reunion at the South Shore Music Circus on Sunday during Bowzer's Original Doo Wop Party when headliner and host Jon "Bowzer" Bauman shares the stage with longtime friend and former band mate Lennie Baker, who grew up in Whitman and now makes his home in Halifax.

Bauman, whose muscle-flexing antics helped him stand out on the retro rock group's eponymous 1970s television variety show, now fronts his own rock band, "The Stingrays." These days, when he is not performing, the magna cum laude graduate of Columbia University is usually hard at work on "Truth in Music," the committee he chairs within the Vocal Group Hall of Fame. With Bauman's leadership, "Truth in Music" bills have been passed in 33 states to protect artists from identity theft and consumers from deception and fraud. On the telephone last week, the 61-year-old Brooklyn, N.Y., native was eager to tell Town Commons readers about everything from the show he is bringing to Cohasset to his 13 years with Sha Na Na and his government lobbying on behalf of vintage recording artists.

Bauman: Doo wop is a street corner harmony that began in the 1950s, or maybe earlier, and was defined by the use of nonsense syllables like sha na na na and yip, yip, yip. Doo wop is derived from jazz scat singing and usually involves falsetto voices singing lead.

Town Commons: Who's coming to Sunday's Doo Wop Party at the Music Circus?

Bauman: We've got a great show planned with Gene Chandler, the Duke of Earl, known for his "Duke of Earl;" Herb Reed & The Platters, with hits like "The Great Pretender," "My Prayer," and "Twilight Time;" Shirley Allston Reeves, former lead singer of The Shirelles, whose best-known hits include "Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow," "Soldier Boy," and "Tonight's The Night;" Jay Siegel & The Tokens, who'll be singing "The Lion Sleeps Tonight," "Portrait of My Love," and "Tonight I Fell In Love;" my group, The Stingrays; and, of course, Lennie Baker who will join me on "Blue Moon" and a couple of the other songs we did with Sha Na Na.

Town Commons: Sha Na Na still tours with founding member John "Jocko" Marcellino, a Quincy native and graduate of Braintree's Archbishop Williams High School, as well as Donny York and Screamin' Scott Simon. Would you ever rejoin the group?

Bauman: I would say it is not likely that I would ever go back with Sha Na Na, but I would also never rule anything out. We just lost "Dirty Dan" McBride last week. With Dan, Chico and Chris gone and Lennie not well, the group is really very different today." (Original lead guitarist Chris Donald, known as "Vinnie Taylor," died in 1974 and bassist David "Chico" Ryan passed away in 1998. Health concerns led to Baker's semi-retirement in 2000.) That said, if enough other early members were involved, I wouldn't rule out a return. I'm not completely averse to doing something with them.

Town Commons: What's the latest with the "Truth in Music" efforts?

Bauman: I was with New Hampshire Governor John Lynch in Concord on Wednesday for a "Truth In Music" bill signing that means we have now passed the law in all New England states. We've managed to get the bill passed in 33 states in just the past three years. This fall or perhaps winter, depending on the progress on health care, we'll start the effort on a federal level with the help of Congressman Mike Doyle (D-PA.) We're going to continue our state-by-state efforts, too, until we have all 50. The federal bill just strengthens that movement. A long, long time ago, I found myself on a bill with a phony Marvelettes group. I said then and there this will never happen again and I had it put in my rider that I would not work with these kinds of groups. I'm very pleased that just since we started "Truth in Music," bookings for impostor groups have gone down about 90 percent.

Bowzer's Original Doo Wop Party will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, on Aug. 16. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-745-3000, or go online at themusiccircus.org.

Movie review

Streep, Adams whip up a winning recipe

Film Reviews
AL ALEXANDER

Julie & Julia (A-)

It's getting old hat herald ing the brilliance of Meryl Streep, but in "Julie & Julia," the grand dame cooks up one of her finest performances as the incomparable Julia Child.

How delicious: the gourmet actor portraying the gourmet chef. You'll savor every bite of it, too, as Streep adds more than a pinch of spice to director Nora Ephron's light and fluffy soufflé about two women satiating their hunger for meaningful lives through food.

That other gal, by the way, is the vastly less famous — and slightly less interesting — Julie Powell (Amy Adams), the young woman from Queens who in a year's time whipped up all 524 recipes in the Queen of Cuisine's seminal book, "Mastering the Art of French Cooking."

The popularity of the 2006 best-selling diary ("Julie & Julia: My Year of Cooking Dangerously") born from Powell's experiences, is no doubt the reason the film exists. But Powell is merely an appetizer for Streep's saucier main course.

She not only plays Julia Child, she becomes her. And it's quite a becoming turn, rich and substantial, the kind of acting that sticks to your ribs and fills the soul.

It's a credit, too, to Ephron, who uses some nifty tricks to create the illusion that the 5-foot-6 Streep stands every bit as tall as the 6-foot-2 Child. But ultimately it's Streep's ability to effectively impersonate the chef's distinctively haughty voice and jovial personality that so solidly sells the character.

It also doesn't hurt having her "Devil Wears Prada" co-star, Stanley Tucci, around to play Child's supportive husband, Paul, whose job with the U.S. diplomatic service brought Julia to Paris, the city where in her late 30s she finally discovered her life's calling.

Ephron, who also wrote the script, cleverly offers Child up as a sort of post-World War II Rocky, a woman who repeatedly defies the odds to emphatically answer her dozens of naysayers. Those detractors ranged from her snooty instructors at the world-famous Le Cordon Bleu, where she was the first American ever admitted, to the dozens of publishers who passed on "Mastering" before she finally found a taker 10 years after she and her two French cohorts wrote it.

Ephron also effectively evokes the time and place that was Paris in the 1950s, and thus making it the perfect backdrop for Paul's and Julia's inspiring, often-touching love affair.

Streep and Tucci are so charming together, it feels like a bit of a let-down whenever the story leaps forward to modern-day New York to check in on Julie's progress in whipping up those hundreds of recipes.

It's not Adams' fault that Julie pales in comparison to Julia. After all, who wouldn't with Streep around, as Adams no doubt learned after starring opposite her last year in "Doubt."

No, the real problem with Julie's side of the story comes from being just a little too cute, in a "Barefoot in the Park" sort of way, as she and her newlywed hubby (Chris Messina) try to adjust to married life in their tight little apartment located, ironically enough, directly above a cheesy pizzeria.

Blame that on Ephron, who essentially cuts and pastes bits and pieces from both Julie Powell's book and Child's posthumously published autobiography "My Life in France."

To her credit, Ephron does a surprisingly good job of juggling both women's stories, while also drawing some intriguing parallels between them.

And the similarities are downright uncanny: Both had extremely supportive husbands; both felt dissatisfied with the direction of their careers before discovering cooking; and both worked for the government, Julia for the OSS, Julie for an agency assisting people affected by 9-11 (her office cubicle depressingly overlooks ground zero).

The thing they share most, though, is their love of French food. And Ephron never fails to make it look absolutely delicious. At times you can practically smell the butter and onions sautéing.

You just wish Ephron had livened Julie up with a dash more seasoning, while also rendering the character a little less whinny and self-absorbed.

Lucky for Ephron, she has a huge talent like Adams around to make the neurotic, easily flustered Julie much easier to swallow.

You might even wind up loving her almost as much as you adore Julia, which is saying something.

And even if Ephron's concoction never fully rises as high as you hope, it ultimately leaves you feeling fat and happy. Heck, you may even want seconds. So dig in and be sure to pass the bouillabaisse.

Police chief leaving

Hussey returning to Boston police

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

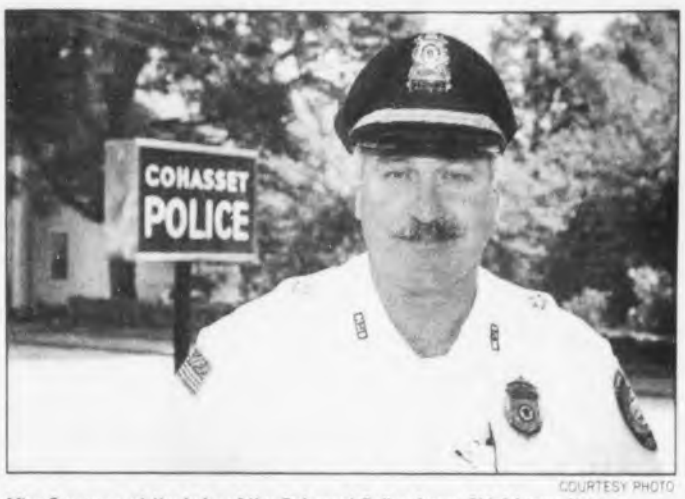
In October, Cohasset's police chief will be moving on.

After five years at the helm of the Cohasset Police force, Chief James Hussey announced late last week that he will return to the Boston Police Department to finish his law enforcement career where it first started.

Town officials and citizens were "disappointed" and "saddened" by the news of the impending departure of the Chief, but took heart in what they said were many positive changes during Hussey's tenure.

"It is like going back home," Hussey, 54, said in a telephone interview Friday. "I am very proud of what the people here have done...It was not an easy decision."

Hussey said he hopes to be able to finish his 29-year police career with the Boston Police Department where he got started in 1980. Both his brother and his late father served with the Boston Police.



Being chief in Cohasset has provided him with the opportunity to work closely with a community, Hussey said.

"It has been a fabulous job and I am proud of the men and women in the department," he said.

Hussey will return to Boston Police Department at the rank of captain, but does not yet know the specific position he will have.

Hussey held many positions within the Boston Police Department during his 24 years there and was directing the Boston

From pond to faucet

A tour of the water treatment plant

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Running water is essential to Cohasseters' everyday existence.

But, when the faucet is turned on, or the dishes washed, or the bath drawn do we think about where the water comes from?

At the King Street water treatment plant, the water, drawn from Lily Pond, goes through a multi-step process before being sent out into the distribution system and delivered to homes.

Although the water plant pulls the water from Lily Pond, the origin of the water source is about a mile away. The man-made Aaron River Reservoir was built in 1977 and is approximately eight times the size of Lily Pond. The two bodies of water are connected by Bound Brook. A control structure maintains the amount of flow from the reservoir to Lily Pond.

Locavores to gather at Holly Hill Aug. 29

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In the movement toward sustainability, growing, purchasing and eating local food is a key ingredient.

To highlight the bounty of local foods in the area, Sustainable Cohasset and Holly Hill Farm have teamed up to host a 'locavore' potluck dinner and a movie, the final movie in the "Films on the Farm" outdoor screening series.

The dinner and movie event will be held at the organic farm located at 236 Jerusalem Rd. on Saturday, Aug. 29.

This is the third locavore potluck dinner put on by Sustainable Cohasset. All attendees are asked to bring a dish made primarily from local ingredients.

A locavore, sometimes spelled localvore, is someone who is not only interested in how food is grown or produced (organic, grass fed), but also doesn't have to travel across the country (or world) to end up at the dinner table. Eating locally cuts down on the transportation and the barrels of oil used and carbon emissions resulting from the process – and food might actually taste better when it has not traveled as far.

One of the key questions that come up with locavores is how local is local – in town, within 100 miles, in state or in the US?

"For stalwart locavores 100 miles is the max, but I think people can have their own definition," said local sustainability advocate and member of Sustainable Cohasset, JoAnn Mirise. For her version of locavore, she tries to stay in New England.

"You can get pretty much everything except tropical fruits, citrus," Mirise said, adding over the past few years the availability of local foods has grown tremendously.

All beaches open this week

This week, all Cohasset beaches are open for swimming. All six sampling locations and recreational swimming areas came back with results well within the state limits.

The Board of Heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming. If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water beaches are closed or a geometric mean over 35 colonies of enterococci spread over a five week period.

Bassing Beach, the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach and Black Rock beach are tested weekly during the summer. The results are posted on the Department of Public Health's website. Testing results for all sampling stations are available on the Department of Public Health website dating back to the summer of 2002.

The most common health effects related to swimming in polluted waters could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastro-intestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers swallowing water.

For more information on beach closures, please contact the board of health at (781) 383-4116.

Police Beat

Rear-end accident on 3A

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A 2007 Lexus rear-ended a 2004 Volvo on Sunday afternoon shortly after 3 p.m. on Route 3A. The Volvo, owned and operated by a Needham woman, had slowed down in order to turn into the Sunrise Assisted Living Facility. The Lexus, owned by a Naples, Florida man and operated by a Scituate woman, struck the Volvo in the rear. Both cars were traveling northbound on 3A.

The driver of the Lexus complained of a minor neck injury but refused treatment and transport to the hospital. The Lexus driver was also given a citation for following too closely and was summons to court for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

Vandalism

On Monday, Aug. 10, a Beechwood Street resident reported an incident of vandalism to a minivan sometime overnight. On arrival the officer found an unknown object had shattered the Chrysler minivan's rear window. Nothing had been taken from the van and the officer could not locate anything any sort of projectile that could have caused the damage.

There were no other reports of vandalism in the area. The police currently do not have any suspects, but the incident is under investigation.

Electrical fire

A 911 caller from Cohasset Food Mart reported a back-room electrical panel made a loud noise and there were flames coming out from the wall on Monday (Aug. 10) morning about 11:30 a.m. Police and fire responded to the scene. Shortly before the emergency workers arrived the fire had been put out by the clerk using a fire extinguisher.

Fire took control of the scene and the wire inspector and building inspector were called to assess the damage and cause of the malfunction.

Youths argue

Two youths arguing near the Border Street bridge on Monday afternoon prompted a passerby to call the police. The caller reported two youths having an argument – one was accusing the other of stealing his cell phone and money. A group of boys was chasing one of the boys.

By the time police arrived on the scene, the group had disbanded. A bicycle, a red Fuji mountain bike, with some damage was found on the sidewalk near the Atlantica parking lot. The bike was brought back to the station.

"We currently have about eight bikes," Chief Hussey said. The police hope to reunite the bikes with their rightful owner.

Teen transported

A cruiser out on patrol stumbled upon a group of five teenagers at the end of Beechwood Street At the time, the teens did not have any alcohol in their possession, but after investigation officers determined one of the male teens was intoxicated. The other four showed no outward signs of intoxication and were allowed to leave.

The intoxicated male teen was driven home and released to his parents.

The incident occurred around Monday, Aug. 10 around 11 p.m.

Couple lost in woods

Police dispatch received a call from a disoriented husband and wife lost in Whitney Thayer Woods. They had walked throughout the park and somehow lost their way. Before the police could provide assistance the couple encountered a cyclist who was willing to guide them back to their car.

Possible intoxication

Third hand information came into Cohasset police from a Scituate police officer who had been informed by an employee at Dunkin' Donuts concerning the possible intoxication of the driver of a blue minivan heading northbound on Route 3A. A partial plate was given to Cohasset patrols, but officers couldn't locate the vehicle. The information was given to Cohasset units on Thursday (Aug. 13) around 6:15a.m.

Doing 'donuts'

On two consecutive nights last weekend, a car came speeding down Ledgewood Drive, spun around doing a "donut," then sped away again. A Ledgewood resident informed police of the incidents, but did not have specific information about the vehicle. By the time police responded, the car was no longer in the area. Some damage to a lawn was reported.

"We told the resident to get the best possible description of the vehicle so we can take appropriate enforcement action," Chief Hussey said.

Speeding, summons

On Saturday, Aug. 15 around 9:15p.m. police pulled over a car for driving 44 miles per hour in a 30 mile per hour zone on Hull Street. It turned out the driver of the vehicle did not have a valid Massachusetts driver's license. The driver of the car, a 32-year-old male from Rockland, was summonsed to court for operating without a license and speeding.

The passenger of the car did have a valid license and was permitted to drive the car away.

Abandoned 911 calls

Each time police dispatch received an abandoned or accidental 911 call, dispatch always calls back and sends a police cruiser to the location to ensure everything and everyone is OK. Several times a week there are accidental or abandoned 911 calls in the police log. One this week was a mother teaching a child how to dial 911 for an emergency. Other times it is a case of misdialing, a caller this week reported he mistakenly dialed 911 when he meant to dial 411. In each of these cases, an officer was sent to the address to confirm the call was accidental.

This week, there was a situation where a 911 call was abandoned, dispatch called back and was told the call was accidental. It turned out there was actually being a crime committed and an arrest was made.

"That's the reason why the police respond to every call, even those where they are told the call is accidental," Chief Hussey said.

Boat sinks outside harbor

Three passengers unharmed

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A 39-foot powerboat met a Titanic-like fate off the coast of Cohasset on Sunday evening (Aug. 16), but all passengers made it back to land safely.

After spending Sunday afternoon on the sandbar off Bassing Beach, the powerboat carrying three passengers was leaving Cohasset Harbor to return to the Swampscott area at around 5:15 p.m.

Off the coast of Cohasset, the boat apparently maneuvered out of the channel, picked up speed, and then hit Grampus Ledge, according to Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons. Grampus Ledge is a ledge outcropping covered by water between half-tide and high tide.

After hitting the ledge, the boat, which is named the Aquaholic II, began to take on water. A passenger radioed "mayday" over channel 9. The Cohasset Harbormaster office monitors channels 10 and 16 (distress channel). The Scituate Harbormaster office heard the call and contacted the Cohasset Harbormaster, who responded by sending out two boats.

After a short search, the harbormaster located the boat about one-half mile west of Minot Light (which is about halfway between Minot and Sandy Beach).

"It was sinking, we put the pumps on but the damage was just too great," Harbormaster Gibbons said. Immediately, the harbormaster's crew began using their two commercial pumps to bail out the boat. "We were pumping at a rate of 200 gallons a minute, but we couldn't get ahead of it. We couldn't even slow it down."

Seeing the pumps were not enough to stave off the flowing water, Gibbons said she headed back to the harbor to gather more pumps.

"I came back maybe six minutes later and that's when it was going down," Gibbons said. The boat's three passengers, who were from the North Shore, were safely evacuated from the boat before it sunk. The passengers were evacuated from the boat.

"For [the boat] to go down so quickly, it had to be massive damage."

The boat had a small inflatable boat, which served as an emergency lifeboat for a time before the harbormaster arrived.

According to Gibbons, the boat rode up and over the ledges "quite fast" and a big gash or hole was likely left in the boat's bottom. The water entered the boat too quickly for the severity and/or kind of damage to be definitively determined.

Gibbons said alcohol did not play a role in this incident, "it was just an unfortunate accident."

After the boat sunk, the Coast Guard arrived on the scene.

COURTESY PHOTO/BILL FITZGERALD

After an incoming half tide, the ledge is covered by water, and is marked off by two red nun buoys (channel markers). The incident occurred around the incoming half-tide Sunday evening.

This boat is not the first to run into trouble on Grampus Ledge. Famously and tragically, the brig St. John was caught in a northeast gale off the coast of Cohasset in 1849 and slammed into Grampus Ledge. The strength of the storm broke the hull open and 99 of the Irish immigrants aboard the boat perished.

Gibbons said her office has been called to aid many boaters who have hit the Grampus Ledge, but this was the first time in recent memory that a boat has been lost.

"They just veered outside the channel and that's something you just can't do around here," Gibbons said.

A tow company that arrived on the scene brought the boat's three passengers back to Swampscott.

I joined Get in Shape for Women 6 months ago and I am amazed at my results. I have lost 52 lbs and 7 pant sizes, which means I am down to a size 6 for the first time in 25 years! The amazing part for me is that not only do I look great, I feel great as well. My confidence has gone up while my stress, blood pressure, and cholesterol are at an all time low. My trainers have been great teaching me how important it is to take care of my body and my mind. For the first time ever I'm committed fully to exercise and health.

They're really walking the walk

Inspired by Cohasset youngster, women will take on Jimmy Fund Walk

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the past two months, a group of local women have been gathering on Sunday mornings to walk together on Ledgewood Drive. Their goal is not for fitness nor for companionship (although those have come with the miles), but something even greater.

They are training for the upcoming Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk, raising money for cancer research and walking to honor a 4-year-old girl who is currently a patient at the Jimmy Fund Clinic.

Catrina Herman, the youngest daughter of Jeri and Chris Herman, was diagnosed in March with a Wilms' tumor, a type of kidney cancer most commonly found in children.

While relatively rare – there are only about 500 cases in the United States every year – it is a "highly, highly curable cancer," Catrina's mother Jeri Herman said. Catrina is about halfway through the prescribed seven-month protocol of radiation and chemotherapy.

One of the reasons the cancer is deemed curable is because of the constant research being conducted at Dana-Farber and the Jimmy Fund Clinic.

"All of it is done out-patient and Catrina actually enjoys going to the clinic," Herman said, explaining that everyone at the clinic makes both the patient and their families feel comfortable. "I can't imagine getting treatment anywhere else," she added.

The Hermans have found friends in fellow patient families as well as with the doctors and nurses at the Jimmy Fund Clinic.

Herman describes Catrina as an "empowered" girl who offers her assistance to the nurses when she is getting her treatments.

"She's a feisty little girl," Herman said, and that side of her has come out even more while facing this challenge. "She's resilient and really a happy, happy kid."

According to her mother, the only thing that gives Catrina's cancer away is her skinnier than usual frame and wispy hair. "She's at the pool, at the beach, playing with her friends," Herman said.

While the Herman family has been facing the challenge of cancer head on, they have taken heart in being so close to world-class care at Dana-Farber and the Jimmy Fund Clinic.

"When the dust settled (after the diagnosis) we knew we wanted to do something for this clinic we think is so amazing," Herman explained.

When she began to see advertisements about the Jimmy Fund Walk, she said to herself this was something she could do.

"It really wasn't a grand scheme, it was more of a lark," she said. But, with a little organization, a mass e-mail and a supportive network of friends, Herman was actually surprised at how quickly the effort came together.

Herman e-mailed about 150 people from various eras of her life and asked them to help in one of two ways, either offering a donation or joining the team.

"I was shocked with how many people who wanted to walk with me," Herman said.

Now 22 strong "Team Catrina" has set a goal of raising about $25,000 for the Jimmy Fund. The team is well on its way with more than $20,000 raised so far with a month still to go before the event.

The Jimmy Fund Walk, which will be held Sunday, Sept. 13, follows the 26.2-mile course of the Boston Marathon. Most of Team Catrina is walking the entire length of the marathon course, but a few are opting to tackle one of the several shortened courses offered (a 15-mile, a 13-mile, a five-mile and a three-mile walk).

The all-female team is a mixture of friends from Cohasset and nearby towns, each with a different connection to the Hermans.

Lisa Rosen, a Ledgewood Drive neighbor and friend of the Hermans, immediately said 'yes' to joining the team upon receiving the e-mail from Herman.

"I wanted to support the Hermans and I thought this was a way I could support the Hermans and Catrina," said Rosen, who has three kids of her own. "It has ended up being really, really fun."

The group is mostly mothers. One of the women on the team is a cancer survivor while another is the parent of a cancer survivor. All three of the Herman's former babysitters/nannies have joined the team.

"All these people care about Catrina," Herman said.

The local members of the group have been meeting at 5:30 a.m. every Sunday morning. The team starts early to beat the summer heat and leave the rest of the day free to do other things.

Rosen has taken on the task of mapping out the walking routes for the group. Last week, they completed what was (and will be) their longest walk before next month's event – 20 miles.

While many of the women on the team knew each other previously, Rosen said the Sunday morning walks have given them a chance to really get to know one another.

"The camaraderie among the team is great. You really get to know people when you're walking for three or four hours together," Rosen said. "I've been very pleasantly surprised at how great the team is and the friendships that are forming; it has been a nice unexpected bonus."

Following the progressively longer training walks, Rosen said it is becoming obvious how physically demanding a marathon walk is.

"We really need to get our legs and feet ready," said Rosen. After logging more than 250 miles during the last 12 weeks, Rosen thought her feet had toughened up, but she still got blistered following a recent 17-mile walk.

The spouses and families of the walkers have been supportive of their effort, setting up a water and snack stop along the way for recent longer Sunday walks.

"It's really a sacrifice for every women who is participating, but they made that sacrifice because they love Catrina," Herman said.

About the Jimmy Fund

Since its founding in 1948, the Jimmy Fund has supported the fight against cancer in children and adults at Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, helping to raise the chances of survival for cancer patients around the world.

The Jimmy Fund has been integral to the success of treatment for once-incurable childhood cancers for more than 60 years. Today, due in part to Dr. Sidney Farber's groundbreaking work at Dana-Farber, overall cure rates for children's cancers have reached more than 75 percent (and up to 90 percent for some forms of the disease).

More than $600 million has been raised since it was founded in 1948. More than 90 cents per dollar raised is directed toward Dana-Farber's ultimate goal — eradicating cancer and related diseases, and the fear they engender.

To donate to Team Catrina or the Jimmy Fund, visit www.jimmyfundwalk.org or contact Jeri Herman at jeri@jerihermanphotography.com or 781-264-7886.

The Decorated Bicycle Parade will make its way back to Cohasset Day this year, as 5-year-old David Mitterando of Cohasset rides his Speedracer bike down South Main Street to Depot Street during last year's Cohasset Day.

Gearing up for Cohasset Day

Second annual event scheduled for Sept. 12

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Every day is Cohasset Day if you live or work in this beautiful coastal town – yet Saturday, Sept. 12 is officially the second annual "Cohasset Day" and it promises to be a great one. Mark your calendar for a family day of fun, shopping, eating, parade, music and dancing in the streets.

A highlight of the day is a parade down Main Street and its open to all local organizations who would like to adorn their uniforms or their 02025 pride and march together for the sheer fun and camaraderie of it. If your Boy Scout or Girl Scout troop, sports team or local organization would like to be part of this second annual parade contact Cohasset Day Coordinator, Peter Brown at pbrown@campanelli.com.

It's only fitting that in these dog days of summer that a highlight of the parade will be the Decorated Dog Parade coordinated by the Scituate Animal Shelter. It means exactly what it sounds like — have the kids make a costume for man's (and women's) best friend and take a stroll with Cohasset's four legged residents. Costumes are optional. All dogs are welcome to participate in their birthday suit. If you're interested in the dog parade contact Nancy Story at storynanciej@yahoo.com.

If you prefer to ride instead of walking the dog, then join in the Decorated Bicycle Parade. Each participant is encouraged to decorate their bike and ride alongside family and friends. For more information about this contact Beverly Bielewicz at beverly@paperscapes.biz.

Each of these events within the parade requires a little creativity and a big desire for fun.

Cohasset Day is designed to bring families to the town common for some old fashioned fun. In addition to the parade, the day includes a fashion show, the second Cohasset Classic Car Concours, music all afternoon by Rusty Skippers, J Place's "Drift Away" and featuring the Jackson Weatherbee Band, a Kids Duathlon and Games on the Common, special Farmer's Market, South Shore Center Art exhibit; historical society open houses.

In addition to local businesses selling their wares, families can feed their appetites by purchasing tickets for "Fine Foods Galore, " a sampling from more than 22 restaurants and local vendors. The food sampling has a cost of $10 for individuals; $20 for families (in advance); and $15 for individuals; ($25 for families on event day). All other events are free.

A full calendar of the day's activities and details about where to buy advance food tickets will be included in upcoming Mariner articles. For now, consider decorating your dog or your bike and then come see why we all need to celebrate Cohasset, support our local businesses and enjoy what promises to be a wonderful September celebration.

Planning continues discussions

Two applications scheduled to continue talks with the Planning Board this past Wednesday (Aug. 19) were postponed to Wednesday, Sept. 23.

The proposed 17-unit condominium development at 8 James Lane requested additional time for engineers to work on the plans. The James Lane project will be back before the Planning Board at 7:15 p.m. on Sept. 23. At its last public hearing concerning the project, Planning Board members expressed frustration about the lack of a complete, up-to-date set of plans.

A preliminary subdivision proposal put forth by CCI-Energy, the green energy company behind Cohasset's first turbine project proposal, was continued to Sept. 23 at 8 p.m. The proposal included plans to build a new access road off Route 3A near Hingham Lumber to crest of the hill behind Graham Waste. At the first discussion, held in early July, the Planning Board and its consulting engineer had concerns about the steep grade of the proposed road. The applicant requested more time to work on the proposal.

Cohasset GOP picnic

All are welcome to attend the Cohasset Republican Town Committee picnic from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Sunday, Sept. 13, at the home of Lou Harvey, 465 King St., Cohasset. Attendees can meet local and state Republican elected officials, and express an opinion and let them know what concerns are. Speakers will include 2010 gubernatorial candidates Charlie Baker and Christy Mihos, GOP state Chairman Jennifer Nassour, state Sen. Robert Hedlund, state Reps. Geoff Diehl and Daniel Webster, and Plymouth County Sheriff Joseph McDonald. Other invited guests are members of Cohasset's Board of Selectmen, Planning Board, School Committee, Conservation Commission and Board of Health.

For reservations, call Karen Quigley at 781-383-6368, Kevin O'Donnell at 781-383-0193 or Terese D'Urso at 781-383-1143. All are welcome.

Slowing down during the hazy days of summer

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset. Is everyone holding up in this wonderful August heat? I hate to say it but a month ago or so, we were all complaining about the rain. Hmmm, maybe some perfect days like 75-80 degrees, no humidity or rain and swimming and tanning at the beach or pool! Sounds like that may be headed our way a bit before the kids head back to school. A reminder to all Cohasset Public School families: This year, the children in grades PK-12 are headed back on Sept. 2 with school on Sept. 3 as well. Then, no school on Friday, Sept. 4 and Monday, Sept. 7. For more information, go to www.cohassetk12.org. There is not a whole lot of news this week as I do think almost everyone is in the hazy, dog days of summer mode, but there are a couple of things to mention so here goes.

SPORTS PHYSICALS

Cohasset High School sports physicals will be performed on Tuesday, Aug. 25 at 7:30 a.m. in the nurse's office. All students planning on participating in a fall sport need to have an updated physical on file in the nurse's office prior to the start of practice. The physical needs to have been performed within the last 13 months. Please call Mrs. Collins at (781) 383-0853 if you have any questions.

CDC AUDITIONS

Cohasset Dramatic Club announces auditions for the zany and hilarious play, "Lend Me A Tenor" on Sunday, Aug. 30 at 6 p.m. and Monday, Aug. 31 at 7 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. Director Lisa Rafferty is seeking an energetic and experienced cast of four men and four women for this popular Broadway farce. Readings will be from the script. Performance dates are Nov. 6-15, 2009. Volunteers also needed for behind the scenes theater work - for those who would love to be involved without being on stage! For further information please contact the producer, Lisa Pratt at lisa.pratt@comcast.net.

JIMMY FUND WALK

Thirty-eight residents from Cohasset and Hingham will walk up to 26.2 miles along the historic route of the Boston Marathon in the 21st annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk on Sept. 13. They will be among the more than 8,000 walkers who will participate with the collective goal of raising more than $6 million for cancer research and care for adult and pediatric cancer patients at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund.

Presented by Hyundai Motor America and its more than 600 U.S. dealers, the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk gives participants the opportunity to walk along the Boston Marathon's historic route. It is the only event, other than the Boston Marathon itself, that is sanctioned by the Boston Athletic Association to use the official historic Boston Marathon route from Hopkinton to Boston.

Walkers may choose to walk one of five routes: the entire 26.2-mile route, the Hopkinton to Babson College 14-mile route, Babson to Boston 13.1-mile route, Boston College 5-mile route, or the 3-mile route with patients and their families starting at the main Dana-Farber campus. For those who are unable to participate in the Walk itself, there is a virtual walk option, allowing participants to fundraise online and "walk" on route via an interactive map.

Walkers are treated to a victory party at the Copley Square finish line complete with medals, food and music. Walkers begin in Hopkinton between 6 and 7:30 a.m., at Babson College between 9:30 and 11 a.m., at Boston College between 10 and 11:30 a.m., and in Boston at 2 p.m.

To register or make financial contributions for the 21st annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk, visit the Web site at jimmyfundwalk.org or call 866-JF-1-WALK.

That is it for this week's news. Please send in all of your information for next week to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 p.m.

Remembering Erin

Community mourns the loss of charter school student

By Dana Forsythe
DFORSYTHE@CNC.COM

In the wake of a car accident earlier this month that claimed the life of Hull native Erin Marie Leary, the South Shore Charter Public School, where Leary attended, has been coping with the fourth student death in just three years.

On Aug. 6, Kelly Ann Barber was driving a 2000 Mitsubishi Montero SUV, heading north on Route 1 in Revere, when she lost control of the vehicle and crashed. The accident claimed the life of Leary, who was 16, and Jason Foster, 17, of Ipswich, and injured three others including Barber. The five friends were driving together to a Blink 182 concert in Mansfield.

As of last week, no charges had been filed in connection to the accident.

Leary is survived by her parents, K.T and Buzz Leary of Hull, and her 18-year-old sister Shannon.

Leary was a student at the charter school in Norwell. In September, she would have begun her junior year.

According to Pru Goodale, the school's director, Leary loved participating in the school's theater project and as a freshman in 2008 she had a lead role in the high school senior play, "Broken."

"She started in kindergarten here and her mother K.T. Leary has been one of the parents who have been very involved in the school," Goodale said. "Erin just blossomed here. She loved to do photography and you could see the sparkle in her eye."

Although she struggled with complications from colitis, Leary had recently been at her healthiest, according to Goodale.

"The past winter she had a major surgery and was feeling a lot better," Goodale said.

Leary also volunteered for many local nonprofit organizations, especially the Paragon Carousel in Hull and she was a member of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

On Aug. 11, a crowd of hundreds, consisting of family members, friends and classmates gathered by the Sunset Events Marina in Cohasset to say goodbye to Leary, Goodale said.

"It was a really touching tribute," Goodale said. "People wore bright dresses and band T-shirts and a lot of them wore Erin's signature tie-dye t-shirts. As soon as word got out, one of the parents who lost a child last March emailed our Google group and reached out to parents and students in the community."

Erin Marie Leary

"I think the celebration (on Aug. 11) was really a show of our community rallying around one of our own," Goodale added. "Everyone baked or brought something and the building was packed."

Since 2006, the charter school has lost three other students to car crashes, leukemia and suicide.

"We're such a small school," Goodale said. "We've got such a unique and special community here and we're truly a family so it's just a lot for the kids, staff and teachers to absorb."

Goodale said grief counselors would be available for students when they return in September.

"In the next few weeks we're also looking to sit down with our staff to see how they're dealing," Goodale said. "We had a death in March and didn't really have a chance to process that, so I think it's important to find the time."

Swimming for the cause

Grady to take part in Great River Race

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

The only thing Sara Grady loves more than the water itself is swimming — and just being in it.

From her high school swim team days on up to her graduate school days at Boston University, Grady has spent countless hours not only working out, but also working in the water.

There was even a period when she snorkeled daily at Barnstable Harbor, where she was researching the horseshoe crab for part of a marine biology lab.

"I've always been much better at swimming than anything else," said Grady, who is currently a wildlife ecologist for the North and South Rivers Watershed Association. Her work focuses on coastal issues like water pollution, endangered species and restoration projects.

The 30-year-old, who also serves as the South Shore's regional coordinator for the Massachusetts Bays National Estuary Program, will soon get a chance to put her swimming skills to work in order to raise awareness of her work. On Saturday, Aug. 22, Grady will be swimming a seven-mile stretch of the North River during the NSRWA's 19th annual Great River Race.

Grady will be the sole swimmer at the event, which will feature an array of non-motorized vessels, including canoes, kayaks and rowboats.

"The money that I'm raising can help the cause," said Grady, who has already raised $985 for the NSRWA's programs and their mission of protecting, restoring and educating people on the importance of the North and South rivers.

Grady still hopes that sum will be bumped up closer to her ultimate fundraising goal of $2,500.

"Better to set the bar high rather than low," she said, adding that the hardest part of the swim will probably occur between four and 6 1/2 miles in.

"Between Route 3 (which the river intersects) and the end of the race, it's much less developed and curvier," she said.

Grady will wear fins and will also benefit from a slight current at times, but she said that particular stretch will take a little longer to navigate. While water temperature should not be a factor — Grady says she does not get cold or tired while in the water — marine wildlife like eels and snapping turtles still lurk.

"Who knows what's under there?" said Paula Christie, the NSRWA assistant director and organizer of the event.

Christie said Grady and the race's other competitors would be taking to the North River at the Norwell side of the Union Street Bridge. However as construction crews are renovating the bridge, the Marshfield side will be closed and participants will be limited to the Norwell side.

And in order to prevent everyone from crossing the finish line at the same time, which is seven miles down the river at the North River Bridge — which separates Pembroke and Hanover on Old Washington Street — there will be staggered starting times, Christie said.

While the plan is for Grady to hit the water last, the rowers, kayakers and people using canoes will begin in heats. This year, there might also be an entry or two for stand-up paddleboards, Christie said.

Christie hopes that the rain will stay far away.

"What really influences the numbers (of participants) is the weather the day of the race," she said, citing last year's turnout, which was affected by a touch of rain but still saw 87 boats with 145 people in the water.

In 2006, Christie said the weather was pristine and the group had registered 118 boats with 200 paddlers in the water.

Rain, Christie said, also leads to runoff and increased levels of fecal e coli contaminants. That could make being in the water not nearly as desirable an experience for Grady, she said.

Grady is not fazed.

"With a lot of the work that we've done, the water quality of the river has gotten better," she said.

It was only three months ago that Grady swam three miles in the river during a trial run. She said it took one hour and 15 minutes.

"It was easy," she said. "I'm feeling relatively good about it. I know where I am in the river at all times."

In addition to swimming in the river, Grady tests its water quality regularly, which she said has gotten much better over the years.

As for the boats for which the race was originally intended, there will be several different levels of competition. According to Christie, while the fastest and most competitive boats will finish in just under an hour, others will take their time and may take up to two.

Craig Wolfe and Dee Cogill hold the race record of 59 minutes, 16 seconds, which they did last year in their doubles sliding-seat rowboat.

North and South Rivers Watershed Association wildlife ecologist Sara Grady will swim the seven miles of the NSRWA's 19th annual Great River Race Aug. 22.

"There will be family canoes, men's and women's doubles and single canoe," said Christie, along with single men and women's kayaking with dories of all shapes and sizes.

"We have a very strong senior contingent," Christie said, citing the men's 65 and up canoeing doubles as being particularly competitive. "They've been serious for years, and they also blow everyone away. They place at least first or second."

With Aug. 22 marking the 19th race, Christie said it has been a pleasure watching the event blossom.

"It's much more organized, the feedback is positive and things go extremely smoothly," she said.

All participants must wear life jackets, and the Hanover Police Department will be on hand in rubber boats.

One of the more unique contest categories will be for the most decorated boat. Christie's past favorite was the wild turkey boat, decorated with several fake turkeys. Another past winner was the dragon boat, complete with everything from an elaborate tail to a detailed head.

"But you can be as serious as you want," she said. "The speed limit is 6 mph, but some go as fast as seven mph."

After the race, an awards celebration will be held from 3:30 to 5 p.m. at McGreal's Tavern on West Street in Norwell Center. Awards will be given to the top three winners of the many categories.

"I'll be there having an ice cold Bass," Christie said.

Advanced registration is strongly encouraged, and the cost is $25 per craft for NSRWA members and $30 for non-members. Each registration includes one T-shirt, and additional shirts are available for $10.

On race day, registration will be $30, no matter the membership status. Non-registered boaters will need to arrive by 11:45 a.m., Christie said.

Mother of two loses 20 pounds in just five months!

I joined Get In Shape for Women five months ago and I couldn't be happier with the results. I have lost 20 pounds, 6.5 inches, and lost over 5% body fat. I have been going to different gyms for years with little to no results. At Get In Shape for Women my trainers push me to limits that I never thought I was capable of reaching. They also teach me about nutrition, eating healthy and how to lose weight. Get In Shape For Women has taught me that I am capable of making changes and taking charge of my body. Get In Shape for Women is a great program that includes weight training, cardio, nutrition and most importantly accountability. I am very happy that I made the decision to join and look forward to reaching new goals!

Minot Light poll results

Recently, the United States General Services Administration announced it is looking for a new caretaker for Minot Light, the 115-foot structure that has guarded the rocks near Cohasset Harbor since 1860. They have made the structure available to a not-for-profit, government or local agency free of charge.

On our Web site, we asked readers who they thought would be best suited to take charge of Minot Light. Ninety online readers responded.

Over 40 percent said a joint effort between the towns or historical societies would be the most appropriate to be the future owners of the famous 1-4-3 lighthouse.

See below for the full results as of Thursday morning.

Who would be the best organization to take charge of Minot Light?

- A joint effort between the towns or historical societies, 42 percent (38 votes).
- A new organization specifically created to fundraise and maintain Minot Light, 28 percent (25 votes).
- Cohasset Historical Society, 16 percent (14 votes).
- Scituate Historical Society, 2 percent (2 votes).
- Town of Cohasset, 7 percent (6 votes).
- None of the above, 6 percent (5 votes)
- Town of Scituate, 0 percent (0 votes).

There is still time to vote – log on to www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset to take the poll. Updated results will be in a future issue.

Editor's note: A nearly identical poll was posted on the Scituate Mariner Web site in recent weeks. The top response with 40 percent (34 votes out of 84 voters) was also a joint effort between the towns or historical societies. The second most popular response was the Scituate Historical Society with 32 votes (38 percent). The option "a new organization specifically created to fundraise and maintain Minot Light" was not given on the Scituate poll.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Chief will be 'greatly missed'

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to publicly thank Chief Hussey for his dedication to our great town during his tenure as Police Chief. Chief Hussey brought incredible experience to our police force and he helped develop a great team to oversee our safety everyday.

Having worked closely with Chief Hussey over the last four years in developing the triathlon safety plan, I can tell you he is one first class individual who will be greatly missed. The next chief has some big shoes to fill!

Bill Burnett

Sorry to see Chief Hussey leave

TO THE EDITOR

I was sorry to see that Chief Hussey is leaving Cohasset to return to Boston.

Chief Hussey has done an outstanding job during his stint here. The police cars no longer have the heavily tinted windows they once had; the "SWAT" uniforms disappeared, giving a much more user-friendly appearance. Chief Hussey was very visible around town. I used to see him jogging in the mornings. He even modeled swimwear at a function. He brought an air of professionalism that had been somewhat lacking prior to his coming here. He met with various groups in an effort to foster good community relations. He will be missed.

Farewell Chief, our loss is certainly Boston's gain. We all owe you a debt of thanks.

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

TED PURDY

We would like to introduce you to another group of important members of our staff, the Beach Maintenance Workers, who have helped keep the beach clean this summer. As all can appreciate with the sheer volume of patrons, and seagulls, our BMWs are always kept very busy to ensure the beach is clean and tidy for all.

Today, all of our BMWs are Cohasset residents, and most will be sophomores this year at Cohasset High School. They are: Jonah Adkins, Alex Evans, Alexandra (Allie) Farren, Coleman Hernon, Patrick MacCormack, Dean McNary, Mitchell McNary and Sydney Waters.

CHS Junior Olivia Adkins is a BMW as well as a substitute lifeguard at the beach, having completed her lifeguard training at the beginning of the summer with Allie Farren, who is also a substitute guard.

Sam Asnault, Colin Gideon-Murphy and Connor Goetz are incoming freshmen. This is Colin's second year. Sam and Connor worked as substitute BMWs this summer.

Second-year BMW Adrian Dunne will be a sophomore at Thayer Academy. Hugh Gideon-Murphy will be a freshman at Dublin School in NH and Tanner Gildea will be a seventh-grader at Boston College High School in the Arupe Division. The smallest member of our BMW staff is our hardest worker; Max Montgomery is a dynamo on the beach. He will be beginning eighth grade at Nobles and Greenough this fall.

Please assist our BMW's by being responsible in putting all trash and recycling in the proper receptacles on the beach and in the parking lot.

Let's all enjoy the remaining days ahead to close out a wonderful summer beach season at Sandy Beach.

Ted Purdy is a Trustee of the Sandy Beach Association.

Arcane information for Greenbush abutters

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

This week we attended a meeting with a Greenbush abutter whose building is immediately adjacent to the railroad tracks and who is planning major construction work involving cranes and roof-top work. One of the meeting attendees was a project engineer from Mass Bay Commuter Railroad (MCBR), the operator of the Greenbush for the MBTA. He explained to all present the special considerations required by the MBTA for construction work near their tracks.

The project engineer reviewed the procedures that may apply to anyone undertaking construction work in close proximity to the tracks. There are three special items potentially involved:

1. Railroad safety training
2. Railroad protective insurance
3. Railroad employed flagman

The safety training is offered by MBCR and there is a charge for the half-day class. Railroad protective insurance is an insurance product offered by select insurance carriers to protect the railroad from loss as a result of construction work undertaken in close proximity to the tracks. The flagman is a railroad employee who will be in the vicinity of the construction and who has the necessary communication equipment to contact the commuter rail dispatcher in the event of a construction emergency. There is a daily charge for the flagman and he must be on site for the duration of the construction that could have an impact on the railroad operations

You may think that this sounds like a lot of trouble for a building owner contemplating construction. First of all, this only applies to work done in close proximity to the tracks. We have seen references that it applies to work within 50 feet, but we haven't been able to confirm that this is accurate number. But, you also have to put yourself in the railroad's position to understand the potential impact that a construction project "gone wrong" can have on railroad operations. When all is said and done, it is important to remember that if you can possibly cause damage to the railroad under any imagined scenario, you need to check these issues out with MBCR in advance.

Little Harbor Project Paving – or Not

Oh what a tangled web we weave. It almost feels as though the paving process is moving in reverse (although microscopic examination will show we are moving forward, albeit not as fast as we'd like.) Let's be specific…

New water gate risers.

Water gate marked for removal.

Main Street and the Common

After raising the structures in this area in preparation for paving, the Water and Sewer Departments noticed that a number of the in-the-street structures were damaged such that it would probably be best to replace them. Although some of the damage was probably caused by the grading operation, some of them had preexisting damage. In any event, it was determined that a number of them should be replaced.

The structure most commonly needing replacement is known as water gates. (No, it's not a famous hotel in Washington DC.) Water gate is a short-cut name for the assembly that sits over the gate valve that opens or closes the water flow to an individual property. There are also sewer gates and gas gates that perform a similar open/close function. The accompanying photo shows a water gate (marked WG) with an orange "X" denoting the required replacement. We also have included a photo of several cast iron risers. A riser is the assembly that sits above the valve and has a small cast iron cap (seen in the other photo) that can be removed for access to the valve.

So now we are faced with a bit more construction to replace these damaged structures. As a side issue, we brain-picked all of the engineers to determine how to backfill the replaced risers so that we could minimize sink-holes around the replacement areas. We think we have this solved potential sink-hole issue about as well as it can be done. The up shot is that we are facing at least a week's work before we can think of paving this area.

Nichols and Side Roads

By the time you read this you will realize we have not paved the Nichols Road area this week. Here's the story behind the story. Last week while the paving company's structure crew was raising all of the structures, the engineers did some functional surveys and detected that some newly installed devices needed to be excavated for examination. This additional excavation needs to be absolutely complete before the paving contractor will even think about paving. You may notice work crews in the area addressing a number of these items. So once again, another week goes by. We are getting gun-shy about predicting when Nichols paving will be done. But, once again we will try for next week.

HEALTH NOTES

Your pets and you during an emergency

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last Saturday, some of us went to Watertown with our pets and worked out evacuation and care for pets during emergencies such as hurricanes and other disasters. It was an eye opener. Aside from some very interesting animal acquaintances (our dog became good friends with a 6-inch turtle named Jeniveve), it taught us much about how to care for pets in difficult situations. Taking your pets along is the most important item individuals or families can accomplish for their animals during a hurricane evacuation. Pets left behind can be injured, lost or killed during a storm, or in its aftermath. Owners should include their animals in thorough family hurricane planning, before a storm threatens.

"Sometimes the family pet can be overlooked until the final moments before you and your family are about to evacuate," said MEMA Director Don Boyce. "Take the time now to develop a plan and assemble your pet's disaster kit to ensure its safety and care if you are asked to evacuate."

- Ordinarily, only service animals are allowed inside public mass care shelters, although the Massachusetts Animal Response Team may be able to assist at these facilities with animal sheltering accommodations.
- Make plans ahead of time to take your pet to stay at relatives, friends or a kennel outside the affected area.
- Know the locations of pet-friendly hotels and motels.
- Prepare a list of boarding facilities and veterinarians to shelter animals in an emergency; include 24-hour phone numbers.
- Consult with your local animal control officer and Emergency Management office about possible temporary shelter facilities in your community.
- Ask local animal shelters if they provide emergency shelter or foster care for pets in a disaster. Animal shelters may be overburdened caring for the animals they already have, as well as those displaced by a disaster, so this should be your last resort.
- Prepare an emergency kit for your pets; include collars and leashes, a three- to five-day supply of food and water, a manual can opener, bowls, litter boxes, photographs – you with your pet, and a week's supply of medications that your pet may be taking, including instructions in case you and your pet are separated.
- Have copies of your pets' vaccinations, medical records and prescriptions in a clean plastic bag or waterproof container.
- Make sure your pets wear collars with current license and rabies tags, and identification tags that include information on where you will be staying during the emergency.
- Use a pet carrier for each of your pets to make transportation easier.
- Birds should be transported in a secure travel cage or carrier. During warm weather, carry a plant mister to spray the bird's feathers periodically. Do not put water inside the carrier during transport.
- Provide a few slices of fresh fruits and vegetables with high water content.
- Have a photograph for identification and leg bands.
- If the carrier does not have a perch, line it with paper towels and change them frequently. Try to keep the carrier in a quiet area. Do not let the birds out of the cage or carrier.
- To insure the safety of their animals, owners of exotic or dangerous pets should have advanced planning preparations ready for their pet's special needs.

Hot, humid hurricane hints:

In addition to your pets, it would be wise to take some personal precautions. Here are some hints.

- Slow down, avoid strenuous activity. Do not try to do too much on a hot day.
- Wear lightweight, loose-fitting, light-colored clothing including a wide-brimmed hat to reflect heat, sunlight and help maintain normal body temperature.
- Drink plenty of water regularly and often, even if you do not feel thirsty.
- Limit intake of alcoholic beverages that can dehydrate your body.
- Eat well-balanced, light, regular meals. Avoid high protein foods that increase metabolic heat.
- Stay indoors.
- If you do not have air conditioning, stay on your lowest floor, out of the sun. Electric fans do not cool air, but they do help evaporate perspiration, which cools your body.
- Go to a place to get relief from the heat, such as air conditioned schools, libraries, theaters and other community facilities that may offer refuge during the warmest times of the day.
- Cover windows that receive morning or afternoon sun. Outdoor awnings or louvers can reduce the heat that enters a home by up to 80 percent.
- Avoid too much sunshine. Sunburn slows the skin's ability to cool itself. If you are outside, use sunscreen lotion with a high SPF (Sun Protection Factor) rating.
- Never leave children or pets alone in a closed vehicle.
- Check on family, friends and neighbors.

National Grid performing gas main work

National Grid recently began construction work on its natural gas infrastructure between numbers 38 and 184 Atlantic Avenue in Cohasset. Constructions continue through the first week in September.

As part of National Grid's ongoing infrastructure upgrade, approximately 1,860 feet of gas main will be installed. This upgrade project, which will improve system reliability and safety, is part of the company's overall plan to invest more than $200 million in gas main replacements across its service area through March 2010.

National Grid's contractor will perform the work between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Streets will remain open for the duration of the project.

The company will make every effort to minimize disruption to homes and businesses along the route and will employ traffic management plans and police details as appropriate. The required work will be conducted in close coordination with town officials and public safety representatives.

Customers can expect a brief service interruption upon completion of the work, as homes and businesses are connected to the new main. Residents will be notified prior to any necessary construction on private property.

For more information, call National Grid community relations coordinator Peter Nagle at 781-907-2211.

Please follow Little Harbor rules

To all boaters and residents of Little Harbor, as you are aware, Little Harbor is very special and hopefully always will be. However, the harbor will need the cooperation of all to keep it that way.

The following bylaws were voted at town meeting so that the people who like to swim, sail, kayak, canoe and enjoy other water activities, without the concern of fast operating powerboats, could enjoy the harbor.

- Article 7, section 32 states: "Jet skis, surf jets, and water bikes stall not be operated at a speed in excess of twelve miles per hour while in the confines of the harbor."
- Article 9, section 5 states: "No person shall operate a boat in Little Harbor white towing a water skier, aqua plane or other similar device except on even numbered days." An easy reminder is even: fast and odd: slow.

In addition, Little Harbor has a wide variety of birdlife, many of whom nest on the islands and rocks. Recently, the terns have resumed nesting in the harbor, which is a very welcome sight after many years of absence. It is important to their species that these nests are not disturbed.

And lastly, in spring and late summer many shore birds find Little Harbor's sand flats a vital feeding ground on their long migration as far as Central and South America. Dogs running and chasing them, although fun for the dog, interrupt their ability to build the necessary fat and energy reserves to continue migrating. Please respect their need to feed and rest in order to prepare for the long trip south.

Respecting rules at Sandy Beach

Sandy Beach Association asks that people respect the rules of the beach. Alcohol, fires, fishing, glass bottles or flotation devices are prohibited anywhere on the beach. Frisbees, hard balls, kites, skimmers and boogies boards are allowed in orange cone marked areas only. Climbing on rocks on either side of the beach is dangerous and prohibited.

Dogs are not permitted on the beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., from mid-June through Labor Day. If people bring pets to the beach during off-hours, it is imperative that they pick up after the dog.

Residents should have received the Sandy Beach Association annual fundraising letter. This mailing is the only source of fundraising for the Sandy Beach Association. The fee for the parking sticker funds the parking lot only – it does not cover the costs of beach cleanup, staffing or beach operations. The beach can't operate as it does without the support of Cohasset residents. Donations can be sent to P.O. Box 285, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Police Academy when he was hired for the Cohasset job. He also had a stint serving as acting commissioner for the BPD.

For those who had direct experience with Chief Hussey during the past five years they are quick to acknowledge his professionalism and the attitude of community policing he nurtured while leading the Cohasset force.

Hussey did not come to Cohasset in the best of circumstances. The Board of Selectmen hired Hussey in June 2004 on an interim basis after then chief Robert Jackson retired amid a storm of controversy. Former town manager Mark Haddad abruptly resigned in May 2004.

The town had been torn apart by a nine-month-long saga at the police department involving two officers whom Haddad had placed on paid administrative leave amid allegations of abuse of police power. Hussey soon brought the officers – who denied any wrongdoing — back to work saying at the time "it's time to move forward and put the past behind us."

Hussey became the permanent chief in May 2005 when he inked a three-year contract with the town. He is currently in the second year of his second, three-year contract.

"He quieted down the controversy and got the department back to doing the professional things they were capable of doing," Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who was on the board when Hussey was hired, said a cultural shift occurred once Hussey took the helm.

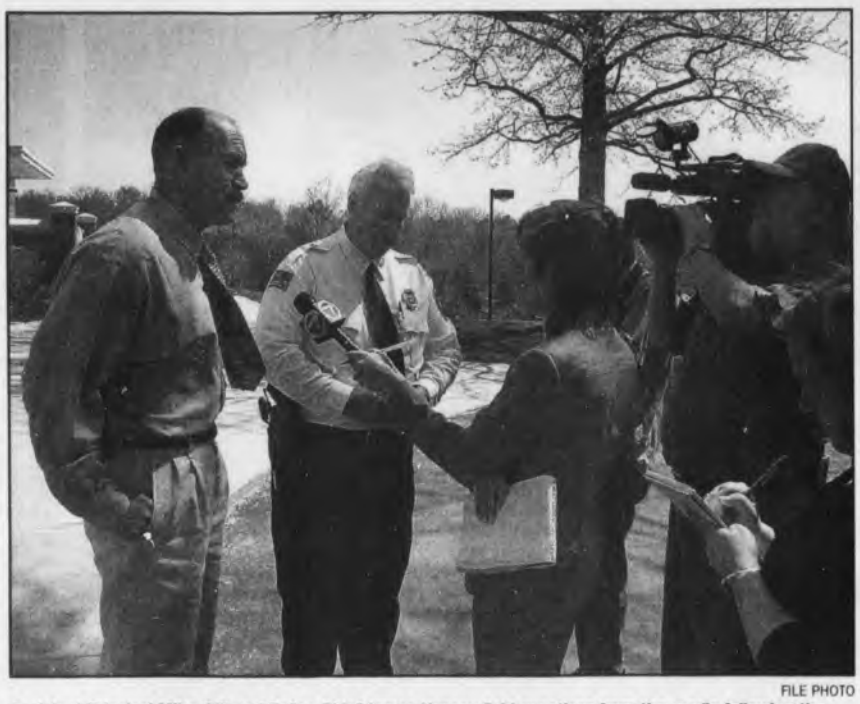
"He really changed the culture of the police department to a service organization whose primary role was to serve the public…as opposed to simply being the enforcement business," Dormitzer said.

Dormitzer said following the police controversy, Hussey was able to bring the department together and move the team forward with a common view of what policing is all about.

Symbolic gestures, such as new "more friendly" paint job on the cruisers, un-tinting of the cruiser windows and professional uniforms, went a long way in making the department more community-oriented, Dormitzer said.

Hussey, who lives in Norwood, made efforts to be visible and available to the community. When he first came on he reached out to different segments of the community.

He spoke with civic groups, and held "meet and greet" events at residents' homes to introduce himself to the community.



He is often seen jogging the streets of Cohasset in the morning hours and participated in the Road Race by the Sea. Last summer, when a Sohier Street resident had concerns about a new exit strategy for concerts at the South Shore Music Circus, he held a forum to air those concerns and adapted a plan to address them.

"He reached out to the town in a lot of ways," Carlson said.

Resident Lou Harvey of King Street, who was among several residents to host a meet and greet event, said Chief Hussey brought professionalism and order "at a time of chaos in Cohasset."

"There was open hostility about the police when Chief Hussey arrived and the 'meet and greet' helped to connect with our Town and establish the professional image that the department now enjoys," Harvey said.

One of the focuses of Hussey's tenure was to build a better relationship with the schools and the youth in the community. He worked with the superintendent to establish a memorandum of agreement, a document expressing cooperation between the two town departments. Hussey placed a high priority on a program that brought officers into a high school classroom to teach about law enforcement because of the positive police-youth interaction it generates.

Assistant Principal Mike Gill and Police Chief James Hussey field questions from the media following the discovery of a threatening note and bullet at the middle-high school in 2005.

Experience

Inside the department, Lieutenant Bill Quigley said Hussey demanded ethics and integrity from his officers.

"He brought the department out of a dark place and began building partnerships with the community we serve," Quigley said, adding he has come to consider the chief a mentor and friend during the last five years.

With a wealth of policing experience gleaned from his years in the Boston Police Department, Hussey led the force in modernizing its internal documents. The department revamped its rules and regulations and updated its policies and procedures. "Some of it was 40 years old," Quigley said.

Hussey made efforts to ensure transparency, he expanded the information available for the public in the police log and has weekly interviews with the Mariner, which results in the page 3 Police Beat.

Cohasset Triathlon race director and founder Bill Burnett was also glad to have Hussey's city experience when it came to making a safety plan for the large multi-sport event.

"Hussey brought an incredible amount of experience from his prior positions in Boston and with it I think we developed one of the best safety plans a triathlon has ever seen…I really felt I was in good hands," Burnett said.

Burnett worked with the police and fire departments for the better part of a year to build the 2007 inaugural race's safety plan and revised the plan for the event's subsequent years.

In working with Hussey, Burnett said the chief was extremely professional, yet approachable.

"He has a great sense of humor. I'm going to really, really miss working with him," Burnett said.

Hingham Police Chief Taylor Mills has similar things to say about working with his Cohasset counterpart. Over the past two years, Chief Mills worked with Hussey (along with the towns of Hull and Norwell) in the development process of a regional dispatch center.

"His input and talent was extremely valuable," Mills said in a phone interview this week. "He will be sorely missed as a colleague on the South Shore but I hope our friendship keeps us connected."

While Mills said he understands the feeling Hussey has of "going home" to Boston because of the many years on the city's force, he's confident a connection to Cohasset will remain, "I'm sure a piece of his heart will stay in Cohasset and on the South Shore. He's worked hard over his years in Cohasset…Boston is returning a strong leader to its ranks," Mills said.

Cohasset's next police chief

Town Manager Bill Griffin said while he was disappointed with Hussey's decision, he completely understood his reasoning.

"His style is exactly what the department needed," Griffin said. "This is a classic case of leaving the department better than when you found it."

Griffin described Hussey as a "problem solver."

Griffin, who came on board after Hussey was hired, will hire the next chief. Under the Town Manager Act, he makes the appointment although the selectmen have the right to veto the appointment within a 15-day period.

Griffin said due to time constraints it is likely he will appoint an interim or acting chief. He also plans to do a survey of what area chiefs are paid so that Cohasset is competitive. Hussey's salary is in the $125,000 range, Griffin said. Griffin said he would start the process as soon as he returns from vacation on Friday (Aug. 21).

"We used to have a hard time finding grains, but now we get wheat grown in New England," she said. Meats from local farmers – chicken, turkey, pork, beef, lamb – are readily available as well as vegetable and fruits during the season.

But, Mirise said, the real challenge in eating locally comes in the planning and loss of convenience that comes with being a locavore.

"You certainly have to eat seasonally and food storage and preservation becomes an issue," Mirise said.

As an example, she says if a family is taking the effort to buy beef from a local grass fed cow, they might as well buy a half a cow so they'll have the meat all year. "But, you'll need a separate freezer and some people aren't used to thinking that way…it's a huge learning curve."

Mirise readily admits becoming and maintaining a locavore lifestyle is a challenge.

"Personally, this is my passion and I'm still only about 30 percent there. It's really hard. As a culture we still have a ways to go," Mirise said.

Yet, Mirise said the effort makes her realize just how special food is.

The idea of a locavore dinner was brought to Sustainable Cohasset by one of its members, Millie Chapell. In Vermont, towns near Burlington held a weeklong challenge to residents to only eat local foods. The locavore potluck dinners was born and Sustainable Cohasset pulled off a complete "feast" made from local ingredients in January.

"It's great that something is organic, but is it from here? You start to think about that poor head of lettuce at the supermarket and how it had to travel a heck of a long way to get here," Chapell said.

With a little creativity – and many of the members had frozen, dried or canned – the attendees came up with a whole menu of items from fruit spritzer to lavender cookies.

"We all felt great at the end of it. We didn't feel like we have been denied anything, rather we were celebrating the riches we have," Chapell said.

There are other sustainable practices encouraged as part of the dinner. Attendees should bring their own place setting (plate, bowl, mug, silverware, napkin). Everything that can be composted will be composted.

"It's about putting into action what I consider sustainable and good for the earth," Chapell said. "I'm committed to it and this is how I want to live."

Chapell describes the atmosphere at the locavore dinners as "really festive," but hopes the effort can begin to take more steps toward sharing knowledge or holding organized workshops.

The potluck dinner will begin at 5 p.m. at Holly Hill Farm. The film screening will begin at 7 p.m. outside the Tomato Barn.

Attendees are asked to bring a dish to serve eight, made from as many local ingredients as possible. A copy of the recipe and source of ingredients should accompany the dish. Bring a place setting (plate, bowl, mug, silverware, napkin), beverage, serving utensil for your dish and something to sit on. Attendees are encouraged to car pool due to the limited parking at Holly Hill (and it's a sustainable practice).

If you plan to attend, RSVP to Pat Hague at messinghague@comcast.net.

The rain date for the event is Sunday, Aug. 30.

About the movie

In its final film of their summer "Films on the Farm" series, Holly Hill will be screening "Tableland." The documentary chronicles filmmaker Craig Noble's two-year journey across Canada and the US as he visits small farms, wineries and artisan producers across North America. The movie complements the locavore dinner as a testament to sustainable living and the beauty of freshly prepared food. "Tableland" will begin at 7 p.m.

Lobstermen feel the pinch

Slow economy leads to low prices

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

"People tend not to go for a lobster if they're troubled ... if they have bad economic times."
— Bill Adler

Fewer and fewer locals and tourists are shelling out for lobster dinners this summer, according to local lobstermen.

"Lobster is a happy food," said Laddie Dexter, a 70-year-old lobsterman who works out of Marshfield's Green Harbor. "It is a celebration food. Very few people eat it twice a week, or even once a month."

The American lobster is thriving off the Gulf of Maine and down through much of the Massachusetts coastline, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. But many of New England's lobster fishermen are suffering the financial consequences of an overall low demand for the crustaceans.

"Things are not going so good," said Dexter. "The reason is the global economy and especially the local economy is killing us."

Dexter said he has watched the price of lobster fall considerably in the past couple of years. He and other lobstermen are currently paid around $3 per pound for an average lobster.

"It's not enough to cover expenses," Dexter said, citing the cost of fuel and bait as only adding to his financial headache. "Basically, what you're looking at is $200 to untie the boat to go to sea."

Dexter said he is still better poised to take the financial hit than others in his field.

"I'm 70 years old, so I'm pretty well-established," he said. "I own everything, but I'm watching these younger guys dropping by the wayside."

With many lobstermen facing house, boat and car payments, said Dexter, the money to pay down those obligations is "just not there."

Dan McKiernan, an assistant director of the Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries, said prices might continue to decline. According to McKiernan, the lobster season peaks between September and October, and if the 2009 catch does just that, the modest prices that area fisherman bring in could continue to drop.

"If catches remain strong, this could continue right through fall," he said. "That may be putting the lobster business in trouble."

July's sales, McKiernan said, were "30 percent off" compared to the last five years.

In all, catch rates are considered healthier off the coast of Maine and Massachusetts then they have been in past years, but the southernmost portion of the New England fishery has been and is being overfished, McKiernan said.

"But (catches) are still at half of their historic highs. (The lobster) are incredibly resilient," he said of the recent declines in the lobster population, which he explained, "extends off the elbow of Cape Cod, west toward New York City and all the way down to the Carolinas."

"We're in the killing business," said McKiernan, whose focus is on the entire New England lobster fishery. "People like to catch, people like to eat. Our job is to establish rules so fisheries can be sustainable for us and future generations."

Bill Adler, executive director of the Massachusetts Lobstermen's Association in Scituate, said there is a lack of people eating lobster. While there is a lot of lobster available for people to buy, he said the lack of demand has complicated things.

"The problem is that the price is just too low," he said, citing the $3 per pound figure. "People tend not to go for a lobster if they're troubled ... if they have bad economic times."

Another issue is that much of what is caught tends to be new shell, or soft shell lobster, he said.

"The problem with them is they can't be shipped. They can't survive being shipped, and most lobsters leave town," Adler said.

Adler estimates that 40 to 50 percent of what is caught around Marshfield and Scituate are the softer new shell lobsters, but several years ago, he said, a Canadian processor came up with a way to effectively freeze those lobsters.

"The way they do it, you can't tell the difference that the lobster was not alive two minutes ago," he said.

The processor in turn sells its yield to businesses — like cruise liners and casinos — that deal in massive amounts of production. But those businesses have not been immune to the downturn either, he said.

"They come down with their trucks, and believe it or not, they take half of what Maine catches," Adler said.

According to Adler, what the Canadian processor is charging New England lobstermen currently hovers between $2.50 to $2.85 per pound. Two years ago, processors were paying $4 to $4.50 for soft shells, he said, noting that they have the ability to both drive the price up and down.

Dexter said that the Canadian processors had actually helped salvage previous lobster seasons by buying up what clearly could not be sold locally, but at the end of last year, "They had over 25 million pounds in the freezer."

"They didn't need any more so they're willing to buy them, but they want to give you virtually nothing," he said.

McKiernan said right now would be a good time to support local lobstermen by buying locally.

"It's a dynamite time to buy lobsters," he said. "The fisherman are not being paid as much, but in many cases the savings are being passed down to consumers."

Commonwealth Atrius Cancer Center

"After my father had bladder cancer surgery, he was referred to Commonwealth Atrius Cancer Center for radiation, and I was very impressed when I took him for treatments. A year later, at my annual mammogram, I found I had breast cancer. After my surgery, there was no question about where I would go for my radiation treatment. I'm a nurse, and I marvel at the technology combined with personal care provided here. And I certainly appreciate the short drive to the Cancer Center and back to work. Best of all, I'm now cancer-free."

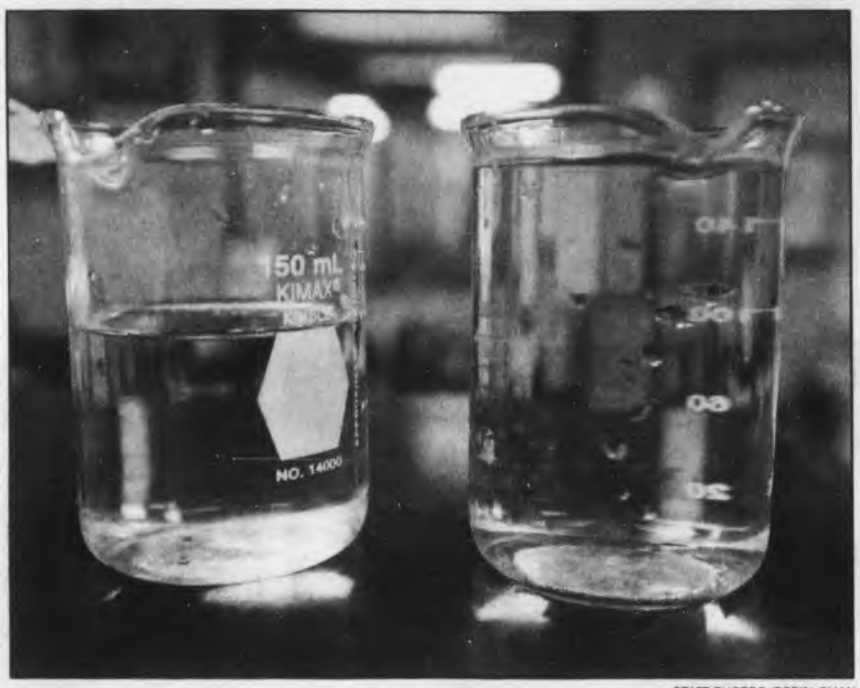
Unlike neighboring towns the parts of Cohasset serviced by town water have never been subject to a summer water ban in recent years. Lily Pond maintains a depth of seven to eight feet in the winter and three to four feet in the summer months.

While quantity of water hasn't been an issue, the water department faces other challenges.

"Compared to a lot of other water sources there is a high level of organics [in Lily Pond]," Hill said. The cause is partly a product of its environment — Lily Pond is shallow and the Aaron River Reservoir is fed by swampland tributaries in Norwell.

In recent years since the Water Department had to change its processing system they have been battling a clean water enemy called manganese. The manganese has always been in the water but, in the last few years, the issue has intensified after the water treatment process was altered to address new federal regulations requiring a reduction in the levels of a potential carcinogen Total Trihalomethanes (TTHM) in the drinking water.



As part of its effort to combat the manganese problem an aeration system was installed which introduces additional oxygen into the pond to curb the manganese and iron from being dissolved in the raw water. Five aeration disks located at the deepest parts of the pond pump oxygen into the pond.

With seasonal fluctuations and multiple variables Hill said it is difficult to specifically pinpoint the impact of the aeration system on the treatment process, and its effect on the manganese, "but, we know it's not hurting," he said.

The raw water from Lily Pond enters the plant through two underground intake pipes it goes into an underground well. The first treatment step introduces two chemicals, lime and permanganate, to the water.

Essentially, Hill said, the chemicals bring the oxygen level up in the water and changes the state of the water, so the manganese and organics can be more easily treated later.

From the underground well, the water heads to the rapid mix tank.

(Right) Water department superintendent Jared Hill points to the new electric wirings that they have installed.

On its way to the rapid mix tank the first coagulate (ferric chloride) is added to the water.

Like a blender, the rapid mix tank adds energy to the water mixing it around and a second coagulate is added to the water. The coagulates aid in separating out all the things that shouldn't be in the final clean water product.

During the entire treatment process the pH is monitored through a computerized system. The pH has to be maintained at the right level in order for the chemicals to do their job properly, Hill said. The plant operators have to strike a careful balance between the amount of energy to add to the water and the amount of chemicals.

From the rapid mix tank the water moves into the flocculation basins, which is located on the second floor. Upstairs the water moves through multiple water tanks as it continues through the treatment process.

"If you look at the water [in the flocculation basins] it doesn't look very good, but that's actually the idea," Hill said, looking down at the brownish water with black flecks floating in it. "All the stuff we don't want in the water begins to stick together."

From the flocculation basins, the water heads to the sedimentation basins. The water is forced to go through a small opening at the bottom of the 30-foot deep tank. The basin has an upward flow to it, which allows the water to go through two-feet tube tall sections. All the "floc" – those little particles the operators are trying to separate from the clean water – sticks to the tubes or settles out to the bottom of the basin.

"The particles in the water are heavier than the water…gravity really does the whole thing here," Hill said. As a result, the bottom of the basin is covered in sludge, which has to be removed on a regular basis.

From the sedimentation basin, the water moves through a series of channels into the filter basins. The water is pushed through several feet of anthracite coal and sand to clean the water.

A relatively new element to this part of the process is an "air scour system" which adds bubbles (like a Jacuzzi) to the water. Previously there was a surface wash system, which would only clean off the top layer. The filter has to be backwashed, or cleaned, usually about once a day.

"At this point the water is clear…it meet standards with the exception of disinfection," Hill said.

Adjacent to the room with the water basins is the chemical room, which Hill said has improved by leaps and bounds over the past few years.

"In my opinion it was the weakest part of facility five years ago," Hill said. New pipes, new controls, new batch making, new valves, new chlorine storage has created a much more efficient operation, he said. "It's really allowed for much better water quality."

Down the hall from the chemical room is the lab and control room. In the lab, four different logs are maintained to monitor water quality.

"In the lab we test for everything under the sun all day long," said Hill. While the plant was upgraded with a high-tech water analyzer system that keep tabs on water at nearly every point during the process, the plant operators still do regular manual testing.

Next door, the control room is where all the information from the various analyzers is reported. The new "SCADA," which stands for Supervisor Control and Data Acquisition, system allows a 24/7 monitoring of the treatment plant.

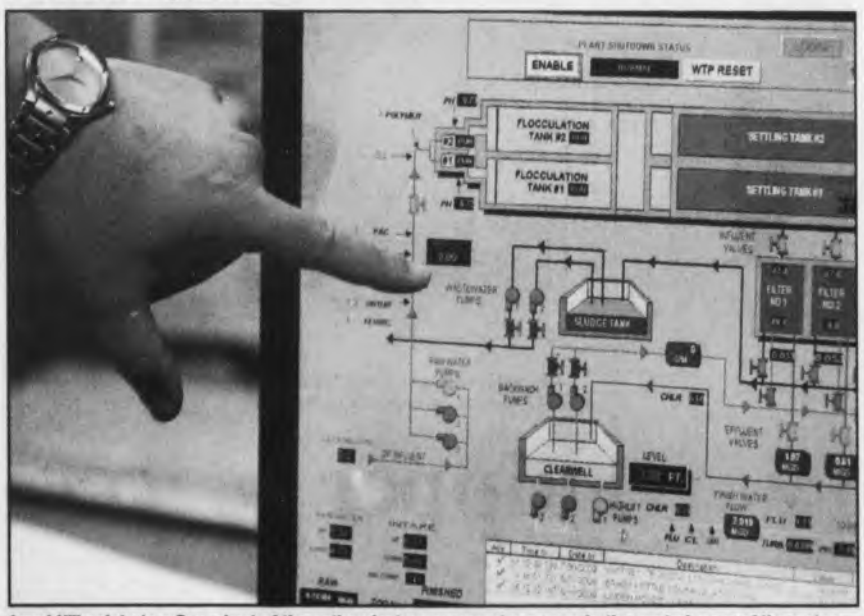
"Two years ago all the monitoring was done manually," Hill said. Now, the plant operators can look at trends, pinpoints problems, control the filters and valves and all the data is triple backed up.

Now, back to the almost clean water, it heads from the filter basins via pipe downstairs where chlorine is injected to disinfect the water of pathogens, viruses. Then the water goes underground to a 100,000 gallon "clear well" where the water is held for a short time before heading out into the distribution system. A final set of chemicals (fluoride, chlorine and lime) is added to the water to ensure water will safely arrive to the faucet before it is pumped out of the clear well and into the distribution system.

"It can take days for the water to get to someone on Jerusalem Road," said Hill.

While the water plant operators are able to maintain a close monitoring system while the water is being processed and cleaned at the plant, they lose some level of control and knowledge when the water heads out into the distribution system. Leaks, corroded or older pipes, and construction all sometimes cause water to come out brown from the sink.

"We've done so much construction by default it creates problems [of dirty water]…it's part of the pains in improving the distribution system," Hill said.



Over the last 10 years 60 percent of the water mains in Cohasset have been replaced.

"That's not something you see everywhere…(The Water Department) got behind for a lot of years," Hill said. But, the price to do the major replacement has come at a price borne by the ratepayers. Cohasset ratepayers have been subject to several rate increases over the past few years and have one of the highest rates in the region.

The Water Treatment Plant on average cleans just under a million gallons of water everyday, but usage does change seasonally. Eleven employees keep the plant running, but the plant is not manned 24-hours a day. Overnight water is stored in the Scituate Hill and Bear Hill water tanks.

"A lot of time people don't think where their water comes from," Hill said.

Over the years they've had hundreds of students come through the plant to see how clean water is produced and he said they are glad to take any resident around the plant.

Jared Hill points to a flow chart of the entire plant on a computer screen in the control room of the water treatment plant at the end of Pond Street.

The Aaron River Reservoir flows into Lily Pond via the Herring Brook which can be seen peeking in between the trees in the middle of the picture.

Cohasset loses the talents of Maggie McGoldrick (Holy Cross), Sarah Coggins (UVM), Torey Hart (URI) and Sammi Lehr (Colby Sawyer), who will all be playing in college this season. Lehr had offers to play soccer, but chose basketball.

Challenge ahead for Lady Skipper soccer

Seven seniors gone from State Title team

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

It will be a challenging and interesting journey for Cohasset coach Deb Beal's girls varsity soccer team this season.

After a hugely successful campaign that included a Division 3 South Sectional championship, Beal's squad will be without the services of three players who will be playing for Division 1 colleges this season, seven total will be gone.

Maggie McGoldrick (Holy Cross), Sarah Coggins (UVM) and Torey Hart (URI) will be on the soccer field playing at the next level. Sammi Lehr (basketball at Colby Sawyer) could have played had she chosen, and Kristin Monaco, Johanna Brophy and Brittany Dunn also graduated.

Dunn and Monaco were both members of Cohasset's softball team that was the South Sectional champion this spring.

"Preparing for the 2009 season will be business as usual for us," Beal said. "We have some holes to fill, three of our seniors from last year's successful team are off representing Division 1 soccer programs. As much as I love summer and the time away from school I am really looking forward to the soccer season beginning. I have designed a preseason that will allow myself and Christine Taggart, my assistant coach, to put the best eleven players on the field and strive to play the best we can everyday."

Beal admitted there will be changes.

"Will things be different? Absolutely," Beal said. "We essentially lost straight up the middle of the field to graduation, all the way from keeper to striker. You don't realize just how much those seven seniors did for this program until you plan a practice without them. I will miss them but I am confident that the kids behind them are prepared to slide into those spots and make it worthwhile."

Beal is looking for a combination of skill and athleticism to fill the holes.

"Using the first few days I plan to test their fitness levels and see who took the training packet I gave out seriously and who didn't," Beal said. "Those kids who played a little and ran a little will be steps behind those that took the time to train and get their workouts in on a regular basis. Not training hurts one's opportunities from the get-go."

"A good friend once quoted John Wooden; 'Failure to prepare is preparing to fail.'" she said. "I know that there is more to life than training for a high school soccer team but from the past seasons and the commitment levels and the successes we have had, they were foolish to not take advantage of the summertime for training."

Beal's captains for the season come in with pretty solid resumes.

Megan Richardson, Tori Lehr, MacKenzie Hart and Meredith Kelly are the 2009 captains.

Lehr and Kelly have both won state titles in basketball as well as the 2008 soccer success. Kelly was a star for the softball team as well and is a three-sport captain.

Beal won't just hand out starting spots on credentials.

The best players for the jobs will be on the field. There are still tryouts and practices for players to earn spots.

Still, she knows what to expect from some of her vererans.

"Some key players I have returning and have very high expectations for are MacKenzie Hart, Meredith Kelly, Tori Lehr, Megan Richardson, Charlotte Malone, Samantha Crough, Caroline Fein, Danielle Sookiasian, Carli Haggerty, Lindsey Davis, Christine Coner,

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Every once in a while I get an idea that sounds good at the time, but when I look back at it think, what was I thinking.

Saturday was one of those days.

In Scituate, there was an event, the 6th annual Greg Moynahan Memorial Homerun Derby.

The derby was founded to remember Greg Moynahan, who passed away in an auto accident at age 23. Proceeds are used to maintain his memorial at Scituate's Greenbush Little League Field and scholarships in his name.

Going to the event was a good idea.

It's always fun watching homeruns, and it's fun when the fences are adjusted for the age groups playing so everyone can hit them.

The what was I thinking part happened when I started looking at the photos I took during the contest.

Bats on baseballs, big swings, and a few lasting memories of the sound of a baseball whistling right over my head.

I've never really noticed that whistling sound the ball makes when a line drive gets that close.

In the past I've always had a glove and was either ducking or making the snag.

With just a camera in my hand, and a pitcher to protect, there was a bit of concern.

When I started with the younger kids, a few got close

The Franconia layout allowed Ryan Riley to play to his strength, consistency off the tee, something he focused on this past off-season. In total, Riley used his driver on all but three holes.

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

If Braintree native Ryan Riley did not break his toe his freshman year at Boston College High School and wasn't able to play varsity soccer, he might not have won the Massachusetts Amateur Public Links Championship last week at Franconia Golf Course in Springfield.

Not only did Riley win the State Publinx, he ran away with it. He lapped the 99-player field, shooting a course record 8-under 63 in the final round to give him a 36-hole total of 13-under 129 and a four-shot victory.

"I never had a run like that. I've played in one-day tournaments where I played well, but in something like this, with such a good field and a course set up by the MGA, this is incomparable to anything I've done," said Riley, who plays out of Norton Country Club. He is also the golf coach at Norton High School.

The 28-year-old high tech consultant took up golf when his soccer career hit a roadblock. After he broke his toe, he gave up soccer cleats for golf shoes and spent his free time working on his game at Braintree Municipal Golf Club.

"I think I owe a huge debt to my grandfather and my mother. They got me into the game and helped me," said Riley.

Although he didn't make the BC High golf varsity until his senior year, he made up for it quickly, earning all-conference honors at Sacred Heart (Conn.) University.

In the Publinx, he fashioned 13 birdies and did not make a single bogey.

"Franconia plays a lot like Norton Country Club (his home course) in that it plays short and is all about wedge play. I brought two putters down with me, not knowing which one I would use, but I was sure happy that I picked the one I did."

This isn't his first venture into the MGA winner's circle. In May, Riley and Herbie Aikens of Plymouth were declared winners of the rain-shortened Massachusetts Four-Ball Championship.

Although he failed to qualify for the Massachusetts Open and Massachusetts Amateur Championship, he got to play in both tournaments as an alternate.

"I never had a run like that. I've played in one-day tournaments where I played well, but in something like this, with such a good field and a course set up by the MGA, this is incomparable to anything I've done."
Ryan Riley, who won the State Public Links Championship

Riley proved he belonged. He made the 36-hole cut at the State Open and advanced to the Round of 16 at the State Amateur.

He said Norton is a good course for him to improve his game. "It's a difficult course and you have to stay in play," he said. He can boom it off the tee with the best of them, but the key to tournament golf, he said, is putting.

"Usually, at public courses, the greens are a lot slower than at private courses, like Belmont (where he played in the State Open) and The Country Club in Brookline (site of the State Amateur). Sometimes it takes a while to get a feel for the speed."

At the Publinx, "I happened to make some putts which makes everything else so much easier," said Riley.

The Franconia layout allowed Riley to play to his strength, consistency off the tee, something that he focused on this past off-season. In total, Riley used his driver on all but three holes.

"After (the first round) I was able to put myself into position and that's what you want to do in order to give yourself a chance to win," said Riley, who will now set his sights on the Massachusetts Mid-Amateur Championship.

"There are certainly other goals that I have set for myself for later on this year, but this is just fantastic."

Region was well represented

Ryan Riley wasn't the only local golfer showcasing his talents at last week's Mass. Public Links Championship at Franconia CC.

Nick Clarke of Plymouth finished fourth at 6-under, former three-time winner Bill Drohen of Stoughton came in fifth with back-to-back rounds of 70-67 and Herbie Aikens of Plymouth was tied for ninth at 139.

Clarke has been playing "since I could walk and I played high school golf at Cape Cod Academy where I won all but two matches in five years of competition," he said. He plays out of Baypointe CC in Wareham and is a plus-1 handicap.

Tee to Green

"Franconia was in great shape, it had small but tough greens. As for Ryan Riley, I actually played a practice round with him at Plymouth Country Club and I can confirm that he is a very steady player who can go low. I did not make the golf team as a freshman at UConn, but I am trying out this year for it," said Clarke.

Champs!

At LeBaron Hills CC in Lakeville, Joe Connor is the new club champion.

According to head pro Tom Rooney, Connors, "is a most deserving champion. He has worked on his game diligently for years," said Rooney. Connor, 19, is a student at Johnson & Wales and a Lakeville resident. He won the 54-hole event by six strokes over second place finisher Colin Andrade.

Bradley Peal, the winner of the A Flight, is 17 and a student at Apponequet High. He finished two shots ahead of Peter Kopcych. Tom Wilkinson was a two-stroke winner in the B Flight over Buddy White with his steady play on the slick greens. Rob Fandel won the C Flight by six shots. A Norton resident, Fandel joined the club in the spring.

DJ Hudson won in a sudden death playoff against Dylan Mattos.

At South Shore Country Club in Hingham, Maureen Cawley successfully defended her women's club championship by beating former two-time champion Diane Harber 3-2 in match play

At Widow Walk's Golf Course in Scituate, Jim Ryan won the men's club championship with a 36-hole score of 161, three better than second place Mark Elbery. Andy Gorton (166) and Bill Ridings (169) completed the top four.

Ridder is a great beginning

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@.CNC.COM

Ridder Farms has a special place in our heart.

I think we were lured to this idyllic setting when we drove by on Route 14 and saw the tall weeping willows framing the manicured fairways.

RIDDER FARM GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB

It looked like heaven on earth.

It was the first time we stepped on an 18-hole regulation course many, many years ago.

Because golf is such an intimidating game, we showed up late on a Sunday afternoon late in August when most golfers have finished their round so all of our shanks and hooks wouldn't bother other golfers.

We looked down the first hole. It measured around 300 yards and we thought it was the longest hole in the world. We walked off the green with a snowman 8 feeling like victors, content with a 4-over par score.

We laugh about it now.

The front nine challenged us then, specially the third hole, a par-3 over water.

The fifth hole, a dogleg left over water seemed so fearsome a hole.

And the ninth, another par-4 over water, turned our knuckles white.

After playing golf for so many years, we fondly return to Ridder Farms now and then, usually to play with an old friend who recently took up the game.

We actually enjoyed attacking the short par-4 first hole.

The front nine did not intimidate us any longer.

But it was so much fun going back and remembering how horrible we were and how much we improved over the years.

Many "expert golfers" might pooh-pooh the front nine as too easy.

But they cannot say that about the back nine.

The golf course was originally a dairy farm run by the Ridder Family. In 1961 they had Henry Holhman design the front nine. It was so popular they added the back nine four years later.

This time they brought in noted New England architect Geoff Cornish to design the back nine.

You don't need to be a golf course architect to see the differences in the two nines.

The par-4 10th demands an accurate drive and the green is deceptively sloped.

There is plenty of landing area, but plenty of trouble surrounds the green on the par-5 11th.

Speaking of landing areas, we'd often see a private plane land behind us on the next tee.

The tee shot on the 12th, a narrow par-4, offers no room for error.

The 14th is a solid par-4 that doglegs to the left.

Long hitters can drive it through the fairway and if you pull it left, there is water to contend with.

Essentially, the front nine gives you the opportunity to put up a good number, and then you need your nerve to keep up the good round.

That's what makes it fun.

Ridder's has done a great service to the local golfing communities.

It has brought many, many new golfers into the game.

They could play here and not become overwhelmed and give up the game.

For those who master it, many might move on the more difficult venues.

But for the average hacker, young and old, male or female, this is still heaven.

QUICK TIP BY JOE KEEFE

Iron out your faults

One way to elevate your game is to improve your iron play. The most times you hit an accurate iron to the green, the more birdie putts you will have. It might be what you need to shave those final few strokes off your game. South Shore Country Club pro Joe Keefe explains. Go to the Wicked Local Sports Extra Web site and follow the link to Clubhouse Extra for a video lesson.

Michaela Brophy, and Carly Oddleifson," Beal said. "I know there are many more players who are working hard and I am anticipating some battles for positions. I have four preseason scrimmages scheduled, which will allow me to see some kids in some spots in a game situation. We are going to Hingham then Archies. Marshfield. and Pembroke are coming to us.. I feel that when we open our season on September 10 at Harwich we will be more than prepared to play."

Beal, a veteran coach, knows how to get the best from her team.

"Nothing is set in stone and I love the process of working things out and finding the kids' strengths, and improving on their weaknesses," she said. "I have been doing it for a lot of years and I still get antsy and nervous before the start of a season. Last year was the worst, because in 2007 we had set our personal bar so high, we had a huge target on our backs and we had to perform every minute. We had great success last year, but that's last year and no one can take that away from us. They surely are not going to hand us anything this fall though. I am excited and I know the kids are and we'll see what happens."

One fun addition will be the new turf field that is expected to be ready by or near the season opener.

"This season has a little excitement in the fact that we will be the only team in the South Shore League with a turf field," she said. "I know the "Got Turf" committee and the community have worked long and hard to make this happen and I am so pleased. I thank them for their dedication. It is a huge advantage having turf as your home field in preps for state tournament play. No more canceling practices or moving inside on wet days, the turf is prepared to handle a little wet"

Official practices are allowed to begin Aug. 27.

Ducking out of harms way

enough to get me thinking.

When I headed to the older kids, I had a sense of security with a batting practice net in front of me.

The only flaw in that thought was that to get a photo, I had to get outside that protection.

Oops.

I finally decided to bring it in when one line drive caught the protective net about a foot in front of me with the older, hardest hitting group.

It was easier knowing that I had a couple of good ones.

My wife started getting flashbacks to days when I used to travel with the Camp Pendleton boxing team and occasionally found my way just about into the ring, usually when the heavyweights were headed right at me.

No problem.

An NFL receiver bearing down on the sideline to make a catch as he's getting tackled. Again, no problem. What's a little tackle gonna hurt?

Actually not much when you have that last little split second to get out of the way.

A whistling baseball though, next time I'm wearing a glove.

Getting that new turf field in Cohasset is going to be a real nice boost for players and fans.

It is amazing how far turf has come from the early days of AstroTurf, which of course was named for the Houston Astros when they played in the Astrodome.

I know when I lived in the desert in California, I dreamed of a turf field, at least for my back yard. I loved the look and the bouncy surface, and the fact that it didn't have to be mowed every two days, more for the weeds that kept cropping up as the grass slowly died away because you really shouldn't grow grass in the desert.

It just isn't right, Las Vegas the exception.

It kind of felt the same way in Florida, especially with water restrictions there, but I wasn't complaining because I had a really cool ride-on mower the color of the Dukes of Hazzard's General Lee. I was going to paint it one time, but it sadly didn't live long enough.

Should be fun to see games there.

Four Catalina Capris 14.2 are towed from the docks out of the harbor and into open waters before the start of sailing class for the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Instructor Danielle Sooklasian winds up before trying to enact revenge on Nate Porter and his crew after she was struck in the back by the sponge during their game of Sponge Tag during sailing class for the Cohasset Sailing Club. The boat with the sponge is "it", and they try to tag another boat by throwing it onto their boat. The purpose of the game is for the crew members to learn the right of way rules.

Getting 'back to basics' at the fair

Marshfield Fair begins 142nd year Aug. 21

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

A week shy of the 142nd annual Marshfield Fair, a Fiesta Shows employee who goes by the name "Mushroom" was busy assembling one the fair's more popular rides.

"A lot of people look at us and say, 'You guys are doing all of that with machines!' Yup … we are the machines," hollered the 28-year-old, standing shirtless and in his blue jeans while atop the blue platform of the attraction called the Arctic Blast.

Mushroom and his co-workers had a lot to do prior to opening day at Marshfield's historic fair, which starts Friday, Aug. 21, and runs until Sunday, Aug. 30.

The rides — which are hauled, assembled and manned every year by employees of Fiesta Shows —require a lot of elbow grease and sweat before eventually being locked into place with hydraulic pumps, said another worker, who goes by the name "Tater."

"It takes three tractor trailer trucks just to bring one of these big rides in," the 25-year-old explained behind a pair of sunglasses and a thick red goatee.

While Tater also operates the big rides, on this day he is mostly making sure the contraptions are properly leveled and that their flashing lights are in working order.

"We all work together," he said, pointing to Mushroom and three others up on the Arctic Blast's platform, "If they finish the Blast, then they'll help on the wheel."

The gondola wheel, which is a modern Ferris wheel, was also in its beginning setup stages. It towered high above the Arctic Blast and into the bright blue sky. Two men, who looked like specks in the distance, could be seen clinging on to the structure's tallest vertical point. According to Tater, they were tightening bolts.

"That's the biggest ride we have," he says.

Fiesta Shows also runs attractions at other South Shore venues such Scituate's annual Knights of Columbus Carnival.

While the Midway is a definite draw to the fair, horse racing used to dominate the 10-day event, said Carlton Chandler, director of the Marshfield Agricultural Society and secretary/treasurer of the fair.

"We had (total) crowds in the racing days of over 200,000," said Chandler, who has helped organize the event since 1979.

But when the races went away in 1991, organizers had a chance to devote more time to the area of farming, he said. Now, organizers have more freedom to focus on "anything related to agriculture and horticulture."

In recent years —despite a recession — the fair's crowds have steadily crawled back up. Last year, Chandler said the fair drew about 175,000 visitors over the 10-day period.

In addition to a range of agricultural workshops and presentations — including lectures, for instance, on how to plant an herb garden — the fair also boasts one of the largest 4H displays in eastern Massachusetts, Chandler said.

"A lot of people come out from the city and they've never seen cows, swine or sheep," he said, noting that as farms continue to disappear in the state, so does general knowledge about farming and livestock.

That is where the fair's 4H displays come in.

"We'll have 400 to 500 rabbits for a single show," Chandler said, also listing the goat, poultry and dog shows as other popular contests. "They're all vying for the blue ribbon. The same goes for the crafts and big quilt contests."

In addition to the usual food offerings, people attending the fair can expect to see wood-turners, glass-blowers, blacksmiths, pottery makers, bird-carvers and chainsaw artists, to name more than a few.

"We're trying to stay away form the commercialization of all these things and get back to the basics."
Carlton Chandler

"We're trying to stay away form the commercialization of all these things and get back to the basics," Chandler said.

The many displays and entertainment acts are all free.

"People can literally come and see magic, demolition derby, music festivals, stilt walkers, live bands and professional wrestling," Chandler said, adding that motocross competitions are also quite a crowd-pleaser.

The main motocross competitions will take place on Wednesday, Aug. 26.

"We'll have trials all throughout the day, even mini-bikes with youngsters," Chandler said, adding that four of the top 10 riders in the country were on hand a few years ago.

Crowds can also gravitate towards the battle of the band and professional wrestling. Expect to see former World Wrestling Entertainment stars like Ax from Demolition and Tito Santana doing their thing in the ring on Saturday, Aug. 22, at 3 and 7 p.m.

Or visitors might prefer the tractor pulls or the Green Harbor Roots & Blues Festival on Sunday, Aug. 30, Chandler said.

Volunteers from First Parish UU hope to make a difference in Guatemala

In October, a group of volunteers from First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset will travel to Antigua, Guatemala, on a 10-day volunteer trip with Common Hope, a nonprofit that works to educate children and empower families in Guatemala. Through the Common Hope program 10 families from First Parish are sponsoring children, and First Parish has for approximately 10 years sponsored a young boy named Salomon. Salomon is entering his last year of high school, which is a major accomplishment in Guatemala where the mandated education is only through sixth grade. Each year the church has provided funding to help with Salomon's education, and First Parish has also collected school supplies to help all the children affiliated with Common Hope.

Common Hope's Vision Team program sends approximately 25 teams of volunteers to Guatemala each year. While volunteers may do anything from building a simple home to joining social workers on family visits, every trip offers participants the opportunity to meet the people whose lives are being changed thanks to thousands who support Common Hope's work. The volunteers have the opportunity to share their skills – teaching, crafts, nursing, sewing, photography, computing, carpentry, etc. Although Vision Teams complete specific tasks, one of the most valuable gifts they bring to Guatemalans is the understanding that others from more privileged communities care and are willing to help.

Vision Teams offer people of varying backgrounds the opportunity to come face-to-face with poverty in Guatemala. Guatemala is one of the poorest countries in the Americas. Education is not free in Guatemala, and many families cannot afford to send their children to school. Less than half of the children graduate from sixth grade. Approximately 45 percent of children under 5 years old are malnourished, and 75 percent of Guatemalans live below the country's poverty line.

After sponsoring a child for seven years, Margie and Steve Brown of Cohasset participated on a 2007 Vision Team trip and saw first hand how the Common Hope formula works – keeping children in school and providing help to their families. Common Hope has a clear focus on education, but also realizes that a child cannot learn if she/he is hungry, sick or forced to work outside the home for the family. Hence, by providing health care, job training for the parents, sweat equity housing assistance and social services for affiliated families, Common Hope is able to achieve the goal of education for the child. The Browns are leading this 2009 trip that will include First Parish members Jack and Carol Martin, Pat Baird, Kay Mixon, Bev Burgess, Dee Lehner and Megan Hansen. They are all learning some conversational Spanish with the help of Cohasset High School teacher Peg Jordan. In 2007 the Browns were able to visit their sponsored child and his family, and were thrilled to know he graduated from high school last fall. His goal is to become a school teacher, which is possible in Guatemala with a high school degree.

The First Parish Vision Team will carry supplies with them to Guatemala. Regular mail is not reliable, and container shipments are very expensive. Hence, Common Hope encourages all volunteers to dedicate some of their luggage to bringing down supplies. The First Parish Vision Team will bring school shoes for the children who start their school year in January. Shoe Market Kids and Kathy Yeager have contributed 15 pairs of shoes. People who are interested in contributing new all black school shoes or the funds to buy them, call First Parish at 781-383-1100. For more information about Common Hope, visit the Web site at commonhope.org.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
HOROSCOPES FOR WEEK OF
AUG. 31, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be careful not to allow the backers of a new financial "deal" to pull the wool over the Lamb's eyes. It could hold fewer plusses and more negatives than you were first led to believe.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good idea to finish all incomplete tasks so that you can devote your attention to next week's projects. The weekend could hold surprises for romantic Fernandas and Ferdinands.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A workplace suggestion you made a while ago that you might have forgotten could come back with a request to turn it from idea to reality. Your social life picks up considerably this weekend.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Someone from the past could return with an intriguing opportunity for a future project. Check into it, by all means. But don't neglect your current responsibilities in the meantime.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Keeping your claws sheathed and using good humor instead to counter someone who's bad-mouthing the Big Cat isn't easy. But it's the best way to avoid more problems down the line.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A workplace situation could improve if you're less critical and more supportive of those who are, after all, trying to do their best. Let them know you're there to help when necessary.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A new job offer might not carry all the benefits you're seeking. Make sure you know what you're entitled to, what is off the table and what is negotiable before you make a decision.

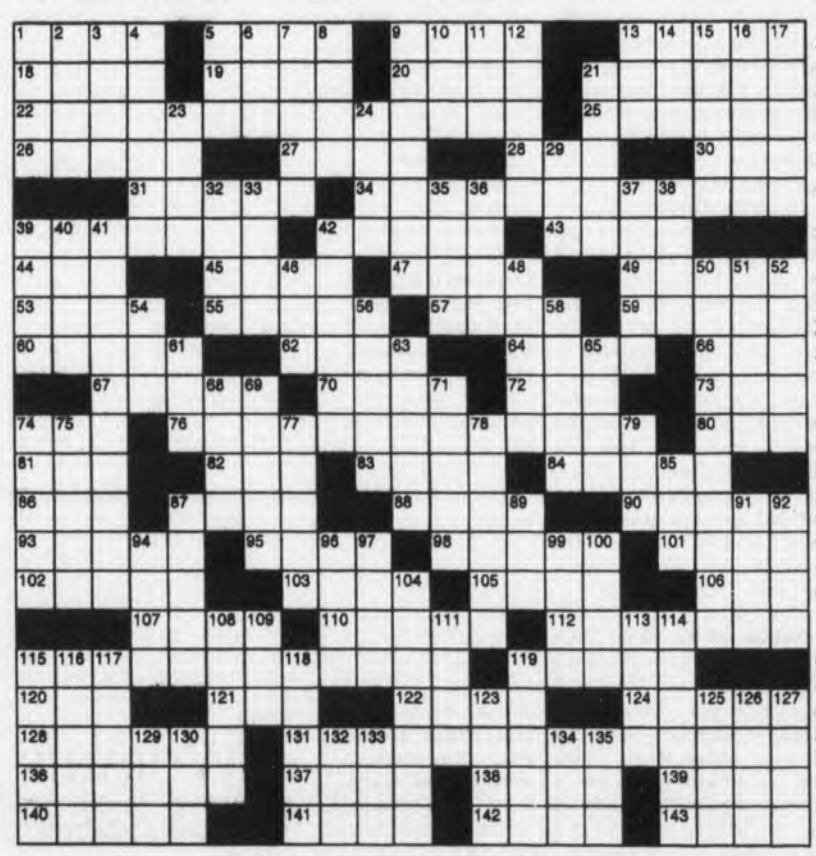
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A social obligation you would rather get out of could hold some surprisingly positive aspects. Why not go and see for yourself? A family member makes a curious request.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Before tackling that new project awaiting you at home or on the job, take time out for some much-deserved pampering to help lift your spirits and restore your energy levels.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your social calendar begins to fill up more quickly than you expected. And that's great. You deserve to enjoy some good fun after so much time spent on serious matters.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A domestic situation continues to improve, thanks to all the tender, loving concern you've shown. A colleague makes a questionable move that you might want to check out sooner rather than later.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A sudden turn in a romantic relationship calls for both a rational and passionate response. Keep the love level high, but also find out why the problem arose in the first place.



(c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You often set high standards for others. But to your credit, you set the same expectations for yourself.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Althea Grace Stamp

COHASSET – Althea Grace Dawes Stamp, age 93, formerly of Hull and Johannesburg, South Africa died peacefully in her sleep on August 11th at the Southeast Rehabilitation and Skilled Care Center, North Easton, Massachusetts. Born in Newark, New Jersey, she was raised in Evanston, Illinois by her mother, Grace Baxter Dawes, and her stepfather, William M. Dawes, the nephew of Vice-President Charles G. Dawes. In 1940 General Dawes aided Althea to travel by boat to England to marry the Hon. Colin Stamp, fourth son of Lord Stamp of Shortlands, Kent, economist and business leader. Daughters Judith, Patricia and Mareba Jocelyn were born during Colin's wartime service in the Royal Navy. In 1947 the family moved to South Africa, where Colin opened the first branch of American Express, and where another daughter, Rowena, was born.

Althea travelled extensively in Africa, Europe and Latin America with Colin and the family, and was an active volunteer in Johannesburg charities, co-founding the Martha Washington Club for expatriate American women. Following her divorce from Colin in 1956, Althea, an adventurous woman, took her daughters on extended safaris in Eastern and Southern Africa, instilling in them a deep love of the continent and its peoples. In 1966, after sending each daughter in turn to study in Massachusetts, she herself returned to the United States and took up residence in the house she inherited from her mother on Black Rock beach, Hull. She lived there until 1993, practicing real estate in Cohasset, volunteering with Fish, and swimming out to Black Rock Island in the summer. Her stepfather William Dawes lived with her until his death in 1985.

Between 1993 and 2006 Althea shared happy retirement years with Eleanor Smith of Cohasset, enjoying the frequent visits of Eleanor's three daughters and her own four, participating in Cohasset's community activities, and continuing to volunteer for Fish. In 2007 Althea moved to Southeast Rehab, where she received outstanding care that was much appreciated by the family.

Movie review

'District 9' is nothing but a big fat zero

By Al Alexander
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

It's been hailed as unique and original, but the truth is "District 9" is as soulless and derivative as every other "E.T." wannabe. That's not a dig at director Neill Blomkamp, nor his co-writer Terri Tatchell. But it is, however, a commentary on a generation of filmmakers that insists on placing style before substance.

When will these kids learn that the most basic element in moviemaking is providing emotionality strong enough to generate empathy for their protagonists? Without it, they're nothing, and "District 9" is most definitely "nothing."

It's all smoke and mirrors, boys, as Dennis Quaid so memorably stated in "Far From Heaven." And that's understandable given the 29-year-old Blomkamp's background in creating special effects and directing TV commercials. Images mean everything to him.

And what he's done in creating such a visually arresting sci-fi fantasy for a mere $30 million (roughly 10 percent of the coin James Cameron dropped on the upcoming "Avatar") is beyond remarkable. But what good are seamless special effects when they're in support of not-so-special characters?

Man and alien alike prove little more than props filling Blomkamp's shaky, handheld shots of life in a filthy, impoverished slum, not unlike Soweto, in which stranded aliens have been unjustly imprisoned by the South African government.

The obvious inference is that of apartheid. But one could just as easily draw a parallel to the prisoners denied jurisprudence at Gitmo, or even the internment of Japanese- Americans during World War II.

It's xenophobia paranoia, and Blomkamp effectively sets a mood in which ethics are regularly compromised by the fear and distrust directed at a species and culture the residents of Blomkamp's native Johannesburg are too lazy and stupid to try to understand.

AP PHOTO/SONY PICTURES

Such people would seem to include, ironically enough, Blomkamp, who fills the screen with borderline offensive racial and social stereotypes, from the Nigerian mercenaries ripping off the aliens by trading cat food for arms (both weapons and limbs) to the clueless, redneck bureaucrat (hello, Michael Brown) climbing to the top on the shirttails of nepotism.

The latter is something Blomkamp definitely knows all about, having had the good fortune to make nice with "Lord of the Rings" Oscar-winner Peter Jackson, who helped his new buddy bankroll "District 9" and lends it instant credibility with the fanboys, as evidenced by their highly enthusiastic reaction to the film at Comic-Con.

If Jackson's name is on it, they're going to turn out en mass. They'll probably even convince themselves that they like "District 9," while overlooking the film's embarrassing lack of logic and depth.

They also will no doubt embrace vastly underdeveloped characters like alien chemist Christopher (Christ metaphor alert!) Johnson (Jason Cope) and his young son Little C.J. (is this kid an alien or a rapper?) even though Blomkamp never bothers to explain where these shrimp-like creatures came from, why they opted to relocate to Johannesburg or even what brand of cat food they prefer.

At least we learn their names; something not afforded the plethora of computer-generated alien extras. But then, we only get to know Chris and C.J. because they happen to be the two "prawns" assisting their great white hope, Wikus van der Merwe (Sharlto Copley), a flunky in the military industrial complex who comes to their aid after a chemical spill causes alien DNA to mix with his.

The threadbare, albeit confusing, plot revolves around Wikus breaking into the heavily fortified headquarters of MNU, the private military contractor responsible for policing the aliens, and confiscating a small canister of the substance the visitors need to refuel the giant spaceship that has hovered ominously over the city for nearly three decades.

But it's not like Wikus is benevolent. He's merely selfish, wanting to help them return home only to save himself. Some hero.

Then all earthlings are jerks in "District 9," which broadly paints humans as the evil villains and aliens as noble martyrs. It's an interesting concept, but what exactly is Blomkamp trying to say that we don't already know?

And for that matter, what is he showing us we haven't already seen? Sure, it's clever shooting in a stark documentary style, a la "Cloverfield" and "The Blair Witch Project," and the slime-spewing creatures are surely like nothing you've ever witnessed. But the story repeatedly stirs feelings of déjà vu.

Beyond that, "District 9" is just flat out boring, causing the mind to drift and the eyes to shut. Of course, that kind of thing is going to happen when you have a leading man as charisma-free as Copley, who only got the gig because he was Blomkamp's childhood friend.

His acting is OK, especially for an amateur. But his failure to engage is fatal. Ditto for the film's curiously flat action scenes. Like a lot of young, talent-starved directors, Blomkamp has no idea how to compose a scene, so he shoots everything in extreme close-up and then slices and dices it up in the editing room to make it seem exciting. But it's not exciting. It's merely confusing and incomprehensible.

Sort of like the screenplay, which starts off inventively, but quickly devolves into nothing but clichés and stereotypes, as it chugs toward a cacophonous climax that blatantly rips off both "Iron Man" and "Transformers."

It's about then that you release that "District 9" is nothing but a big fat zero.

District 9 (R for violence and language.) Cast includes Sharlto Copley. Co-written and directed by Neill Blomkamp. (D+)

It's all Greek to them

Katina Belezos of Hingham does the Sailors Walk with Nina Fuda of Hingham while dancing to the music of Asteria during the Greek Taverna on Saturday. They have been hosting a Taverna since 1981.

A Greek festival, The Panagia Greek Orthodox Church of Cohasset hosted a Greek festival this past weekend at the Sons of Italy, Route 3A, Hingham. The annual celebration of Greek culture, a Taverna, featured Greek food for on site consumption, a marketplace for take home, and fun for the entire family including children's activities. Live music was provided by the Greek band Asteria, Harry Athanasiou conducting.

Bob Therrien of Hull slices pieces of ground lamb for gyros that they were making at the Taverna on Saturday.

Ginny Alex, 10, of Cohasset helps out with the Greek Taverna by setting signs up for the church.

Schools ready for students

First day is Wednesday, Sept. 2

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Every first day of school is a 'new beginning.' It never gets old. The first day is always exciting."
— Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh

It's time to trade in those beach bags for backpacks, flip flops for new sneakers, and lazy summer afternoons for homework and extra-curricular activities. It's back to school time for Cohasset students.

The Osgood, Deer Hill and Middle-High Schools will open their doors this coming Wednesday, Sept. 2. It is the first time in recent memory where Cohasset has opted to open the school year before Labor Day.

"We hope this will ease some of the pressure to meet the 180-day requirement when it becomes necessary to close school because of inclement weather during the school year," Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said. However, Friday, Sept. 4 will be a school holiday so students and their families can have an extra long Labor Day weekend.

"Every first day of school is a 'new beginning.' It never gets old. The first day is always exciting," said Walsh.

There has been some reorganization changes this school year: department heads have been replaced with a program supervisor model. There will be a STEM (science, technology, engineering, and mathematics) department and humanities (English language arts and social studies) department. Walsh said the reorganization would provide an increase in opportunities for interdisciplinary learning and development of 21st century skills.

Also new this year, thanks to a Town Meeting vote and private fundraising, is Alumni Field's new artificial turf field, which is expected to be ready for play by the end of September.

Walsh said the schools have been fortunate to receive gifts from the PSO and Cohasset Education Foundation so both parents and kids can look forward to more technology in the classroom. A new standards-based reporting/assessment system will debut at both Osgood and Deer Hill.

School administration and the School Committee will have plenty of homework this year as they revisit the schools' Strategic Plan 2004-2009 and begin the development of a new five-year strategic plan.

"It is always about preparing for and meeting the future needs of our children," Walsh said.

Fate of Minot Light still up in the air

Historical Society can't take it on

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Board of Selectmen wants to see Minot Light preserved.

But, is the town the right entity to care for the historical lighthouse?

The bottom line is, right now, they aren't sure. The Selectmen decided Monday night they need more information before taking any steps toward getting involved.

To that end, with over a month to go before a letter of interest is due, two selectmen will spend time to investigating the cost, feasibility and general information of assuming the caretaker's role of Minot Light.

Earlier this month, the United States General Services Administration announced the availability of Minot Light to a not-for-profit, government or local agency free of charge. If no nonprofit agency is found to take control of the light, the lighthouse will be sold at public auction.

The lighthouse giveaway is part of the National Historic Lighthouse Act of 2000, which began the process of taking historic lighthouses off of the national ledger.

According to the notice of availability, the light could be used for educational, park, recreational, cultural or historic preservation purposes. The Coast Guard would continue to maintain the foghorn and actual light, which serves as a navigational aid by flashing in a 1-4-3 pattern that can be visible within 15 miles.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said she has heard a wide range of comments from the public, "some are adamant the town should run in the other direction while others think the town should save the light."

But, she and the other Selectmen shared concerns about the maintenance cost and liability insurance.

"How do we even determine the cost of upkeep?" questioned Chairman Paul Carlson. A major renovation was done to the top portion of the lighthouse about 20 years ago, but the board did not have records about the routine costs in maintaining the lighthouse.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the risk — and major cost — could come from below the water where the 115-foot structure is attached to the ledge.

"The (recent) renovation only addressed the top half of the light," Dormitzer said.

Other questions included what could be done with Minot Light if the town owned it.

H1N1 worries

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With school opening next week, parents have plenty of last minute details and worries about the impending school year.

Among the concerns for both parents and school officials is student health. The presence of the H1N1 influenza ("swine flu") has schools thinking about policy and procedure — and potential vaccination clinics.

Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin and Health Agent Joe Godzik recently met with Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh to discuss the H1N1 influenza and the potential of having school-based vaccination clinics.

A Coast Guard rescue swimmer is lowered to the troubled boat to assist its two passengers and dog. All were airlifted from the boat around 6p.m. on Saturday. The boat was later removed from the rocks.

Helicopter rescue by sea

Two passengers, dog airlifted from boat

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

This past Saturday, Cohasset was yet again the scene for a dramatic sea rescue.

On August 22, the Harbormaster responded to Black Rock Beach where a powerboat had crashed up on to a ledge outcropping.

Close to four hours later, the two male passengers and dog aboard the boat were hoisted from the boat by a Coast Guard helicopter.

"From what I gathered the passengers were fishing when they ran in to engine problems," said Harbormaster Lorrie Gibbons. They drifted closer and closer to the ledge outcropping in the area of Doctor's Island (off Black Rock Beach) when a wave picked up the boat and more or less left it wedged between a rock outcropping. The passengers were unable to maneuver the boat off of it. To make matters worse, the tide had just turned and was on its way out.

Lacking a working marine radio, one of the two male passengers called Cohasset Police requesting Harbormaster assistance from his cell phone. The caller was able to give basic information about his situation and location before his cell phone dropped the call.

Dispatched by the police, Gibbons headed from the harbor to the scene in one boat around 2:15p.m.

"When we arrived, it was obvious the boat wasn't going to come off the rocks and we couldn't safely get our boat close enough to get the passengers," Gibbons said.

She called in the situation to the Coast Guard hoping their inflatable could get in close enough to safely remove passengers from the boat.

"We were talking with the passengers, they were fine. There was no emergency or injuries," Gibbons said. The troubled boat, a Pro-Line powerboat, was named Chase the Wind and is owned by a Dedham man, Gibbons said.

When the Coast Guard arrived, they did not feel it was safe to bring the boat in to get the passengers.

With the impending arrival of Hurricane Bill and expected high seas, the Coast Guard requested one of their helicopters to come and airlift the passengers and dog off the boat. According to Gibbons, the helicopter had been in New York responding to a swimmer in trouble.

Around 6p.m., the Coast Guard helicopter arrived at Black Rock Beach. A rescue swimmer was lowered to the boat and the passengers and dog were safely removed one by one from the boat by a basket.

A small group of people and cars gathered at the foot of Forest Avenue to watch the helicopter rescue.

The Harbormaster stayed on the scene until the passengers were airlifted from the vessel. A strobe light was placed on the boat to alert any boaters in the area of its presence. Later, the boat was removed from the rocks by a marine towing company.

"It was just another unfortunate accident my summer of accidents," said Gibbons.

The Harbormaster Department has been busy all summer and has had three major incidents starting with a distressed kayaker off Whitehead in late April, then a 39-foot boat sunk after hitting Grampus Ledge almost two weeks ago, and now the helicopter rescue off Black Rock Beach.

Sunk boat raised from depths

Less than 48 hours after the Aquaholic II, a 39-foot powerboat, hit ledge and sunk on Sunday, Aug. 16 it was raised from bottom of the ocean about 50-feet down. Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons and her department were on the scene last Tuesday, Aug. 18 to provide security detail for the operation. Sea Tow, a marine towing company, brought the boat to the surface.

According to Gibbons, the effort to raise the boat was an all-day affair. The divers and crew arrived in Cohasset around 10a.m. and concluded the operation around 7:30p.m. First, divers were sent to locate the boat on the bottom. Then, large straps were placed around the bottom of the boat and "lift bags" were attached. Air was pumped into the lift bags to float the boat to the surface.

To Gibbons' knowledge, the boat was declared a total loss.

The Harbormaster Department's two commercial pumps were also casualties of the rescue attempt. They were retrieved from the boat, but Gibbons does not believe they will work again.

"They will need to be replaced because they were also in 50-feet of water and the saltwater does so much damage," Gibbons said.

MV crashes adding up

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

• Police and fire responded to a crash at 130 King Street (in the parking lot) on Wednesday, Aug. 26 at 3:28pm. The driver was an 83-year-old woman from Cohasset driving a 1998 Volvo wagon. She mis-judged the turn in the parking lot of the old "Maggies Corner" and went off of a retaining wall that separates the old Maggie's building from the Cohasset Food Mart parking lot. There were no injuries and the vehicle had to be towed. The operator was not cited, but police did notify the RMV and requested that she be re-road tested.

• At 2:52 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 17), a two-car accident occurred on Brewster Road and Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Pilgrim Bank. Police said a 1979 Chevrolet El Camino, operated by a 21-year-old Scituate man, "rear-ended" a 2002 Saturn, driven by a 65-year-old Cohasset man.

The Saturn was at the stop sign when the accident occurred. Neither car was towed and there were no apparent injuries, police said.

• A 1986 VW with a for-sale sign in the window that was parked in front of a house on Pond Street was hit sometime between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 17) in an apparent hit and run, police said. There was a dent on the driver's side of the VW above the wheel. Police have no suspects.

• At 8:05 a.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 18), a 2009 Chevrolet pickup, operated by a 26-year-old Cohasset man, backed into a 2004 Chevrolet pickup, operated by a 29-year-old man from Seattle. Both trucks were parked on Bancroft Way by Milliken Field. Neither truck was towed and there were no apparent injuries, police said.

• At 2:02 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 18), a 26-year-old Weymouth man was operating a 1999 GMC pickup northbound on Jerusalem Road by the Greek Church when he slowed down to turn left into a driveway and was "rear-ended" by a motorized scooter. The 21-year-old Cohasset woman on the scooter was thrown off the moped; she was wearing a helmet and refused medical treatment at the scene, police said. Apparently she did not notice that the pickup was making a left and crashed into the back of the truck.

• Police said an 81-year-old Scituate man operating a 2007 Toyota Camry was backing out of a parking spot on Elm Street in front of Billy Oliver's Boatworks when he backed into a 2007 Honda Odyssey van, operated by a 42-year-old Cohasset woman, who was traveling on Elm Street. There were no apparent injuries and neither vehicle was towed, police said. The driver of the Toyota was cited for failure to use care when backing up.

• At 3:24 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 20), a 17-year-old Hingham boy was operating a 1998 Toyota Camry in the far right lane along 3A when he attempted to turn left into Coastal Nissan. Police said he cut in front of a Harley Davidson motorcycle that was also headed south and was in the inside lane. A 46-year-old Scituate man was operating the Harley. Neither vehicle was towed and there were no apparent injuries. However, the 17-year-old was operating on a learner's permit and his passenger, who was 18, did not meet

Chief hiring process

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he has received many concerned phone calls since it was announced Police Chief James Hussey would be leaving Cohasset in October. Selectmen Vice Chair Karen Quigley said she has gotten the same.

"People are really concerned about who the next chief will be and there are regrets about losing him," Dormitzer said, adding he wants to be sure the process to hire a new police chief is clear and transparent.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he is getting ready to advertise the position and doing research to ensure Cohasset is competitive salary-wise. He said he plans to form an evaluative team to narrow down the applications and will likely create a committee to help him interview the final candidates.

"(Chief Hussey) has taken the police force to a whole new level," said Selectman Ted Carr. "I admire him for wanting to finish up his career in Boston, but it is sad to see him go."

James Lane, 3A plans

Two applications scheduled to continue talks with the Planning Board this past Wednesday (Aug. 19) were postponed to Wednesday, Sept. 23.

The proposed 17-unit condominium development at 8 James Lane requested additional time for engineers to work on the plans. The James Lane project will be back before the Planning Board at 7:15 p.m. on Sept. 23. At its last public hearing concerning the project, Planning Board members expressed frustration about the lack of a complete, up-to-date set of plans.

A preliminary subdivision proposal put forth by CCI-Energy, the green energy company behind Cohasset's first turbine project proposal, was continued to Sept. 23 at 8 p.m. The proposal included plans to build a new access road off Route 3A near Hingham Lumber to crest of the hill behind Graham Waste. At the first discussion, held in early July, the Planning Board and its consulting engineer had concerns about the steep grade of the proposed road. The applicant requested more time to work on the proposal.

EA director hired

A new director of Cohasset Elder Affairs is expected to be on board in early September.

Coral Grande of Gloucester, who has most recently served as the Gloucester Council on Aging Executive Director, was chosen from among 35 applications for the position.

Linda Elworthy, who had served as director for the past three years, passed away unexpectedly in late May leaving the position vacant.

Under the Town Manager Act, Town Manager Bill Griffin has the authority to hire the new Elder Affairs Director. After advertising the position in the Boston Globe, the 35 applications were given to the Council on Elder Affairs to narrow down the candidates. A Council sub-committee interviewed eight candidates and four were recommended for Griffin's consideration.

Finance Director Mike Buckley; Council on Elder Affairs member Anna Abbruzzese; and Cohasset Social Service League President Marita Carpenter joined Griffin in interviewing and evaluating the final candidates.

"The committee was unanimous and strong in its recommendation," Griffin said. "(Grande) has a wonderful personality to engage with the seniors and community."

Grande has served as the Executive Director of the Gloucester Council on Aging from 1994 to 2009 and in several other elder care related positions. While the Director of the Gloucester Council on Aging, the city constructed and opened a new senior center – something that is on the radar for Cohasset in the coming years.

Griffin said Grande's tentative start date is Tuesday, Sept. 8.

The Board of Selectmen unanimously voted to waive its right to veto the appointment.

"It looks like it is another first class appointment for us," said Selectmen chair Paul Carlson.

Griffin and the board commended the hard work done by the staff at Cohasset Elder Affairs in the interim.

Cohasset High in top 25

Cohasset was ranked in the top 25 public high schools in the Boston area by Boston Magazine.

Cohasset High was ranked 21 out of 150 schools in eastern Massachusetts and was the highest ranking high school on the South Shore. Hingham High was ranked 27.

This year the annual Boston Magazine rankings were computed by statistician George Recck, director of the Math Resource Center at Babson College. As in years past, data was gathered on area schools by consulting school officials and websites, as well as the Massachusetts Department of Education. MCAS scores, SAT scores, graduation rate, teacher-student ratio were all used in the calculation.

With this information, Recck calculated mean scores for each data category and then ranked schools based on their distance from the averages. With this traditional performance ranking in hand, he also evaluated performance against tuition, producing a ranking that shows which high schools deliver the most academic bang for the buck.

the conditions on a learner's permit that requires the unlicensed teen driver to be with someone 21 or older. The Hingham teen is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle. The passenger is being summonsed for allowing improper operation of his car.

• Police said a motorist was distracted by his Blackberry when he ran off the road and hit a tree at about 7:37 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 20) at the intersection of Beechwood and Doane streets. Police said the 43-year-old Cohasset man was attempting to make a left onto Doane when the accident occurred. His BMW sustained major damage and had to be towed. The airbags deployed and the driver had no apparent injuries, police said.

• At 11:37 a.m. on Saturday (Aug. 21), an 88-year-old Weymouth man operating a 2002 Mazda Protégé "rear-ended" a 2005 Toyota Corolla, operated by a 54-year-old Cohasset woman. Both vehicles were headed north on Route 3A and the accident occurred when the Corolla stopped to take a left near the Golden Living Center. The Mazda caught the rear of the Corolla and tore the bumper off, police said. The operator of the Corolla had her blinker on. The Weymouth man was cited for following too closely on a state highway.

There were no injuries and the vehicle had to be towed. The operator was not cited, but police did notify the RMV and requested that she be re-road tested.

Ride home

A resident, who was away in Arizona with his wife, called police when his stepson, who is not from the area, got off at the North Scituate Train Station instead of the Cohasset Station. The caller requested police pick him up and bring him to the Cohasset station where his car was parked. The call came in after 11 p.m. and a lieutenant gave the young man a ride to his car.

In an unrelated matter, a woman called 9-1-1 last weekend saying she had been at a show at the Music Circus and needed a ride home to Cambridge. Because of the distance, police advised her to call a taxi.

Religious group

Police are still investigating a complaint from an Ash Street resident about information from a religious group that had been placed on her kitchen table while she was out. The door was unlocked. Although religious groups do not have to register with police when they go door-to-door, police have not had any other complaints so the incident remains a mystery.

Erratic operation

An 84-year-old Hull woman who had become confused at the new Scituate rotary and went around the wrong way, was not impaired, police said. Scituate Police notified Cohasset about a blue sedan that was heading north that had been reported as being driven erratically. Cohasset police stopped the car at 3A and lower King Street. Police checked out the woman's driving which was fine and she was sent on her way.

Threats

A 28-year-old Hull man is being summonsed to court for allegedly making threats to a 24-year-old Scituate man who had not paid his bill. The Hull man operates a business in Cohasset.

Missing jumper

Thinking he would get into trouble, a 13-year-old bridge jumper apparently got spooked when he saw the police and hid in the woods last Wednesday (Aug. 19). A police detective saw the boy, who was with a group, jump off the bridge and sounded the alarm when he did not see him surface. The boy's bike was still there at the Border Street bridge, police said. The detective talked to the other kids and got a hold of one of the missing boy's parents, who came to the scene. The boy eventually came out of the woods. Police said they were concerned about his welfare.

Expired sticker

A 21-year-old Hull woman is being summonsed to court for driving on an expired license and driving an unregistered motor vehicle, police said. An officer stopped the 2001 Pontiac Grand Prix at 11:37 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 20) after seeing the sticker on the plate had expired. Further investigation revealed her license and registration were non-renewable due to outstanding parking tickets in several towns, police said.

Scammed

Police are investigating an apparent scam involving sports cards being traded over the Internet. A caller from California notified Cohasset police last week that he had worked out a trade with a Cohasset resident involving several autographed cards valued at $850 for an autographed Tom Brady rookie card, also valued at $850. The California caller sent the cards to Cohasset and never received the Brady card. Cohasset detectives are investigating.

Dog in distress

A letter carrier notified police last Thursday afternoon (Aug. 20) after seeing a dog in apparent heat distress outside at a home along the route. There were also other dogs inside the home without air conditioning. The animal control officer went to the scene and found that the dogs were OK, police said.

Check larceny

Police are investigating a report last week of $1200 larceny by check. A local employer reported an employee said he had lost the check so the business issued another one. Shortly thereafter, the original check was also cashed. The alleged perpetrator is no longer an employee, police said.

Wired money

A Beechwood Street caller reported last week that he had wired money to Anchorage, Alaska to purchase a 2008 Yamaha Rhino ATV (all-terrain vehicle) on Craig's List but has not received the vehicle. Detectives are investigating.

Graffiti

Police are investigating a considerable amount graffiti on traffic signs and the road near the Beechwood Ball Park and Beechwood Cemetery. Police have taken photos of the vandalism and will see if it matches up with any other "taggers." A lot of spray paint was used, police said. The incident was reported last Saturday morning (Aug. 22).

Stolen bike

A 63-year-old Cohasset man reported that his son's bike was stolen from the Swim Center on Saturday (Aug. 22). The boy is a lifeguard at the pool. The bike is a black Karakorum with blue lettering and is valued at $700, police said.

Recycling agreement inked

Hull residents to recycle at RTF

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The towns of Cohasset and Hull are moving forward with a recycling partnership.

Beginning sometime in September, Hull residents will have the opportunity to bring their recyclables to the Cohasset Recycling Facility.

The Board of Selectmen approved an inter-municipal agreement between the two towns after discussing some concerns.

Hull Town Manager Phil Lemnios told the Selectmen the town's recycling center had to be closed in June due to fiscal constraints. With municipalities struggling with cutbacks, he said regionalization is coming back "into vogue" and was looking forward to making this partnership work.

Residents of Hull will have the option to purchase a "very distinctive sticker" for $70 in order to recycle in Cohasset. Hull residents will only be allowed to bring their recyclables on Saturdays from 7:30a.m. to 5:30p.m. (two extra hours have been added with the idea of spreading out the impact of the additional users).

"We are making the rules of the road very clear," said Lemnios.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley, calling herself "the grinch" on this issue, recommended several changes with the draft inter-municipal agreement.

First, while there was a minimum number of Hull participants needed — 300 sticker holders — there was no stated maximum number. Given the congestion often found at the Recycling Transfer Facility, Quigley was concerned about having more than 475 Hull participants. She said many residents had spoken to her about similar concerns.

"Concerns have been expressed to me about (the RTF's) ability to digest the increased traffic. We have a small facility and access is off a winding, narrow road. There are already instances of residents expressing frustration," Quigley said.

Lemnios said historically recycling participants had not exceeded 475 and he did not expect more than that to pay more money to go to Cohasset. He was willing to place a 600-sticker cap on the program.

Quigley also requested wording be placed in the agreement allowing the selectmen to review the sticker cost annually.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson suggested the board review the program three months after the 300 participant "critical mass" level had been reached.

"This has the potential to be a win-win for the towns," said Carlson.

The Board of Selectmen approved the inter-municipal agreement contingent on the Hull Board of Selectmen agreeing to several changes. Quigley, reiterating concerns about the 600-sticker cap, did not vote in favor of the agreement.

As of Monday night, the Hull Board of Selectmen still had to discuss the several changes and approve the agreement.

All beaches open this week

This week, all Cohasset beaches are open for swimming. All six sampling locations and recreational swimming areas came back with results well within the state limits.

The Board of Heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming. If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water beaches are closed or a geometric mean over 35 colonies of enterococci spread over a five week period.

Bassing Beach, the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach and Black Rock beach are tested weekly during the summer. The results are posted on the Department of Public Health's website. Testing results for all sampling stations are available on the Department of Public Health website dating back to the summer of 2002.

The most common health effects related to swimming in polluted waters could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastro-intestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers swallowing water.

For more information on beach closures, please contact the board of health at (781) 383-4116.

Please follow Little Harbor rules

To all boaters and residents of Little Harbor, as you are aware, Little Harbor is very special and hopefully always will be. However, the harbor will need the cooperation of all to keep it that way.

The following bylaws were voted at town meeting so that the people who like to swim, sail, kayak, canoe and enjoy other water activities, without the concern of fast operating powerboats, could enjoy the harbor.

- Article 7, section 32 states: "Jet skis, surf jets, and water bikes stall not be operated at a speed in excess of twelve miles per hour while in the confines of the harbor."
- Article 9, section 5 states: "No person shall operate a boat in Little Harbor white towing a water skier, aqua plane or other similar device except on even numbered days." An easy reminder is even: fast and odd: slow.

In addition, Little Harbor has a wide variety of birdlife, many of whom nest on the islands and rocks. Recently, the terns have resumed nesting in the harbor, which is a very welcome sight after many years of absence. It is important to their species that these nests are not disturbed.

And lastly, in spring and late summer many shore birds find Little Harbor's sand flats a vital feeding ground on their long migration as far as Central and South America. Dogs running and chasing them, although fun for the dog, interrupt their ability to build the necessary fat and energy reserves to continue migrating. Please respect their need to feed and rest in order to prepare for the long trip south.

Respecting rules at Sandy Beach

Sandy Beach Association asks that people respect the rules of the beach. Alcohol, fires, fishing, glass bottles or flotation devices are prohibited anywhere on the beach. Frisbees, hard balls, kites, skimmers and boogies boards are allowed in orange cone marked areas only. Climbing on rocks on either side of the beach is dangerous and prohibited.

Dogs are not permitted on the beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., from mid-June through Labor Day. If people bring pets to the beach during off-hours, it is imperative that they pick up after the dog.

Residents should have received the Sandy Beach Association annual fundraising letter. This mailing is the only source of fundraising for the Sandy Beach Association. The fee for the parking sticker funds the parking lot only – it does not cover the costs of beach cleanup, staffing or beach operations. The beach can't operate as it does without the support of Cohasset residents. Donations can be sent to P.O. Box 285, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Town receives insurance premium credits

The town earned the credits through its MIIA membership and participation in loss prevention and risk management activities...

Committed to keeping the community safer and fiscally stronger, the Town of Cohasset has received $52,424 back on its workers compensation and property casualty insurance costs. The town earned the credits through its MIIA membership and participation in loss prevention and risk management activities, which are part of the Rewards program offered by the Massachusetts Interlocal Insurance Association (MIIA), Cohasset's insurance provider.

MIIA offers several no cost Rewards program training and educational courses as a membership benefit to help members reduce their risk and insurance premiums. Member municipalities earn incremental insurance credits through proactive and voluntary participation in the training activities over the course of the year, and by implementing loss control measures and instituting management policies and procedures that reduce injuries, accidents and property damage.

"As a non-profit organization, MIIA works with members as a partner to develop innovative programs that help them save resources without sacrificing coverage during this challenging economic time," said MIIA Executive Director Stanley Corcoran. "The Rewards program provides an incentive to members to increase their education and awareness which ultimately reduces risks and expensive claims. We applaud our participating members who have taken these actions to lower their insurance costs and lessen impact on taxpayers."

We'll make you smile.

Busy Professional loses 25 pounds and gains confidence!

I joined Get In Shape For Women 6 months ago. I'm so excited that I've lost 25 pounds and dropped 4 dress sizes! I needed a consistent regiment that included exercise and nutrition. My hardest obstacle was to make wiser food choices. With the help of my trainers, I was able to make better food choices based on their suggestions that gave me energy all day. The trainers are motivational and compassionate about my progress. Losing the weight and inches has given me more confidence to do things that I didn't think I could do before, like run 5k's. I'm very close to my goal weight and I have great confidence that I'll get there in no time!

Small town with great taste

Tickets on sale for Cohasset Day's Fine Food Galore

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Hannah Buckley of French Memories, left, serves an apricot tart to Maureen Thomas, who was visiting from England, during last year's Cohasset Day.

The second Annual Cohasset Day is right around the corner — Saturday, Sept. 12th (rain date Sept. 13th). Bring your neighbors, friends, family and most importantly your appetite! As part of this celebration of small town living there will be big tastings as part of the "Fine Food Galore"— a gathering of more than 22 restaurants and food shops who will all be serving their fare up and down South Main Street, including Cohasset's newest establishments Jailhouse Rocks; 5 South Main; Cohasset Confectionary; and JJ's Junction. Cohasset Day activities are free and open to residents and non-residents, however, there is a cost for attending Fine Food Galore. This celebration of food will be from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the Village.

"Cohasset Day is a crowd of familiar faces who understand the importance of keeping it local in order to sustain our community. Everyone, young and old, is out sampling food, shopping, enjoying the live music and having a lot of fun. They are the same people who make it possible for all of us who own a local business to thrive and be successful in such a small town. Their support and patronage is appreciated by all of us," says Brian Houlihan, Coordinator of Fine Food Galore and Chef/Owner, along with wife Tristen, of Bia Bistro. Brian promised that Bia would be offering something "delicious" on Sept. 12.

Cohasset Day is free and open to residents and non-residents alike, however the most delicious part of the day, the Fine Foods Galore event within the event, does have a price of admission. Cost for Advance tickets are $20 for Family; $10 for individuals. Event day tickets are $25 for Family; $15 for Individuals. Tickets go on sale this weekend and everyone is encouraged to buy them in advance in order to save money and time on Cohasset Day.

Proceeds from Fine Food Galore will benefit The Council on Elder Affairs, Cohasset Food Pantry, and the American Legion George H. Mealy Post 118.

Fine Food Galore tickets can be purchased at Darilynn's Gifts, French Memories and Stop & Shop (Cohasset only) up through Friday, Sept. 11. New this year is the wristband that will be given to all Fine Food Galore attendees at the admission/ticket table on event day. The wristband must be shown to each food merchant before being served. The new wristbands are just one improvement that the Cohasset Day Committee has been working on behind the scenes in order to make this second Annual Event every bit as successful as the inaugural one of last year. Proceeds from Fine Food Galore will benefit The Council on Elder Affairs, Cohasset Food Pantry, and the American Legion George H. Mealy Post 118.

Hunger pangs will be satisfied with things like pizza from Simply Fresh and 3A Pizza and Grille; mini-croissants, cookies and tarts from French Memories; Chowder from Mullaney's; Del's Lemonade; candy from Jailhouse Rocks; and braised short ribs from Scarlet Oak Tavern. This is just a sampling of the mouthwatering food and beverages that will be offered that day.

The full list of culinary treats will include samplings from Bia, French Memories, Red Lion, All the Best, Starbuck's, Stop & Shop, Shaws, Simply Fresh, Atlantic Bagel, Dunkin Donuts, 3A Pizza and Grille, Mullaney's Seafood, Papa Gino's, Victoria's, JJ's and JJ's Junction, Cohasset Lobster Pound, Tedeschi's, Del's Lemonade, 5 South Main, Cohasset Confectionary Company, Jailhouse Rocks, , Scarlet Oak Tavern, and Tosca Restaurant

Cohasset Day is designed to bring families to the town common for some old fashioned fun. In addition to the parade, the day includes a fashion show by Ports; the second Cohasset Classic Car Concours, music all afternoon by Rusty Skippers, J Place's "Drift Away" and featuring the Jackson Weatherbee Band, a Kids Duathlon and Games on the Common, special Farmer's Market, South Shore Center Art exhibit and Historical Society Open House at John Wilson House and Maritime Museum.

Visit www.cohassetday.org and watch the Mariner for more information. Most importantly, take out your calendar right now and block out "Cohasset Day" on Saturday, Sept. 12. Make plans to enjoy this new Cohasset tradition that encourages all of us to enjoy music, food, fun and shopping all within the beautiful boundaries of our seaside town.

Schools ready for students

Joseph Osgood School

Osgood School is anticipating the arrival of the Cohasset's youngest students. The entire staff of the Osgood School will greet a total of 420students, including three classrooms of pre-schoolers, as they come off the buses for the first few days of school.

"We have many activities planned to make children and their families feel at ease. We want to make this transition as smooth as possible," said Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan.

In fact, Osgood staff has been working since last spring to make the transition to a new grade (or new school) an experience as positive as possible. Kindergarteners and parents were invited to an orientation day last spring, a meet and greet in June, and a summer play date this past week. The kindergarten students have another opportunity to get acquainted with their teachers and classrooms on Wednesday and Thursday during orientation and screening. They will delve into their regular school routine after Labor Day on Tuesday, Sept. 8.

Rising kindergarteners and first graders took part in a "moving up" day at the end of the school year.

The different activities take away some of the mystery of a new school or a new grade, said Sheehan.

Sheehan describes the feeling right now in the school as "excitement." Many of the teachers have attended workshops or classes over the summer and are looking forward to implementing new practices to enhance student learning, Sheehan said.

As is annual tradition Sheehan will hold an opening assembly with the first and second graders on the first day of school, "it's a way to bring the school together."

Osgood is unveiling a new way of assessing students and will have three terms instead of two.

"The standards-based assessment system reflects our focus on the content areas as well as the arts and 21st century skill such as critical thinking and reasoning. Work habits and social skills are also included," Sheehan said.

While many of the veteran staff is returning, there will be several new faces: kindergarten teacher Mrs. Low, special education teacher Mrs. Bulkley and music teacher (for second graders) Mr. Mafera.

Osgood's school day for full day kindergartens, first and second graders begins at 9:10a.m. and concludes at 3:10p.m. The one half-day kindergarten class begins at 9:10 and ends at 11:50a.m. The two morning preschool classes begin at 8:45 and end at 11:15a.m. The afternoon pre-school begins at 12:15 and end at 2:45p.m.

"The building is in good shape. The floors are shining, the custodians have done a great job over the summer and we'll be ready to go," said Sheehan.

Third-grade teacher Margaret Holland empties a box containing a potpourri of items she uses in her classroom during the course of a year.

Deer Hill School

Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara is gearing up to open the doors and welcome the third, fourth and fifth graders of Cohasset.

Teachers have been in and out during the summer, fixing up their classrooms, making plans for the first few weeks and participating in professional development. They are ready to teach, so the 379 students currently enrolled should be ready to learn.

"Students should expect to come in and start learning right away," deChiara said, adding the school is in mint condition thanks to the hard work of the custodial staff over the summer.

One of the big changes at Deer Hill is the addition of a new classroom, "we now have 17 classrooms – 6 third grades, 5 fourth grades, and 6 fifth grades," deChiara said. In order to accommodate the new classroom, there have been several staffing changes and new additions.

Mrs. Ama Lewis has moved from third grade to fifth grade and Ms. Meg O'Hara has moved from a special education teacher position to fourth grade. Mrs. Margaret Holland has moved from second grade at Osgood to third grade here. Mr. Ben Mafera is the new music teacher, Ms. Amelia Roche is a new third grade teacher, and Mrs. Sarah MacDonald is a new literacy specialist.

In addition to staffing changes, the fourth and fifth graders will be learning from brand new Social Studies textbooks – "(that's) something I'm very excited about."

Many of the teachers have been engaged in professional development over the summer, "hot topics were reading and writing instruction, reading technology, and gifted and talented education," deChiara said.

Deer Hill's school day will begin at 8:30a.m. and end at 2:30p.m.

"I am looking forward to getting the show on the road over here," deChiara said.

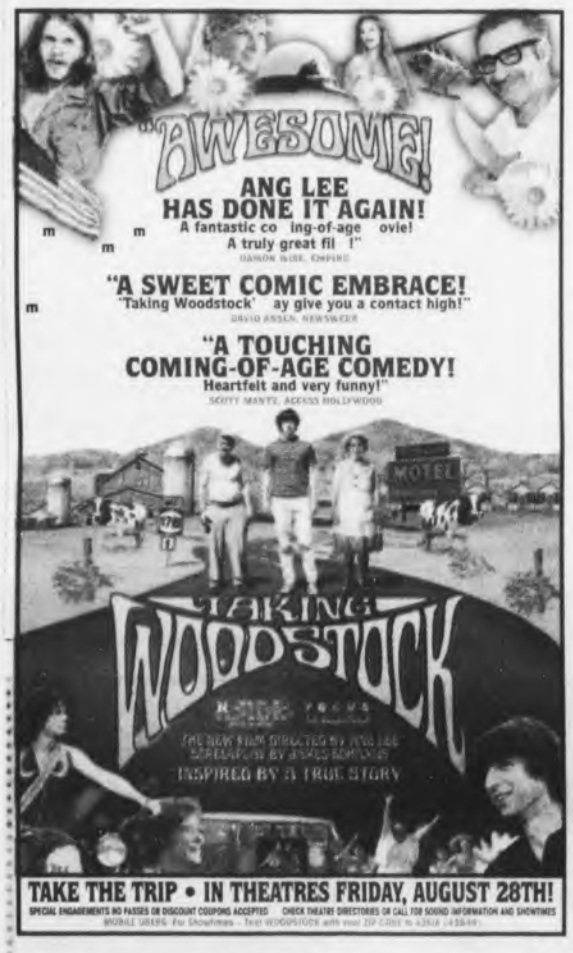
Middle-High School

The staff at the Middle-High School is looking forward to teaching the young minds of Cohasset – and will waste no time getting started.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini said students should expect to start learning day one – and many teachers will have homework assignments.



The staff has been preparing for the arrival of 720 students in total between the middle and high school. Each middle school class has about 120 students and each high school class has about 100 students.

One of the major changes at the high school level is a new requirement for ninth- and tenth-graders to take English courses all year long. In the past, students were only required to take English three out of the four terms.

"The goal is to have students be that much more prepared for MCAS testing and the SATs," Antolini said.

The Middle-High School has several new teachers and staff members: Ms. Louise Demas (Humanities Program Supervisor), Dr. June Talvitie-Siple (STEM Program Supervisor), MaryEllen Sullivan (high school guidance counselor), AnnMarie Carmody (middle school English teacher), Janet Meehan (middle school foreign language teacher), and Joan McLaughlin (middle school special education teacher).

The school and particularly the fall sports teams are looking forward to playing on the soon-to-be-complete artificial turf field. The aim is to have the field open in time for the first home football game at the end of September.

Antolini is hoping to build on the high schools recognized success in having a great percentage of students participate in AP (advanced placement) classes. In June, Newsweek ranked Cohasset High one of the top high schools in the nation based on AP participation.

"The real story is not only are a lot of students taking the AP test, but the great majority of the kids did really well," Antolini said. Eighty percent of Cohasset High students taking an AP test scored a 3 or higher (5 is the highest possible AP score).

On the first day of school, each grade will attend an assembly to welcome them back to school. Students will attend every single one of their classes.

"They will get their books, hear the teachers' plans for the next week and year and probably get some homework as well," Antolini said.

The Middle-High School's first bell is at 7:30a.m. and dismissal is 2p.m.

For approximately the first month of school (while the turf field is completed) all parent drop-offs need to go through the main driveway off Pond Street. When construction is complete, middle school students should be dropped off at the main driveway and high school students near the central office/field parking lot.

Town, schools concerned about H1N1

"Nothing is definitive yet" as it is still unknown how much and when the town will receive an allocation of the vaccine, Goodwin said.

The vaccine is specific to the H1N1 influenza and will not vaccinate for the seasonal influenza. The H1N1 vaccination will be given in two doses; the second to be administered 28 days after the first.

When a H1N1 vaccine becomes available there are five priority groups — school-age children (up to age 24) is among them — which will be eligible to receive the vaccination first.

The priority groups are: pregnant women, emergency health care workers, caregivers or people living with a newborn up to six months old, children six months old up to adults age 24, and adults age 25 to 64 with chronic health disorders or a compromised immune system.

Notably, senior citizens (over age 65) are not a priority group. Goodwin said the number of H1N1 cases in seniors has been very low and generally the population is not very susceptible. The reason(s) for the apparent immunity is not definitively known, Goodwin said.

A typical flu season hits its peak in winter and typically sees about 30,000 to 40,000 deaths, with the elderly being among the most susceptible to serious illness. In the case of swine flu, teenagers and young adults have been found to be most vulnerable, heightening concerns about the start of the school year. According to the Centers for Disease Control, three quarters of swine flu hospitalizations have been among people aged 49 or less, as are three out of every five deaths from the disease.

A notice announcing the priority groups for the H1N1 vaccine was distributed to Cohasset churches last week.

Although the H1N1 vaccination could be available, precautions should still be taken to limit exposure to the virus.

"We need everybody to be on board with this."
— Mary Goodwin, Public Health Nurse

"There are a few really basic steps people can take to keep from getting sick," Goodwin said.

First and foremost is frequent hand washing.

Second, kids and adults should cover their cough.

And, third, if children or adults re sick they should stay home from work or school.

"Children should be fever-free, without medication, for 24 hours before going back to school," Goodwin said.

The precautions need to be taken on a universal basis, particularly in the schools.

"We need everybody to be on board with this," Goodwin said.

For the school's part, they are awaiting further guidance from the state Department of Public Health about the vaccinations and encouraging teachers to be proactive in their classrooms.

Superintendent Walsh said each classroom and office area has been equipped with hand sanitizer. Teachers and staff have been encouraged to have a "heightened awareness" of sharing resources (crayons, markers, books, etc.), especially in the younger grade levels.

"As educators we can prepare for student and staff absences," Walsh said. She is asking the staff to prepare an extra packet of class materials each week to make it easier for absent to get caught up on class work.

"Parents need to know it is OK to keep their children home if they are sick," Walsh said, adding she is hoping many of teachers utilize the technology and Web site resources available to keep everyone on the same page.

The symptoms of H1N1 influenza are headache, fever, body aches, sore throat, cough, runny or stuffy nose, chills and fatigue, occasionally diarrhea and vomiting.

Unlike last spring when swine flu cases first began popping up in Massachusetts, schools will not be closing because of a H1N1 case, Goodwin said. "The key is to isolate the sick person."

Goodwin cannot definitively say there have been (or have not been) cases of the H1N1 influenza in Cohasset as only the most serious cases of the H1N1 flu are tested by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. There have been about 1400 confirmed cases of H1N1 in Massachusetts.

According to the latest figures from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 477 people have died as a result of H1N1 influenza in the United States. By contrast, each year the seasonal influenza causes an estimated 250,000 hospitalizations and 36,000 deaths nationally.

Eleven Massachusetts residents have died of illnesses associated with swine flu in that time, according to the state Department of Public Health.

Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin is available to answer questions about the H1N1 influenza or other health concerns. She can be reached in her first floor office at Town Hall, (781) 383-2210.

Simple precautions:

- Wash your hands frequently with soap and warm water or use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer.
- Cover your cough with a tissue or cough into your inner elbow and not into your hands.
- If you or your child is sick with the flu, stay home from work or school.

Neighbors

"Neighborly" has to be one of the nicest sounding words in the English language.

While not all neighbors are nice – being neighborly is a good thing.

We were away last week at a nephew's wedding. Among many other guests, the groom invited his three friends from "the neighborhood." When they were young boys, the four buddies lived on the same street in Pittsford, N.Y., which is a suburb of Rochester. They played soccer and baseball in the street and did just about everything together.

Eventually all four families moved to larger homes and different neighborhoods but the bond between the four friends has continued into their adulthood. At the wedding, the sense was the "gang of four" would always be there for one another. In short, it was nice to see.

Towns like Cohasset are places that still have traditional "neighborhoods." Some new neighborhoods may take years to develop the kind of neighborly-ness that is evident in more established areas.

One of the great neighborhoods next door in Hingham is the Martin's Lane area near World's End.

World's End, which many Cohasseters are very familiar with, is an idyllic place – set off from the hubbub of the rest of the area – with incredible water views. The World's End reservation is one of the most beautiful and peaceful places anywhere. Most would agree that neighborhood ranks among the top anywhere.

But last year, that neighborhood was shaken to the core when Leon Granahan lost his life after he was pulled into a culvert at World's End. The Granahans are long-time members of that neighborhood and the loss of their beloved Leon was an unimaginable tragedy.

What happened next, however, goes to the heart of the true meaning of neighborhood. Neighbors and the Granahan family bonded together to ensure that a similar accident could not happen again.

They put pressure on the Town of Hingham and Trustees of Reservations to come up with a solution to the outer culvert, which has now been removed.

Removing the dangerous outer culvert is Phase I of a more comprehensive plan that also includes inner culvert work and the possible building of a bridge close to the entrance of the World's End Reservation.

The process of addressing the safety issues at the culvert – initially expected to take up to two years – was not always a smooth one. But the neighbors worked with Hingham about the urgency of the situation.

Leon's mother, Pat Granahan, said it best: "The Granahan family, World's End neighbors, and the community at large are grateful that their concerns regarding the culvert were heard by the Hingham Selectmen and other town officials, the Trustees of Reservations, and the other agencies involved.

"An emergency was declared and the dangerous outer culvert at World's End was removed. Once started, the project was done quickly and efficiently. Now we are confident that the necessary work on the inner culvert will be addressed as soon as possible and we will be assured of a totally safe environment in the near future," she said.

If it were possible the neighborhood would turn the clock back if it could and change those events in July 2008 that led to the tragic accident.

But the neighbors did what was possible: they worked together with the town, Harbormaster, Conservation Commission and Trustees of Reservations to make sure no other family has to face a similar tragedy.

Our hats go off to the Granahans and their neighbors for giving us all a lesson in what it is to be a true neighborhood where caring about one another is not just a cliché but translates into positive action that benefits all.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Neighbors concerned about well field

Editor's note: A copy of this letter was provided to the Mariner for publication.

Alfred S. Moore, Chairman
Cohasset Planning Board
Re: The Residences at Cohasset Village
8 James Lane, Cohasset, Mass.

Dear Mr. Moore:

We, the undersigned, are writing to request that the Cohasset Planning Board carefully consider the impacts of the proposed project upon the Cohasset Ellms Meadow Well Field. The Ellms Meadow Well Field is a vital water resource to the residents of Cohasset.

Although Norfolk Ram previously provided a letter to the Cohasset Planning Board, dated May 6, 2009, we are informed by the letter's authors, John B. McAllister, P.E. and Mark S. Bartlett, P.E., that the letter should not be relied upon by the Cohasset Planning Board because Norfolk Ram was given only one day to prepare the letter. Mr. McAllister has said that at the time that Norfolk Ram prepared the letter, it did not have sufficient information to perform an adequate technical review of the project. Mr. McAllister has also said that in view of the project's proximity to the environmentally sensitive Ellms Meadow Well Field, a complete technical and environmental review must be performed.

Accordingly, the Cohasset Planning Board should ask Norfolk Ram to perform a complete technical and environmental review of the impacts of the project upon the Ellms Meadow Well Field before any decision is made regarding the proposed development at 8 James Lane, Cohasset, Mass.

Savings realized by recycling topsoil, grass

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

One Plus One Equals Three – Sometime plans really come together with multiple benefits. The current artificial turf project underway on the Middle-High School football field is such a project. To date the old grass and topsoil has been stripped from the field and new special-purpose drainage system has been added. Then, the field was graded to perfection in preparation for the new artificial turf surface. So why mention this in this column, you ask?

We mentioned, above, that the old grass and topsoil were removed from the playing field area. Here's the sharp thinking part. These materials were removed to a storage yard to be saved. Currently, the material is being screened and will be used as landscaping backfill along the edge of the roads in the Little Harbor Water, Sewer and Drainage project after the paving is complete. That represents thousands of dollars saved by reusing material already owned by the Town. That's pretty smart!

We would be remiss if we didn't mention one other interesting bit of information about the transformation taking place at the playing field. As you can imagine, grading the field before the new artificial turf is laid, is very crucial. The new playing surface will be only as good as the grading job beneath it. To achieve a "perfect" surface the contractor is using a laser-guided grading system. The photo shows the grader on the right hand side. To the left, barely visible, is a tripod with a laser mounted at its top. As the grader moves around the field, the laser signal is picked up by the grader and adjustments are made to achieve that "perfect" surface.

Paving Stuff – Well, since the gods were finally favorable, paving Nichols Road and its side roads started this week, on Wednesday, August 26th. We are not sure exactly how long the Nichols paving will take, but as of late Wednesday afternoon, we are pretty sure that paving will extend into Friday, and potentially into Monday.

Originally, we were told that the paving sequence would be to pave all of the side roads on Nichols, and then Nichols itself. But, after seeing the location, the paving crew changed their plans. They started by paving Caravel Cove and then paving Nichols from Atlantic to just beyond Caravel, on the first day. Then, the next day they will pave one or more side roads moving further down Nichols. To complete a workday, they will then pave Nichols from where they stopped the day before to the end of the last side road that they paved that day. This way, they will proceed incrementally down Nichols doing side roads and then parts of the main road, until they reach Jerusalem Road.

If you notice the paving work after it is complete you will see that there are an absolute minimum of joints in the road. For example, there are no joints in all of the work done during the first day, including all of Caravel and Nichols Road. Joints in a paving job are always potential trouble spots where water can infiltrate under the road and freezing and thawing cycles can deteriorate the road. Minimizing them is always a good deal. We are lucky to have a paving company who thinks about these little things.

We are sure the residents will not miss the obstacle course of raised structures in Nichols Road. As you may remember, Wednesday was quite hot and as you can see in the photo the workers have a hard time staying cool, especially being surrounded by very hot asphalt.

North Main Street and the Common are waiting to have some of the damaged structures in the roadway repaired before those roads can be paved. So, we'll be dealing with that obstacle course for a bit longer. Just take it slow when driving on North Main Street and around the Common.

The 1917 rescue of Sandy Beach

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

ANNETTE SAWCHUK

The Sandy Beach Association was founded by a group of Cohasset residents, led by Charles W. Gammons, for the purpose of purchasing the private land on both sides of 291 Atlantic Avenue, at Sandy Beach, and providing a beach for all residents of Cohasset to enjoy.

The following article appeared in the Cohasset Sentinel, which was a weekly newspaper at the time, published by the South Shore Newspaper Company, which had an office on Main Street.

The Cohasset Historical Society provided this news article and two photographs of the property when it was acquired, one showing several of the private beach houses which dotted tire beach at the time. Subsequently those structures were removed and a modern Beach Pavilion was built in the 1920s, then modified several times us a result of storm damage, and later replaced by the current building in 1971, providing restrooms, showers and changing areas.

The association stills relies on donations to clean the beach, maintain the building and provide lifeguards for the summer months. Since originally acquiring the property, the Association deeded the parking area to the town, which provides the maintenance of that area.

THE SANDY BEACH ASSOCIATION

It has long been a regret to thoughtful citizens of Cohasset that, little by little, our shore has passed into private ownership, thus curtailing the privileges of our own citizens. The Cohasset boy of twenty five, years ago could bathe and picnic freely at White Head, as the boy of fifty years ago could do at Sandy, Cove. These privileges ceased when the localities, passed into other hands, and were developed for residential purposes.

It is, therefore, with satisfaction that we regard the measures that have recently been taken to preserve Sandy Beach and keep it available for residents of Cohasset all the time. Some of our public spirited citizens have formed a corporation called the Sandy Beach Association have purchased the whole beach and intend to erect a large bath house for the use of the townspeople. When the house is fully equipped, the present individual bath houses will be removed, thereby improving the appearance of the beach. A further object gained in the preservation of the ocean view across the beach. Should the locality have passed into other hands, cottages might have been built, obscuring the view, and perhaps, impairing the character of the neighborhood.

The land purchased comprises two parcels; one owned by Mr. Charles W. Gammons and the other by the estate of the late Thomas F. Richardson. The Association now owns the entire stretch of beach from the property of Harry H. Gay to that of Henry L. Kincaide. It also owns the land upon the opposite side of the highway extending to Little Harbor with the exception of a small lot near the corner of Nichols Road.

The bathhouse built after the Sandy Beach Association's purchase of the property. This was torn down in the 1950s to make way to the new bathhouse.

COURTESY PHOTOS

The beach and bath house will be managed by a board of trustees who will make suitable regulations for their use. The corporation is of a public and charitable nature. Its shares of stock have voting power, but are non-divided paying. Subscriptions are made out of public spirit and for the sake of securing the improvement. The by-laws expressly provide that no stockholder shall receive any income or profit from his shares. It is the intention to have the bath house self-supporting. Charges will therefore be made for the use of compartments, suits, and towels. These charges will be sufficient only for the running expenses, maintenance and reports and for the car of the beach.

This beach and its privileges are for the use of residents of Cohasset. No attempt will be made to provide for people from other towns for such can use the Nantasket Beach Reservation.

The trustees, after paying for the beach, have in hand about half the amount required to build the bath house. Further subscription to the stock of the Association (par value $25) are solicited. It is desired to have these shares as widely distributed through the town as possible, so that all may feel an interest and have a share in this good work. Application for shares of stock may be made to any of the officers or trustees. The board is constituted as follows: Dr. Oliver H. Howe, President; William R. Sears, Secretary; Edward B. Bayley, Treasurer; Hugh Bancroft, Edwin L. Furber, and Joseph N. Wilcutt.

An interview with President of Mass. Bay Lines

By Martha Bewick
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Bill Spence of Hingham has some advice for the MBTA. President and Owner of Massachusetts Bay Lines for almost 45 years, Bill has been involved with public transit during this time as a private operator, public contractor, and legislator. A Harvard Business School graduate, he has also been a banker, and owned entertainment venues. He has dealt with the public, as well as with public agencies, day to day.

Bill is also Treasurer of Interferry, an international organization of ferry operators and industries, where he has had a chance to see how ferry systems are designed, operated and managed in many countries, as well as throughout the US. His company is currently a contracted service on the Hingham-Boston ferry route, which is threatened with elimination.

When Transportation Secretary James Aloisi invited public comment, following the cancellation of the MBTA public workshops and hearings, Bill and I sat down at the Rowes Wharf café, where I asked him what thoughts he'd like to pass along both to Secretary Aloisi, and to David D'Alessandro.

D'Alessandro, the former Chairman and CEO of John Hancock Financial Services, is overseeing a "stem to stem" review of the MBTA. His recommendations are due in November.

What would you like Secretary Aloisi and David D'Alessandro to know about the ferries?

Spence: They can look at the MBTA in the short-term, and in the long-term. If they look at the long term, then I think they need to stress that we live in a world where there are terrorists. It's no secret that all trains from the South Shore to Boston use just one bridge going into Boston. If this bridge is destroyed, commuter trains and the Red Line rapid transit would be unable to operate.

In New York on 9/11, it was the commuter boats that came to the rescue, and were extremely helpful.

Then there are accidents. When the USAir plane went down in the Hudson River, the first boat to the rescue was a commuter boat....These things are important to think about today.

There are also bad weather times when ferries are the only option. I'm old enough to remember the 1978 blizzard. Back then the only way to get to Boston for several days was by commuter boats. We used all the boats available, and had to turn people away, there was so much demand for service.

Are ferries a cost-effective form of transit?

Spence: I personally think the boats have been economically competitive with other Boston-area forms of transportation. My memory is that Massachusetts Bay Lines restarted commuter boat service to the South Shore in 1963. We expected to lose money on this service, but the Hull selectmen who controlled the access to the Nantasket Beach service, which was profitable, put a contract out for bid every five years. They said to the contractor, if you provide commuter boat service, we would look favorably on your providing service to Nantasket Beach. That's how we got underway.

When Hingham ferries started in 1975, there was some help from Massport in rebuilding the pier, and organizing the agreement at the beginning. There were some state bond funds that underwrote early subsidies, but the service never really grew until the state Executive Office of Transportation and Construction (EOTC) decided to offer alternative transit service for commuters when the Southeast Expressway was rebuilt in 1984. Their willingness to subsidize the ferries, and add frequent service as one of those alternatives, led to the success of the ferry service today.

When service went from irregular times to every 15 minutes, it was fantastic. Dana Goodell, the other ferry operator at that time, and I had originally objected to the time changes, but the T was absolutely right. People then knew that at rush hour there was a commuter boat every 15 minutes.

What should the state decision-makers know about ferry subsidies when they look at the issue of cost effectiveness?

Spence: First, every ferry route has different economics. Secretary Aloisi should be aware that the Quincy, Hingham and Inner Harbor runs have different levels of services and different subsidies. The Hingham-Boston subsidy for FY 09 was $3.24 per person, according to T Advisory Board numbers.

However, all commuter boat pass revenues go to the train, as I understand it. If these revenues were credited to the commuter boats, what would the commuter boat subsidy figures actually show?

As I remember, the fare-box recovery ratio for the Hingham ferries was 80 percent at one point, which is very high for a public transit service. That is in spite of the fact we include our vessel costs in our contracted costs on which the subsidy is based. That doesn't happen for the commuter trains. There, as I understand it, the subsidy per passenger reflects the operating costs only.

COURTESY PHOTO

If you were to make a fair comparison of subsidies, it means you would add the capital costs of the train (rolling stock and right of way) to the operating costs. So, if you figure 4-5 percent interest on the $525 million Greenbush capital cost annually, a per person subsidy comparison for a ferry rider and a train rider would show the boats to be very competitive.

The MBTA Advisory Board figures shows a per person subsidy for the Greenbush train as $6.05. The Greenbush annual operating cost subsidy is $9.978 million, but, again, that figure doesn't reflect those capital costs. This is how the T has chosen to keep its figures.

The fact of the matter is that the boats are half the price of the trains, using the $6.05 per person for the train.

Are there other ways the MBTA gets income from the Hingham Commuter Boat?

Spence: I don't know whether the parking fees make a difference. My understanding is that all parking fees go to the T. Should the ferries get credit for parking fees at the Hingham Shipyard? That's a good question.

If the annual Hingham ferry ridership is 600,000 and the ticket price is $6, that's $3.6 million in annual revenue. How is this reflected in the ferry subsidy equation for the Hingham commuter boat?

Again, it is my understanding that the commuter trains receive credit for part or all of the revenue from commuter boat pass and ticket revenue. The commuter boats don't get all the credit for the commuter boat tickets sold. I don't know the percentage, and I don't know whether commuter boats get any credit for a portion of the commuter rail pass income. But that would be worth looking at. Transferring the revenue from the commuter boats to the train would of course make the subsidy per person carried on the commuter boats higher than it really is.

If this is so, and if the reported commuter boat subsidies don't reflect any of the commuter boat fares, it's not fair. I'd like to see this question explored before any changes are proposed for the Hingham commuter boats.

What happens to the ferry ridership when fares are increased?

Spence: The last time fares went up, the ridership on the 6 a.m. ferry went down 10 percent. These were construction workers building buildings and people working in offices in Boston who just couldn't afford the increase. When fares go up, it hurts the fellow making less.

Why has the Hingham-Boston commuter boat lost ridership?

Spence: That's due to the Greenbush train, but also to the economy and layoffs in Boston. One woman who had ridden the boat for years came to me in tears one day and said she had to take the train because it was cheaper. I'd like to see the Charlie Card apply to the boats. Perhaps that economy would lessen the cost.

We do like to see the bicyclists, and mid-day mothers with strollers and folks in wheelchairs on the boats. This is a real service. We could do more to promote off-peak ridership, as well as reverse ridership to the movie theaters and shops at Hingham Shipyard.

Are there any ferry systems you believe the MBTA should examine as a best case example for future planning? Or innovations worth looking at?

Spence: Yes, the Vancouver ferry is well worth studying. It's a double-ended ferry, where there are no tie-ups. The vessel enters a floating concrete platform, several doors open on one side, and everyone exits, then several doors open on the other side and passengers enter.

There are new clean marine engines that can be purchased with federal stimulus funds. The federal government has just distributed $60 million in federal stimulus funds to states which submitted applications for new engines, new dock facilities, and new ferries. Unfortunately, Massachusetts wasn't one of them. This is worth looking at.

I'd like to give a tip of the hat to Gladding-Hearn, the Massachusetts company that builds the high-speed catamarans owned by Boston Harbor Cruises, and the Steamship Authority, and to BHC and the Authority for buying them. They're very popular with the commuters.

What's the biggest change in Boston Harbor since you began service?

Spence: I'm proud to say here on Rowes Wharf that there's been a huge change in the water quality. If a deckhand fell into the water years ago, we'd send him to the hospital for a tetanus shot. A lot of fecal matter would float by from open sewers along the waterfront. It was dirty. Today it's clean, and there are bluefish jumping in the harbor.

(Next week we'll talk about the perspectives of some ferry commuters, including Jim Pilalas, retired Vice President of NE Mutual Life Insurance.)

Martha A. R. Bewick is a member and former Secretary of Interferry, and has been an advocate of improved ferry systems for the past 35 years.

August 20, 2009
Copyright (c) 2009 Beacon Hill Roll Call. All Rights Reserved.
By Bob Katzen

MEMO TO BHRC SUBSCRIBERS: This week's report is on the roll call attendance record of your local representatives. Some representatives may have poor attendance records because of a variety of reasons including health problems or military service. We do not ask each individual representative why he or she missed roll call votes but it is something that you may want to check out with any of your local legislators who have missed roll call votes. If we can be of further assistance, please feel free to contact us.

This week's report follows:

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate during the week of August 16-20.

Beacon Hill Roll Call reports local representatives' roll call attendance records for the 2009 session through August 20.

The House has held 210 roll call votes. Beacon Hill Roll Call tabulates the number of roll calls for which each representative was present and voting and then calculates that number as a percentage of the total roll call votes held. That percentage is the number commonly referred to as the roll call attendance record.

Several quorum roll calls, used to gather a majority of members onto the House floor to conduct business, are also included in the 210 roll calls. On quorum roll calls, members simply vote "present" in order to indicate their presence in the chamber. When a representative does not indicate his or her presence on a quorum roll call, we count that as a roll call absence just like any other roll call absence.

Only 25 percent or 40 of the 160 House members have perfect 100 percent roll call attendance records - including 28 of the 144 Democrats and 12 of the 16 Republicans.

Some representatives may have poor attendance records because of a variety of reasons including health problems or military service. Beacon Hill Roll Call does not ask each individual representative why he or she missed roll call votes.

The five worst roll call attendance records belong to Reps. David Flynn (D-Bridgewater) who missed 63 roll calls (70.0 percent attendance record); Harold Naughton (D-Clinton) missed 48 roll calls (77.1 percent attendance record); Geraldine Creedon (D-Brockton) missed 45 roll calls (78.5 percent attendance record); Vincent Pedone (D-Worcester) missed 42 roll calls (80.0 percent attendance record) and Colleen Garry (D-Dracut) missed 40 roll calls (80.9 percent attendance record).

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES' 2009 ROLL CALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS THROUGH AUGUST 20

The percentage listed next to the representative's name is the percentage of roll call votes for which the representative was present and voting. The number in parentheses represents the number of roll calls that the representative missed.

FILLING SENATE SEAT - Ailing Sen. Edward Kennedy has asked Gov. Deval Patrick and the Legislature to amend a 2004 law that took away the power of the governor to appoint a temporary replacement for any U.S. Senate seat that becomes vacant in Massachusetts. The 2004 law instead requires that a special election be held within 145 and 160 days. Kennedy's plan would leave the special election in place but would also allow the governor to appoint an interim senator until a new one is elected. Kennedy also urged that the appointee, as a condition of his or her appointment, promise not to run in the special election. In a letter to Beacon Hill leaders, Kennedy said, "It is vital for this Commonwealth to have two voices speaking for the needs of its citizens and two votes in the Senate during the approximately five months between a vacancy and an election."

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On July 29, ACIP met to consider who should be inoculated since vaccines are the best tool we have to prevent flu.

We continue to see influenza-like illness activity at higher levels than we would normally see at this time of year. Accordingly, local public health officials have been planning for the fall flu season. The CDC is continuing to develop and test a vaccine for H1N1 flu and has indicated that an H1N1 vaccine may be available in quantity starting in October. Even if the H1N1 vaccine is ready by then, it will likely not be delivered all at once. All states should receive an initial allocation and then regular shipments after that. Provisional priority groups are: Pregnant women, new parents, household contacts of children less than 6 months of age, students and staff associated with schools, children 6 months through 4 years of age, childcare workers, health care workers and emergency personnel, and non-elderly adults (younger than age 65) with medical conditions that increase the risk of complications of influenza. At this time it appears that people older than 65 seem to have some immunity to the H1N1 virus and will not need the H1N1 vaccine. Nor will publicly funded vaccine be administered to this age group.

Simple precautions to help stop the spread of flu include:

- Wash your hands frequently with soap and warm water or use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer.
- Cover your cough with a tissue or cough into your inner elbow and not into your hands.
- If you are sick stay home from work. Those who are sick should be kept home for seven days or 24 hours after symptoms disappear, whichever is longer.

Stay informed about the latest developments on the H1N1 flu by visiting the Web site at mass.gov/dph.

With the new H1N1 virus continuing to cause illness, hospitalizations and deaths in the United States during the normally flu-free summer months and some uncertainty about the upcoming flu season, CDC's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices has taken an important step in preparations for a voluntary novel H1N1 vaccination effort to counter a possibly severe flu season. On July 29, ACIP met to consider who should be inoculated since vaccines are the best tool we have to prevent flu. While some issues are still unknown, such as how severe the virus will be during the fall and winter months, the ACIP considered several factors, including current disease patterns, populations most at risk for severe illness based on current trends in illness, hospitalizations and deaths, how much vaccine is expected to be available and the timing of vaccine availability. Groups recommended to receive the novel H1N1 influenza vaccine include:

- Pregnant women because they are at higher risk of complications and can potentially provide protection to infants who cannot be vaccinated;
- Household contacts and caregivers for children younger than 6 months of age because younger infants are at higher risk of influenza-related complications and cannot be vaccinated. Vaccination of those in close contact with infants less than 6 months old might help protect infants by "cocooning" them from the virus;
- Healthcare and emergency medical service personnel because infections among healthcare workers have been reported and this can be a potential source of infection for vulnerable patients. Also, increased absenteeism in this population could reduce healthcare system capacity;
- All people from 6 months through 24 years of age;
- Children from 6 months through 18 years of age because many cases of novel H1N1 influenza have been observed in children in close contact with each other in school and day care, which increases the likelihood of disease spread;
- Young adults 19 through 24 years of age because we have seen many cases of novel H1N1 influenza in these healthy young adults and they often live, work and study in close proximity, and they are a frequently mobile population; and
- People ages 25 through 64 who have health conditions associated with higher risk of medical complications from influenza.

Once demand for vaccine for the prioritized groups has been met at the local level, programs and providers should also begin vaccinating everyone from the ages of 25 through 64 years. Current studies indicate that the risk for infection among persons age 65 or older is less than the risk for younger age groups. However, once vaccine demand among younger age groups has been met, programs and providers should offer vaccination to people 65 or older.

National Grid performing gas main work

National Grid recently began construction work on its natural gas infrastructure between numbers 38 and 184 Atlantic Avenue in Cohasset. Constructions continue through the first week in September.

As part of National Grid's ongoing infrastructure upgrade, approximately 1,860 feet of gas main will be installed. This upgrade project, which will improve system reliability and safety, is part of the company's overall plan to invest more than $200 million in gas main replacements across its service area through March 2010.

National Grid's contractor will perform the work between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Streets will remain open for the duration of the project.

The company will make every effort to minimize disruption to homes and businesses along the route and will employ traffic management plans and police details as appropriate. The required work will be conducted in close coordination with town officials and public safety representatives.

Customers can expect a brief service interruption upon completion of the work, as homes and businesses are connected to the new main. Residents will be notified prior to any necessary construction on private property.

Mother of two reaches goal weight in just 12 weeks!

I tried working out in a gym 30 years ago and I stopped because I didn't like it and I haven't done anything since then. This year I will be turning 50 and I noticed that my body was changing in ways I did not like. I knew that just diet alone was not going to get me into the shape that I wanted. The best decision I made was to join Get In Shape For Women. In just 12 weeks I reached my goal. I lost 14 pounds and a total of 9 inches. Through the efforts and expertise of my trainers I was able to get into the shape and weight that I was when I was 22! They taught me how to eat properly 6 times a day and guided and encouraged me through the weight training and cardio. The concept and the program have done exactly what it said to get me in shape. Now I can happily turn 50 looking fit and fabulous!

Town flag fundraiser gets go-ahead

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen gave the Historical Society the thumbs up to proceed in reviving the official town flag as a fundraiser.

The flag was adopted as the official town flag in October 1969 as part of the town's bicentennial celebrations. Selectmen retained the rights to its reproduction, which made their approval necessary.

Historical Society president Kathy O'Malley said many residents have told her they still have one of the original flags "in a box somewhere." She hopes people all over town fly these second edition flags for many years.

"We want these flags to get used and worn out," O'Malley said.

The flag has a blue design on a white background. The central portion is a reproduction of the Cohasset town seal. Above the seal is a scroll with the word "Cohasset." Underneath is the year 1770, the year Cohasset broke from Hingham and became its own town, as well as two anchors. The two anchors at either side of the seal symbolize the hope of the future, according to published reports from late 1969.

O'Malley said fundraising is one of the mainstays of the society and the money is used to maintain the society's three buildings (the Pratt Building, the Maritime Museum, and the Capt. John Wilson House) as well as the society's vast collection of historical artifacts and documentation.

Approval was granted in 1969 to fly the town flag on the same pole as the American Flag, and for many years following the bicentennial celebrations the flag was flown on the Common for special occasions.

"I hope the town flag is treated with the same respect as the American flag," Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said.

The Historical Society will seek several bids before placing an order for the flags, but will be taking orders for the flags at Cohasset Day, Sept. 12, O'Malley said.

Fate of Minot Light still up in the air

"We can't have weddings or bar mitzvahs out there," said Carlson. Other lighthouses that have come off the ledgers of the General Services Administration have found new life as bed and breakfasts, tourist attractions, and dining facilities. Most have either been on land or on an island.

Minot Light, which is accessible only by boat and a 30-foot bronze ladder, sits on a 25-foot wide ledge of rock (Minot's Ledge). According to the brief description of the lighthouse provided by the General Services Administration, the ledge is very difficult to land on in moderate or heavy sea conditions.

"We can't have weddings or bar mitzvahs out there."
— Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson

In some cases, when no viable applications are submitted by a non-profit or a local entity, the lighthouse is offered for sale.

Given the access issues, Dormitzer said a private sale of Minot Light "doesn't make a great deal of sense."

In addition, Quigley said the ultimate owner of the light will have to adhere to a 90-page regulation document outlining the standards for rehabilitation because of its listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

Selectman Ted Carr felt strongly about Cohasset's historical connection to Minot's Light and wanted to find out more information about the possibility.

"I'd sure love to know more about the way to do this, because if its reasonable, I think people might be willing," Carr said.

Selectman Fred Koed said there was no harm in exploring the options, submitting a letter of interest and getting a marine survey of the lighthouse.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he is working to schedule a joint meeting between the Cohasset and Scituate selectmen.

Resident and historical society member Martha Gjesteby suggested the board contact Congressman William Delahunt and Senator John Kerry to see if they might be able to reverse the decision to take Minot Light off the books, given its special circumstances.

At the close of the discussion, Selectmen Carr and Quigley were delegated to find out more information and will report back at upcoming meetings. Then, they intend to make a more informed decision about sending a letter of interest to the General Services Administration.

On Aug. 25, the Scituate Board of Selectmen designated selectmen Rick Murray and John Danehey to be its representatives in discussions with Cohasset about Minot Light.

A letter of interest should include the name of the organization, the name of the property, a point of contact's e-mail, phone and address. Any not-for-profit agency must also include a copy of its state-certified articles of incorporation. Interested parties have a deadline of Sept. 30.

The Minot Light Replica provides the perfect backdrop for people to catch up on their summer reading. The Replica was constructed with granite blocks from Minot Light after the lighthouse was refurbished in the late 1980s.

Historical Society

Speaking on behalf of her organization, Cohasset Historical Society President Kathy O'Malley said the society wants to see the lighthouse preserved, but could not take on the job itself.

"We would support anyone who wants to do anything with it, but we don't want to jump in ourselves," O'Malley said. The Historical Society board has taken no official vote; rather O'Malley spoke of a consensus generated from a recent meeting.

O'Malley said she the society's insurance agent advised her the liability of the lighthouse was too great, "there are just so many issues that are out of our control."

In a phone interview on Tuesday, O'Malley said she does not expect the Historical Society will submit a letter of interest for the lighthouse.

Facts about Minot Light

Earlier this month, the United States General Services Administration announced the availability of Minot Light to a not-for-profit, government or local agency free of charge.

Property Identification: Minot's Ledge Light Tower ("the Property) offshore on a 25-foot wide ledge of rock ("Minot's Ledge"), part of "Cohasset Rocks."

Address: Located in Plymouth County, Massachusetts. Nearest towns: Scituate and Cohasset (found approximately two miles north of the town of Minot, near Cohasset Harbor). Just outside the southern entrance to Boston Harbor from Cape Cod Bay and the Atlantic Ocean. Surrounded by the waters of the Massachusetts Bay. Coordinates: 42 16 12 N 70 45 30 W.

A bronze ladder extends from the lower mean waterline up to the entrance door and platform approximately 30 feet above. Very difficult to land on in moderate or heavy sea conditions.

First constructed as an iron pile structure in 1850, it collapsed in 1851; a second structure was rebuilt in 1860 in a mid-19th c. design of "wave-swept" construction (i.e., interlocking cut Quincy granite blocks dovetailed and doweled to each other on a stone foundation). Property is an American Society of Civil Engineers landmark.

Height of focal plane: 85 feet. Working navigational aid with a distinctive 1-4-3 flash cycle visible within 15 miles and a fog signal horn.

Property is an American Society of Civil Engineers landmark. In 2007, a memorial plaque honoring the two keepers who perished in 1851 was dedicated and lowered onto the seabed floor. The keeper's quarters, fog bell and a replica of the lantern room may be viewed at Government Island in Cohasset.

Aid to Navigation (ATON): ATON will remain the personal property of the United States Coast Guard (USCG). Converted to solar power in 1983, the Property is an active, automated ATON.

Rights to be retained by the United States Coast Guard:

4) A right benefiting the USCG to utilize the fog signal horn at any time and in any manner it deems necessary.

Environmental Information: Due to the age of the structure, asbestos containing materials and lead-based paint may be present.

Submerged Lands: Under the NHLPA, no submerged lands can be conveyed. The selected steward must obtain a lease or easement from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to occupy the submerged lands.

Are you ready for some football?

Skippers back on practice field

For the first couple of days, football practice is all about learning and conditioning.

That was how it was for the Cohasset football team since Monday's official first practice.

"It's good to be back," Cohasset assistant coach Brian Patterson said. "The kids are excited to be back. We're working hard for preparation of full pads."

Part of that preparation was running and conditioning on Wednesday.

Thursday, the pads were on.

Patterson said the team was ready for that next step.

"These kids worked their butts off in the weight room," he said. "They've dedicated themselves as one to the success of the team."

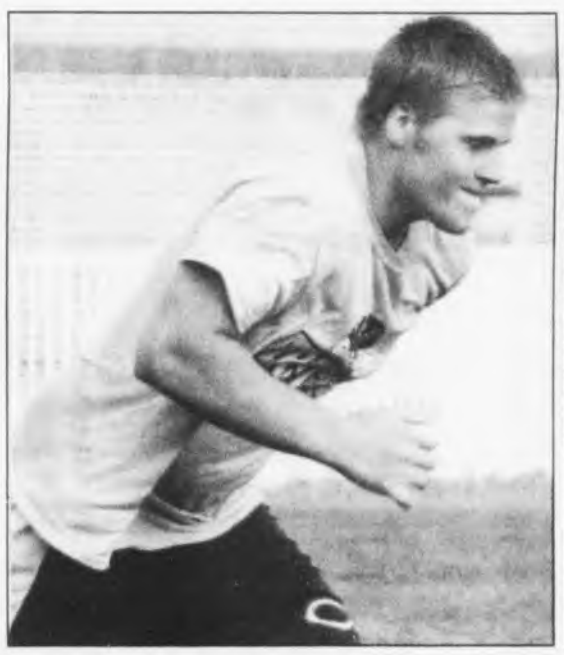
It doesn't hurt that most of the players on the Skippers play more than one sport.

"These kids play a lot of everything," Patterson confirmed. "Most of these kids are three-sport athletes."

After a successful 2008 campaign, Cohasset is looking for another and in the early going, the signs are good.

After a successful 2008 campaign, Cohasset is looking for another and in the early going, the signs are good.

"We've got 63 kids," Patterson said. "That's the most we've had in ten years."



Cohasset finished 7-4 last season and will be looking for their seventh winning season in eight years.

The Skippers will open on the road at Quincy Veterans Memorial Stadium on Sept. 11 and then has a tiff at Hingham, Sept 18 at 4 p.m.

The home opener is scheduled for Sept. 25 on the new turf against Scituate at 7 p.m.

Back to work

WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Cohasset teams are back to the fields this week, with official practices beginning yesterday.

While football had an earlier start on Monday for three days of conditioning, everyone else had their starts on Thursday, including an 8 a.m. practice for the boys soccer team.

Teams have a bit of time to prepare.

Most teams begin play the second week of Sept.

The field hockey team is next when they host Carver on Sept. 8 at 3:30 p.m.

The boys soccer team will also be playing Sept. 8 with a visit to Scituate at 6:30 p.m.

The home opener is Sept. 10 at 4 p.m. with a game against Harwich.

There have been some changes in the early going in locations.

While teams get ready for the new turf field, which is expected to be ready Sept. 25, they'll play in different spots.

The field hockey will be at Deer Hill and the soccer teams will play at Milliken Field.

The golf team plays at Cohasset Country Club, and cross country runs at Wheelright Park.

They'll host Braintree Sept. 11 at 3:30 p.m.

Labor Day golf can be 'patriotic'

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

When Keven Joyce of Plymouth saw the public service announcements for Patriot Golf Day while watching golf on television, he knew he had to get involved.

Joyce, an ex-Marine grunt who earned the Purple Heart and other commendations during the Vietnam War, was gung ho. He knows first hand how important it is to help returning veterans.

"This isn't for World War II, Korean or Vietnam vets," said Joyce. "It's for those guys coming back from Iraq today. They need help and I want to be part of it."

The Patriot Golf Day program will be held during Labor Day weekend, from Sept. 4-7 at more than 4,000 golf courses across America.

Golfers will be asked to donate a minimum of $1 (in addition to their green fees) at designated golf courses across America.

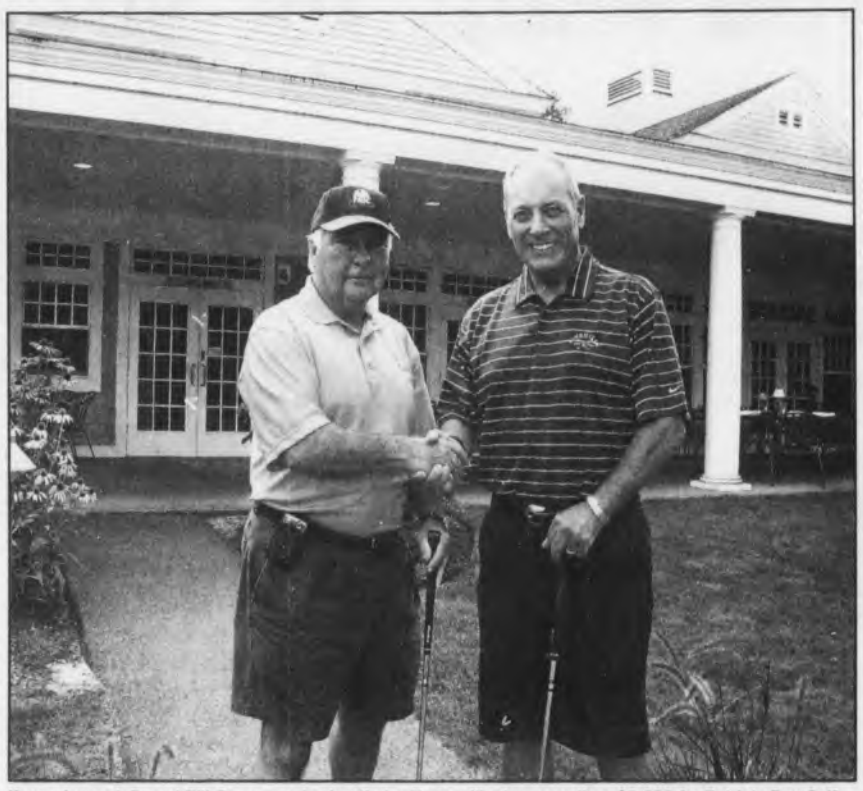
Money raised provides post-secondary educational scholarships to the spouses and children of service members disabled or killed as the result of their military service.

"When I first inquired, there were no courses in southeastern Massachusetts involved," said Joyce.

He went to Pinehills, his home course, and presented the idea to them.

John Tuffin, the director of golf at Pinehills, saw the promise in the program and designated the five-star upscale public facility as a Patriot Golf Day course. There will be signage at the course during the weekend asking golfers to participate to the program.

Since Pinehills signed on, there has been a ground swell of support for the program. In a matter of days, other courses in the region have been designated as Patriot Golf Day venues.



Joyce, who holds a twilight permit at Pinehills, started things off by donating $100 instead of the $1, and e-mailed the challenge to his golfing buddies. Soon, other members of his group matched his donation and some even doubled his donation.

Joyce's story is similar to how this truly grass-roots movement began three years ago.

Oklahoman Dan Rooney, a PGA golf professional and golf course owner as well as an Air National Guard fighter pilot and Iraq War veteran, was on a commercial flight three years ago.

The flight also carried the body of an Army corporal killed in Iraq.

Having served two tours of duty in Iraq, he wasn't prepared for the emotional impact that day watching from his window seat as the coffin was unloaded from the plane.

Rooney wanted to do something.

He knew golf and how to run tournaments and realized that golf could make a difference.

So he and his father, promoted a tournament that raised $8,000.

It has blossomed in just three years. Last year he began Patriot Golf Day, raising $1.1 million, with all proceeds benefiting the Folds of Honor Foundation.

This year he expects to raise much more. One club in Dallas, Royal Oaks, for example, has already collected $26,000. TaylorMade has donated 3,000 special-edition r7 drivers for silent auctions.

The drivers alone may bring in $1 million.

Golf and the military have long been associated.

Heck, Tiger Woods grew up playing on a Navy course in California. Orville Moody, a career Army sergeant, somehow won the 1969 U.S. Open, for his only Tour victory. Arnold Palmer's famous "army" of fans got its name at the 1958 Masters, when soldiers from a nearby base swarmed around him as he won his first major.

Some 4,000 courses nationwide will be collecting donations to provide scholarships for the children and spouses of military personnel killed or disabled in the line of duty.

Besides Pinehills, Strawberry Valley in Abington, Braintree Municipal, Halifax Country Club, LeBaron Hills in Lakeville, Rockland Golf Course, Scituate Country Club and Easton Country Club have already registered.

"If you're club hasn't registered, it's very easy. They can sign-up on line at the Patriots Day Web site," said Joyce.

The Web site for the program is www.patriotgolfday.com

He just keeps rolling along

One of the South Shore's Good Guys qualified for the State Mid-Amateur Championship last week at South Shore Country Club.

His is Bob Bradley of Hanover, who some say has been playing competitive golf in the region just about since the days

Tee to Green

Donald Ross was building golf courses.

No, that's a lie. He's only 62.

A retired Boston schoolteacher, Bradley fashioned a 74 at South Shore in the morning and then returned to his stomping grounds, Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton, to play more golf.

At the Mid-Am qualifier in Hingham, he was the oldest competitor. Most of his competitors were 30 years younger than Bradley.

"Everybody's younger than me now," Bradley told reporters. It's nothing new. He was the oldest qualifier at this summer's State Amateur at The Country Club as well.

Bradley is a two-time Mid-Amateur champion, winning this tournament in 1989 and 1996.

He had a mixture of feelings when he won in 1989.

He pleaded with newspaper reporters not to write about him because he called in sick so he could play that day and was afraid his superiors would read about it in the paper.

Locke and load

Penny Locke, for many years one of the top players in the region, earned another trophy for her mantle last weekend. The South Shore golfer captured the annual Norfolk Country Classic, shooting a 1-over par 72 last Saturday. Locke finished one shot better than Elaine Joyce and Jillian Nery. In the Division 2 competition, Marian Conroy finished first with an 84 gross score, one better than Kim McDowell. Patty Boutillier won the net competition with a 54.

Presidential in many ways

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Everyone who drives up the Southeast Expressway to Boston sees Presidents Golf Course as they hit the city limits.

PRESIDENTS GOLF COURSE

When we were on the lobster shift in Boston years ago, we'd leave work around sunrise and head to Presidents Golf Course for quick 18. We were the first ones out and we'd be done by 9 a.m.

We would go into the 19th hole and open a can of beer.

Morning golfers couldn't believe someone was having a beer that early in the day. They didn't realize that after the beer, it was time to go home and sleep. It was our evening.

Presidents Golf Course is unique is so many ways.

First, it is one of the very few courses in New England designed by George and Tom Fazio, two world-class golf architects whose best work is in the Sunbelt states. Among the courses built by Tom Fazio are Kiawah Island, site of the Ryder Cup, and Wild Dunes on the Carolina coast.

Second, it is one of the shortest regulation courses you will ever play.

This par-70 stretches to 5,745 yards from the tips, but nobody ever beats it up.

Some of the best have tried. Two-time State Amateur champion Steve Tasho, former State Open champions Andy Morse and Fran Quinn played for several years in the Norfolk Classic, but nobody killed this course.

The course record is only 63, set by the amiable Joe Carr, who has probably played every course in New England where there is a tournament.

The Norfolk County Classic in mid-May brings some of the top amateurs in the region to Quincy. They also hold a Norfolk Country women's two-ball in June, a regional junior tournament in July for boys and for girls, last weekend was the Norfolk County Women's Class and in October they host the Norfolk County Two-Ball. All are quality events.

Although the course is only 32 years old, having opened in 1977, it has been the a golf course site from the earliest days of the game in New England. It was home of Wollaston Golf Club, which dates back to 1895.

In its heyday, the old Wolly was the epicenter of competitive golf.

Francis Ouimet used the course for his practice rounds prior to competing in the British Open and British Amateurs. He found the wind conditions and the wide variety of topography well suited for the preparation needed to compete overseas.

In the early 1970s the members of the Wollaston Golf Club decided they wanted to expand – Presidents is situated on just 93 acres – so they constructed their new championship course in Milton in the foothills of the Blue Hill Reservation.

With the aid of a grant from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, Norfolk County rebuilt the course and it reopened as Presidents Golf Course at the Wollaston Recreational Facility.

What makes Presidents attractive as a golf venue is the location, minutes off the Expressway, just a few miles from downtown Boston.

Until the creation of Quarry Hills, Presidents offered the most dramatic views of the Boston skyline, Neponset River, and the Blue Hills Reservation. It is still a magnificent view.

The hilly terrain, and the influence of the Atlantic Ocean breezes give the course a unique character that provides an interesting golfing experience.

Marshfield Fair gets rolling

First day brings hot weather

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

It was about 2 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 21, and Craig and Leah Thrall of Plymouth had just about enough leisure activity for one day.

About 90 minutes after they first arrived at the Marshfield Fair, the Thralls were heading back to their car at a nearby $5 lot.

It may have been the fair's 142nd grand opening, but the fact that the couple's 1-year-old daughter Alyssa was with them seemed to have limited the family's afternoon time at the grounds.

"We would stay longer if it wasn't so hot," said Leah as her husband fastened their daughter into her car seat. "It was a good size, though. They have enough going on without getting overwhelmed."

Leah said that while she and Craig loved the 4H animals, the fair's "bear and wolf show" was "inappropriate for family viewing."

"Wild animals are not meant for entertainment," she said. "Wolves and bears are meant for the woods."

A brief walk from the parking lot and into the fair's front gate revealed, despite the heat, a steady afternoon crowd. Many people were waiting in light to moderate lines for rides.

"The opening Friday was a little better from last year," said Carlton Chandler, director of the Marshfield Agricultural Society and secretary/treasurer of the fair. "Especially because last year we had thunderstorms."

But from Friday through Sunday, he said the numbers — which had not officially been compiled — had most likely averaged out and were "on par with last year's figures."

Just to the left of the fair's front entrance sat Brian Connelly, a 25-year-old who was on hand with several other members of his family. Connelly's family was right on time for the start of a midday wild animal show.

"We've been kind of carting along together," said Brian, who was sitting on a section of the bleachers in front of his uncle, nephew, cousin and father.

While Brian had already enjoyed a few rides and couple of eight-ounce Coors Lights, he had yet to take part in any of the fair's cuisine.

"It's too hot to eat," he said. "I've just had water and beer."

Just prior to two trainers introducing several wild animals behind a section of metal bars, Brian gazed straight ahead into the cage of a black bear.

"I think this is kind of fun," he said. "You might as well do something with them. The black bear is overpopulating Massachusetts."

The bear's trainer, a man who introduced himself as Michael, then kicked off the show by welcoming the crowd of about 20 to the "Wild Animals of America" show.

"These animals are rescued from a lack of habitat," he said as an instrumental soundtrack, which was almost reminiscent of an old Disney film, played in the background.

Along with introducing Joey the mountain lion, who performed a series of agility tricks or "natural cat-like behaviors," Michael and his wife, who he introduced as Sharon, brought out a pair of American timber wolves to do much of the same.

But the highlight of the 15-minute show was when the duo introduced Benny the black bear. Michael narrated, providing information on black bears, while Benny, proving he was quite capable and agile, participated in a series of tasks as prompted by Sharon. In one instance, Benny used his paws to snatch from midair a piece of wood that had been tossed toward him from several feet away.

"We believe God put these animals here for all of us to care for," said Michael. "America's black bears are having a hard time due to a lack of habitat."

Guests were invited to get much closer to all of the show's stars. For a donation of $1 per person, they were invited to walk past the animals in their cages, which were kept in the trailer behind the barred off performing area.

A ways down from the wild animal show were several vendors, including Mark Seaver, who was busy blending frozen fruit smoothies for hot and sweaty guests.

"It's just starting to pick up," he said as a group of teenage boys waited for their turn to order. "All the kids have been riding the rides for at least two hours."

Among those waiting under what little shade there was in front of the smoothie stand were Furnace Brook Middle School students Patrick Sheridan, 13; James Manning, 13; Kyle Marobella, 13; and Ryan Hatcher, 14.

"It's hot, but it's worth it," said Patrick. "We're just going to walk around and see what else there is to do. We'll stay until closing."

When another of the boys made a comment about the prospect of seeing some girls, James said he'd have that part of the day covered.

"We got them," he said. "I got game."

All the while, Kyle stood grinning next to his confident friend, shaking his head "no."

Farther along the midway, and as the sun grew more hot, Democratic state Rep. Jim Cantwell boarded the Arctic Blast with his son Christopher.

"I grew up in Marshfield, so this is like a rite of passage," he said. "It's bittersweet. You look forward to the fair every year, but then you know school is about to start."

Cantwell said they were squeezing a last bit of fun in before Christopher starts back up at Martinson Elementary School.

"It should really start picking up by about 5 (p.m.), he said. "The beach is the popular spot right now."

Under the shade of an overhang at a popcorn and cotton candy stand, Plymouth residents Anne Beaudoin and her mother Judith Prenda stood over Beaudoin's two young daughters, who were in turn sitting comfortably in their stroller.

"They're doing great," said Beaudoin of Abrielle, 3, and Emme, 4 months. "You just keep hydrating and enjoy what little shade there is."

Motioning toward Abrielle, Prenda, or "nana" as her daughter called her, said, "She sees something that catches her eye and we stop."

That "something" tended to be children's rides.

The Marshfield Fair continues until Sunday, Aug. 30. For information and to see the program, visit marshfieldfair.org.

SCHOOLS REPORT VETS jumping at GI Bill

By John Hilliard
DAILY NEWS STAFF

After nearly a decade of war, veterans of the nation's armed forces are being thanked with a new version of the GI Bill, which is offering up to 100 percent of the cost of public college or university in every state, and in a new move, allows service personnel to transfer credits to spouses and family members.

"This is not simply a debt that we are repaying to the remarkable men and women who have served – it is an investment in our own country ... The veterans who are here today ... can lead the way to a lasting economic recovery and become the glue that holds our communities together. They, too, can become the backbone of a growing American middle class," President Barack Obama said during a recent press conference.

The first GI Bill, signed by President Franklin Roosevelt in 1944, led 8 million veterans to attend college on the government's dime, including Obama's grandfather, as thanks for their service during World War II.

The revised program – aimed at those who joined the service since Sept. 11, 2001 – is expected to offer up $78 billion to veterans over the coming decade. This coming semester alone, officials expect about 485,000 veterans to claim GI Bill benefits.

The biggest change is allowing veterans to transfer their eligibility for the GI Bill to a spouse or a child, so long as veterans adhere to additional service requirements.

There are also other programs, such as the Yellow Ribbon Program, which offers matching grants for schools that cost more than the state cap.

Obama summarized the effort as "You pick the school, we'll help pick up the bill."

Within the state's public higher education system, the University of Massachusetts, as well as state colleges and community colleges, are anticipating a flood of returning veterans to enroll in their classes this fall.

A veteran with 90 days of service will get 40 percent of college costs covered by the GI Bill, and those who have served at least three years get 100 percent of their tuition, fees and many other expenses covered, up to their home state's cap. In Massachusetts, the GI Bill is capped at $17,787 per term, based on the most expensive public college tuition.

The CollegeBoard tracks average costs of college, and found that the average public college cost here is less than $8,200, versus more than $32,000 for the private institutions.

Melinda Stoops, dean of students at Framingham State College, said the institution is working to improve its tracking of students who are also members of the military. She said that professionals in higher education are looking at ways to better meet the needs of students who have also served in the military.

Melinda Stoops, dean of students at Framingham State College, said military veterans "... bring a level of maturity and achievement that you love to see in students." The college launched its Veteran and Servicemember Resource Center to better meet the needs of students who are veterans or active duty members of the military.

"They bring a lot to the table ... they bring a level of maturity and achievement that you love to see in students," said Stoops of service personnel enrolled in classes.

The college launched its Veteran and Servicemember Resource Center to better meet the needs of students who are veterans or active duty members of the military. They also work to hire service members to assist with students who are themselves members of the military.

"We definitely feel committed to working with this population and maximizing their (college) experience in a positive way," said Stoops.

Stephen Sullivan, the vice president of enrollment and student services at Worcester's Quinsigamond Community College, said they estimate a 3 percent to 7 percent hike in enrollment for veterans this coming year, part of an overall 20 percent increase in enrollment.

To accommodate veterans – who need a certificate of eligibility from the Department of Veterans Affairs to use the GI Bill – the school will allow veterans to enroll in classes if they apply for that documentation, Sullivan said.

Quinsigamond is also looking at expanding its veteran services on campus, so the institution can better meet the needs of the veterans who are expected to join the school's student ranks.

At the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, Eileen Stewart, the associate dean of students, said 300 vets are coming to the campus through the GI Bill, and three or four undergrad students are in school there because of the transfer of credits option.

One program, the university's master's in public health, has seen an increase in the number of service personnel who are taking classes online while on active duty through the GI Bill. MaryBeth Lizek, program coordinator for the university's School of Public Health and Health Services, said about 20 to 25 active-duty personnel are now in the program in areas as far away as Iceland and Japan.

Since 2007, 40 students who have graduated from the health school's online program are members of the military or the U.S. Public Health Service Commissioned Corps, which sends medical and health staff to work in isolated parts of the U.S. and responds to natural or man-made disasters, she said.

"We're just starting to do some more marketing in the military, because they're some of our best students," said Lizek.

Retirees boost brains, find friends at college

By Cassaundra Baber
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

MARCY, N.Y. – Susan Tice, who will turn 60 in less than two months, is ready to start "brand new."

"You should not look at it as an end of your life, but a new beginning," Tice said of her looming milestone.

For Tice, a predominant part of that new beginning involves taking classes through Mohawk Valley Institute for Learning in Retirement at the State University of New York Institute of Technology.

The program offers three semesters of non-credit courses geared toward retirees. Topics range from the Islamic concept of God to the samurai films of Akira Kurosawa to snowshoeing.

"We have a lot of seniors in our community and a lot of boomers who are retiring," Program Director Ginger Parker said. "It's so easy to fall into habits when you're retired, and this is really a way to keeping our minds stimulated."

Retirement learning programs are vital to communities, said Kali Lightfoot, executive director at the National Resource Center for the Osher Lifetime Learning Institute in Southern Maine.

"There is a number of continuing and emerging research that says using your brain to learn new concepts, particularly things that are novel and complex, create new pathways in the brain and protect against Alzheimer's and dementia," Lightfoot said.

The social benefits are equally important, Lightfoot added.

Because retirees often move to warmer climates or areas to be closer to their families, they lose their social circles, she said.

Lifetime learning institutes provide new friendships, thus enriching their lives, she said.

The classes are popular at the Masonic Care Community, which brings about 10 to 12 residents by bus to attend one or all of the 10 classes offered Mondays, said Laura Joseph, community life leader at Masonic Care Community.

One of them, 80-year-old resident Erica Tollerton, attends not only to learn new things, but to also revisit history.

"It's a great opportunity to learn something new or to go back to something you already knew and just kind of experience it over again," said Tollerton, who currently is taking "Four Giants of the Mid-Twentieth Century," a course that explores Winston Churchill, Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt and Harry Truman.

"All of us are at the age where we remember these people and times very personally," she said.

A Utica native, Tollerton spent 20 years working at Acme Press, a printing company that has since closed.

She never earned her college degree, but always had a hunger for learning and took various courses at local colleges, she said.

At 80, that hunger still rumbles, and she's been able to satisfy it with the program's courses in piano, Broadway musicals, history, arts and literature.

Program facilitator Terence Kehoe said the benefits are not limited to seniors and retirees, but extend to instructors, too.

Kehoe is an adjunct instructor of mathematics at SUNYIT, but his passion lies in history – specifically the life of Abraham Lincoln. The class he facilitates allows him to share that interest.

"You find when you teach a class like this, in that class there also is an interest and they have quite a bit to contribute, as well," Kehoe said. "It's not just a one-way street."

Mass. college loans still available

MEFA urges parents, students: Even at last minute, borrow smart

BOSTON – As the fall semester approaches, the state's college loan program has funding available to help Massachusetts parents and students – including adult learners – making last-minute payments. MEFA, a not-for-profit college lender, offers affordable, fixed interest rate loans and fast application processing.

The MEFA Undergraduate Loan has a 7.75 percent fixed interest rate, one of the lowest rates available. The MEFA Loan offers a predictable and stable monthly payment of $99.65 per $10,000 borrowed. All qualified MEFA borrowers receive the same low interest rate, compared to many loans that give the lowest interest rates to only customers with the highest credit scores. MEFA also has loans available for graduate students with an interest rate of 8.89 percent.

To qualify for a MEFA Loan, the students – whether recent high school graduates or adult learners – must be enrolled at least half-time in a degree-granting program at a nonprofit college or university. The student must either be a Massachusetts resident or must attend a Massachusetts college or university.

"The availability of low-interest, fixed-rate education loans is one of the benefits of living in or attending college in Massachusetts. MEFA's mission is to assist families with college financing, and we do that by educating parents and students on payment strategies and by offering college loans with extremely competitive rates," said Thomas Graf, executive director of MEFA.

MEFA's college financing specialists offer free, trustworthy advice to guide families and are available toll-free at 1-800-449-MEFA, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. EST. To apply online, visit www.mefa.org/backtoschool.

MEFA is a not-for-profit self-financing state authority, not reliant on state or federal appropriation, that works to make higher education more accessible and affordable for students and families in Massachusetts. Nearly 30 years ago, MEFA was created by the state Legislature at the request of Massachusetts colleges and universities. MEFA provides community education programs, college savings plans, and low-cost financing options. In its nearly 30-year history, MEFA has issued approximately $3.8 billion in bonds and has assisted hundreds of thousands of families in financing a college education.

This advertorial was written by the college financing experts at MEFA, the commonwealth's not-for-profit authority dedicated to educating Massachusetts families about strategies to access higher education. If you have questions, comments or suggestions, please email info@mefa.org.

Colleges scope out students' Web pages

Colleges are increasingly using Facebook, MySpace and YouTube, just like so many students applying for admission, but the schools often use them for different reasons – to check those students' backgrounds and reach out to them with video lectures.

Admissions offices are increasingly using social media sites to find out more about applicants for scholarships or exclusive programs, according to a national University of Massachusetts Dartmouth study.

The use of such online networking sites rose by one quarter from the previous study in 2007, which included 453 colleges, the study said. More than half of admissions offices said social media is "very important" to admissions strategies.

In about one year's time, colleges have become more familiar with sites like Facebook and MySpace, and are now using YouTube to give prospective students an idea of what their lectures are like or give tours of campus and dorms. About 40 percent of college admissions offices have a blog, and of the remainder, another 40 percent plan to start one.

The increasing use shows admissions departments' "recognition of the increasing importance of social media in today's world," the report following the study said. "We found that colleges and universities are out in front," said Nora Ganim Barnes, chancellor professor of the University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth's Center for Marketing Research.

But even many colleges are not using Web technology as well as they could, she said. Only half of colleges said people could subscribe by e-mail or RSS feed to their Web sites, for example, and 80 percent said their blogs were successful even though about 30 percent didn't allow readers to comment, Barnes said.

In the study, 23 percent of colleges said they use search engines to research potential students, and 17 percent use sites like Facebook or MySpace. But admissions offices at Bristol Community College and UMass Dartmouth are not among them.

"Probably because we're more about access" than exclusivity, said David Tracy, BCC's associate vice president for enrollment services. Tracy added that he could "kind of see the relevance" for selective colleges to check on what prospective students might be like outside of their application.

"Basically, we do not examine people's social networking sites," said John Hoey, UMass Dartmouth's spokesman. "The things we really care about are school records and academic records and activities."

Both schools are using the Internet to reach out to potential students in other ways though, they said. BCC has its own Facebook page, and UMass Dartmouth is working on one. UMass Dartmouth also has its own admissions blog and online video lectures from professors. "We understand it's important to connect with potential students where they are, online."

BCC's new strategic plan included research of what students and faculty felt needed to be improved, and one was wanting to feel a better connection to one another, said Sally Cameron, who co-chaired the strategic planning committee. Four-fifths of current students said they wanted to be contacted by the college through Facebook, she said.

"Social networking sites allow us to communicate with people that are interested in us," Cameron said.

It is clear, the study said, that "online behavior can have important consequences for young people and that social networking sites can, and will, be utilized by others to make decisions about them." But colleges don't see checking up on prospective students as an invasion of privacy.

"They're protecting themselves," Barnes said. "No school wants to announce the winner of a prestigious scholarship only to have compromising pictures be discovered on the Internet the next day," the study said.

Besides, Barnes added, prospective college students can turn their personal Facebook or MySpace pages into ways to sell themselves to admissions offices. "Use it to your advantage," she said.

The study also found that 54 percent of colleges monitor what's being said about them online, a figure that Barnes said should be far higher. "Everyone should be doing that." In addition, private schools were far more likely than public schools – 72 percent compared to 28 percent – to have blogs, and colleges with enrollments under 2,000 were more likely than larger schools to use them.
